CONFIDENCE

in the superiority of the "Oxford" editions leads the publishers to make the following announcement and simple request.

"OXFORD" INDIA PAPER

The India Paper used for the "Oxford" Thin Editions of Bibles and Prayer Books is a specialty of the "Oxford" University Press, and is used exclusively for "Oxford" Books. Its characteristics are extreme opacity, great toughness and softness, and an agreeable tone. The strength and flexibility of the fibre is so great that the paper may be used for years without becoming injured by wear; and the material is so opaque that it can be made to a degree of thinces only limited by the possibilities of printing. In the case of some editions a ream of this paper-four hundred and eighty sheets, each sheet measuring 17½x22½ inches—weighs only seem pounds, and yet this paper is beautifully soft to the touch, strong enough to bear a great strain and of such opacity that the impression on one side does not show through when the other side is being read. The "Oxford" India Paper has been manufactured in order to meet the popular demand for thin books, and is admitted to be without a rival.

Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons ask the trade to carefully examine any so-called "Inda" Paper Editions from presses other than the Oxford before placing orders.

UNIFORM WITH "TALKS WITH YOUNG MEN."

NOW READY.

A Year's Sermons and Par bles for the Young. By the Rev. J. REED HOWATT. 12mo, illuminated cloth, $1.25.

"It may be alleged that some things in these pages might cause the children to smile. I admit it; may, I do more: I confess I have frequently seen the smile already! But I have yet to learn that dulne s is a merit, or that children are more attricted if the counten once be sombre and the voice a little sepulchral. It recognizes the special right of the young to joyousness and sunshine."—From Author's Preface. NOW READY.

Fight; or, More than Conquerors. The Good

Stories of Christian Martyrs and Heroes. By the Rev. J. Hunt, D.D., and others. With numerous Illustrations by F. Dadd, E. F. Brewtnall, F. Barnard, F. A. Fraser, J. McL. Ralston, etc. Handsomely bound, cloth, full gilt, crown 4to, $3.00.

"We have here stories of Christian martyrs and heroes, told with much vivacity. The illustrations include the names of Frank Dadd, E. F. Brewtnall, and F. Barnard; and some of them at least have been engraved by Dalziel. The whole, printed large within red borders and with elegant initial letters, makes up one of the handsomest volumes we have received this winter."—Academy.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

SEPTEMBER 25, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

"CHEAP" LITERATURE.

PUBLISHERS of cheap literature—so-calledhave finally come to the conclusion-so we hear it reported—that it does not pay. Of course it does not pay, and, what is more, as it is managed at present it will never pay any one. We are in favor of low-priced books, and believe that America will always lead in this direction, because Americans are a book-buying nation; but he who thinks that literature is cheap because he publishes or because he can get a quarto, twelvemo, or sixteenmo book printed in illegible type, on flimsy paper, and indifferently put up in paper covers-in the making of which, in one word, every requisite of good book-making is disregarded-for from ten to twenty cents, is mistaken, if ever a man was. Such work does not pay the publisher for the trouble of getting it into the market; booksellers handle it under protest; and the public buys it-with a mental reservation.

What is wanted is an honest book, honestly made. If the book be by a living writer, whether native or foreign, remuneration for his work should be, of course, the first great sine qua non. If the work be one on which copyright has expired, care should be taken in the selection of the text. That should be well edited by an authority on the subject, if possible. In every case the type should be legible, carefully and correctly set, printed in good ink on substantial paper, and the whole neatly and durably bound in cloth. Such a book, which may be made to sell anywhere from 50 cents to $1.25, will yield a profit to all who are engaged in its manufacture and sale, and will really prove cheaper in the end to the purchaser. Speemann and Cotta, of Stuttgart, and the Bibliographische Institut and Freytag, of Leiprig, have already done excellent work in this direction—and for that matter, so have a number of our leading houses. Why lower the standard!

And then there is a motive which in the end will not prove merely a sentimental one, that should be borne in mind-the education of the taste of the people. The reading public does appreciate a well-made book, notwithstanding the assertion by one of our contemporaries to the contrary. And, what is more, they will buy the better book when it is to be had. We have in mind an encyclopædia published not many years ago. We all remember it-small sirteenmo, printed in infinitesimal type on poor paper and slovenly bound in cloth. It sold for a song. Booksellers kept a set of it on handnot to sell, if they could help it, but to convince a possible customer by comparing it with a better, though more expensive edition, that the "cheap" book was not the one they wanted And they succeeded in the majority of cases in selling the better book.

Of course we do not deny that there is a class of people—and unfortunately the class is large—who buy books very much as they buy pinchbeck jewelry and plated ware, because they like a good deal of show for their money. But these are not to be counted upon, and those who have been catering to this class of people have had a precarious living at the best.

We are speaking of the average book buyer, and feel convinced that he will never hesitate to pay the difference of fifty cents, or even more, for a book that he can keep. And what a gain this is, not only to the public, but to the publisher! A man who has bought one book will have another—for there is nothing so infectious as book buying—and in time he will learn to love and buy better and more expensive editions.

The old plan has been tried and accounted a failure. The quartos paid for awhile, and then they became unprofitable. Then the pocketable libraries came into use—and have they paid anybody? And we are satisfied that the cheaper series, since introduced, are nothing more than philanthropic ventures. In other words, we have been going downward, until we have reached the bottom and found it did not pay. Now let us try the upward movement!

THE book and stationery trades have thus far contributed directly to the relief of the Charleston sufferers contributions amounting to $1705. The money is being distributed by the Stationers' Board of Trade, which is ready to receive further contributions.

COPYRIGHT IN ILLUSTRATIONS.

From advance proof of Harper's Weekly.

JUDGE WALLACE, of the United States Circuit Court, has just rendered a decision upon an interesting and important point of the law of copyright. The case was that of Harper against Shoppell. The defendant had made an electrotype copy of an engraving that appeared in Harper's Weekly, the Weekly being copyrighted, and had sold his plate, which was afterward published in another periodical. Judge Wallace, after a full presentation of the facts, decides that, under the circumstances of the case, the defendant is liable in damages as a joint wrongdoer with the publisher of the periodical in which the reproduced engraving appeared.

The point involved was whether the copyright of a "book," as such, protects the engravings published in the same. This point has never come directly before the courts in this country, and Judge Wallace's decision establishes here the English rule, which, as stated by Judge Jessell, is that "a book must include every part of the book; it must include every print, design, or engraving which forms part of the book, as well as the letter-press therein, which forms another part of it."

THE ENGLISH INTERNATIONAL COPY-RIGHT ACT, 1886.

From the Evening Post, Sept. 9.

THE text of the "Act to amend the law respecting international and colonial copyright, as passed by Parliament on June 25, 1886, is printed in the "Law Reports' (Statutes, vol. xxii., part 1, for August 2, 1886, pages 78-84). This act was passed principally to enable Great Britain to become a party to the literary-property treaty which it is proposed to negotiate at Berne during this month; but, as may be inferred from its title, it is also a general act framed so as to be applicable to possible treaties with countries outside of the Union-the United States, for instance—and legislates, as well, in behalf of the British Colonies. The proposed convention for the creation of an International Union for the protection of literary and artistic works contains stipulations which England could not subscribe to until the international copyright statutes hitherto in force had been amended. Thus, the fifth article of convention grants to authors or their legal representatives the exclusive right of making or authorizing the translation of their works, until the expiration of ten years from the last day of the year in which the original work was first published in one of the countries of the Union. The ninth article extends this ten years' term of protection to dramatic compositions, prohibiting the unauthorized publication and public representation of translations of dramas or operas; whereas, by the existing law (the Act of 1852, as modified by the Act of 1875) authorized translations of foreign books or dramas were secured to the authors from piracy in the United Kingdom for no longer than five years. Furthermore, the five years' protection was secured only after the accomplishment of burdensome stipulations as to registration and deposit of copies; while by the eleventh article of the proposed convention it is held sufficient, in order to secure protection for any original work or translation, that the name of the author appears upon it in the accustomed manner, the respective tribunals being authorized, however, to require, should they deem it necessary, the production of a certificate from the competent authority, to the effect that the formalities prescribed by law in order to secure protection in the country of origin have been carried out. It is necessary to construe the new act in connection with the former international copyright statutes of 1844, 1852, and 1875; sections 14, 17, and 18 of the first of these acts, and sections I to 5, 8, and II of the act of 1852 being repealed, while the unrepealed parts of these two acts and the Act of 1875 (which simply modifies section 6 of the law of 1852) remain in force.

The most important provision of this act is that relating to translations, it being enacted that the author or publisher of a book or dramatic piece, first produced in a foreign country, to which an Order in Council granting international copyright applies, shall have the same right of preventing the production in and importation into the United Kingdom of any translation not authorized by him of the said work as he has of preventing the production and importation of the original work. But if, at the expiration of ten years (or any term prescribed in the order) from the beginning of the year next after that in which the original work was first produced, an authorized translation in the English language has not been issued, the prohibiting right shall cease. The law relating to copyright, including this act, shall apply to a lawful translation in like manner as if it were an original work. And when an order is made under the international copyright acts, the provisions with respect to registry and delivery of copies shall not apply except so far as provided by the order before making which the Queen shall be satisfied that the foreign country has made such provisions as appear expedient to be required for the protection of authors of works first published in the United Kingdom. Further, section 7 of the act provides that where it is necessary to prove the proprietorship of the copyright, an abstract from a register, or a certificate or other document, stating the existence of the copyright, if authenticated by the official seal of a minister of State of the foreign country, or by the official seal or the signature of a diplomatic or consular officer, acting in such country, shall be admitted in evidence without proof. And to meet the requirements of the proposed convention, it is enacted that the Order in Council may provide for determining the country in which a literary or artistic work, produced simultaneously in two or more countries, is to be deemed, for the purposes of copyright, to have been first produced; and that when a work produced simultaneously in England and one or more foreign countries is deemed to be first produced in one of the foreign countries, the copyright in the United Kingdom shall be "such only as exists by virtue of protection in the said foreign country, and shall not be such as would have been acquired if the work had been first produced in the United Kingdom.

As regards simultaneous publication in several countries, the articles of convention propose that the one in which the shortest term of protection is granted by law, is to be considered the country of origin. The order may extend to several foreign countries, instead of to one as usual, and it may exclude or limit the rights conferred by the international copyright acts in the case of authors who are not subjects or citizens of the foreign country named in the order. If any such author is not a citizen of Great Britain, the publisher is to be deemed entitled to such copyright as if he were the author (to agree with article 3 of the proposed convention), though this enactment is not to prejudice the rights of author and publisher as between themselves. The sixth section of the present act provides (in agreement with article 14 and stipulation 4 of the final protocol of the proposed convention), that works first produced before the date at which the order comes into operation are also to be entitled to copyrights and remedies: "Provided that when any person has, before the date of the publication of an Order in Council, lawfully produced any work in the United Kingdom, nothing in this section shall diminish or prejudice any rights or interests arising from or in connection with such production which are subsisting and valuable at the said date."

The provisions of this act as regards the Colonies are important. The copyright acts as modified by the present act are made applicable to works first produced in a British possession in like manner as to works first produced in the United Kingdom; but the sections respecting the registry of copyright are not to apply if the law of such possession provides for registration, and no delivery of copies is required "to any persons or body of persons." Moreover, when a register of copyright in books is kept under the authority of the Government of a British possession, an extract from that register, certified as a true copy by the officer keeping it, and authenticated by the public seal of the British possession, or the seal or signature of the Governor, or a Colonial secretary or secretary or minister administering a department of the Government of a British possession, shall be admitted in evidence without further proof. case of conflict with acts now in force in British possessions, the Queen, by an Order in Council. may modify the copyright acts and the present act as seems expedient; and nothing in the copyright acts shall prevent the passing in a British possession of any act or ordinance respecting the copyright, within such possession. of works first produced there.

THE INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT TREATY.

A SPECIAL cable despatch to the N. Y. World, dated Berne, September 15, reports that the provisions of the Copyright Convention just signed there secure to authors of literary products and works of art in all countries attending the Convention the same protection and rights which each one enjoys in his own country. The rights of translation are secured to the author and his heirs for ten years from the day of the original publication.

Mr. Jamin Willsbro has written a poem on international copyright, on which he utters the following prophecy:

"The pirate and the publisher contend
In bitter strife that nears a novel end.
The publisher, to save himself from wreck,
And hold the pirate's sway in decent check,
Must sadly do as pirates gladly do—
Give up his trade and be a pirate too."

WHO WAS THOMAS BERCULA, TYPOGRAPHUS?

In the opening number of the Bibliographe, 1881, Mr. William Blades, in an interesting article on this hitherto unrecorded London printer (1520-25), asks the question, "Who was Becula?" The late Mr. Henry Stevens, who took a great interest in the early English printers, shortly afterward formed an opinion on the subject, and wrote out the following reply to Mr. Blades's, the Ms. of which was mislaid at the time, and only recently found by Mr. Henry M. Stevens.

Our friend Mr. William Blades, in his face-ous paper on "Thomas Bercula, Typogratious paper on phus," in a late in a late magazine, owns himself baffled and haunted by the name of this unrecorded and unknown early London printer. If Mr. Blades, with his abundant knowledge of early English printing and printers, will step back into the past (a thing he can do as easily as any other man living) a little more than three and a half centuries, and in Fleet Street enter the old printing house of Pynson under the sign of the George, he will probably find a simple solution of his self-irritant conundrum. While he has gone in there, let us outsiders at his expense isdulge in a little imaginary conversation carried on between that ancient and this modern master of printing.

MR. BLADES (entering with cap in hand and modestly approaching a reverend and veteran printer, seated on an old-fashioned and snug firmit settle, with proof-sheets before him). Morrow to thee, good Master Pynson. I greet thee well, and rejoice to see thee still able, and mindful in correcting and amending the faults of others, at the same time that thou art making comelie the pages that are unsightlie. I have come laden with a querie for thy solution and with it crave thy indulgence, and pray that thou will resolve it for me.

MASTER PYNSON (smiling through a labyrinih wrinkles in a countenance sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought). Right welcome art thou, my young Blade. If I am caught by the scoring the faults of others, thou well knowest that I am unmindful of mine own, which are legion. Thou hast ever the favor of neighbor Wynken and myself both, for that thou hast with painful reverence and industry recorded the life and worldly deeds of our old worthie Master Caxton. Mayest thou live to do the same, as far as truth and honor permit, to us his unworthie successors! And now, pray what is thy querie, my precocious? If it be any thing pertinent or pertingent to our Master William, I warrant thee either Wynken or thy humble servant will gladlie resolve it for thee, for we still mind him well and sweetlie.

BLADES. Thanks, most reverend friend. I confess that I am perplexed, and my mind is haunted with the name, new to me, of a printer in London who styles himself "Thomas Bertula, Typographus." Two editions, at least of Whitinton's "Vulgaria," 1520 and 1525 have manifestly seen the light from your presses, within the past quinquennial. With half an eye one may see that the printing is without a doubt Master Pynson's, and yet this norms home of a London printer writes of his books as printed "cum typis nostris." I own myself puzzled, good Master Pynson, for not to know Bercula, a living London printer who writes learned prefaces in a dead language, argues a professed expert in early English typography to labor with shortcomings in his knowledges. Pray do you know this hyperion or prodigy? And will you kindly tell me of him and his cirumjacent proclivities?

PYNSON. Aye, aye, my son well I know Bercula, and I chuckle within my shaking sides that thou before me ownest thyself a stranger to He is even now in the chapel at this moment, endeavoring some big achievement. Familiarly I call him my "Diminutive," in jocose contrast to his person, because of his Only yesternight at supper I was making merrie over his fap of renderin his diminutive into the vulgar Latin of Bercula. used to call him my Little Bertie, and now that he hath attained an altitude of nearly two ells he calls himself Bercula. I predict that he will outgrow this youthful pleasantrie and will ere long become a great man and a great printer under his own name of Thomas Berthelet. Will you bide awhile and sup with us?

This imaginary conversation had proceeded no further when Mr. Blades was observed under the George, his face all over smiles, taking leave of the venerable Pynson, with Bercula at his elbow, enjoying a broad grin.

POSTAL MATTERS.

CHANGES RELATING TO FOREIGN MAIL MAT-TER.

ARTICLES other than letters and postal cards, addressed for delivery in any foreign country embraced in the Universal Postal Union, which contain writing in the nature of personal correspondence, or which do not conform to all the conditions prescribed for such articles to entitle them to transmission in Postal Union mails at reduced rates of postage (see Notes 15 and 16 on page 772 and 773 of the Postal Guide for January of this year), are not allowed to be dispatched from the United States unless they are fully prepaid at the letter rate of postage—viz.: 5 cents per ½ oz. or fraction of ½ oz.

Where the rate of postage applicable to "newspapers" addressed to non-Union foreign countries differs from the rate applicable to "other printed matter" for those countries (see the "Foreign Postage Table," page 760 of the Guide for January of this year), the newspaper rate applies to all periodicals which are second-class matter in domestic mails.

Canada is the only foreign country to which periodicals from publishers for regular subscribers (second-class matter in domestic mails) may be sent at the bulk or pound rate of postage. Periodicals for all other foreign countries, whether "transient" or for regular subscribers, are required to be prepaid with postage stamps at the rate applicable to "newspapers" for those countries.

Electrotypes and cuts for advertising purposes are not transmissible by mail to any foreign country unless fully prepaid at the rate of postage applicable to letters for that country, and are not transmissible to Canada even though so prepaid.

Packets containing articles of printed matter (including chromo and lithograph cards, etc.) sent as samples, addressed to Canada, are required to be prepaid ten (10) cents per packet of eight (8) ounces or less, and are not allowed to be dispatched from this country unless so prepaid.

The limit of weight for a single rate of postage on letters for Canada is one ounce. On letters for other foreign countries, the limit of weight for a single rate is a half-ounce.

Packages of cancelled or uncancelled postage stamps, addressed to foreign countries, are subject to postage at letter rates.

Books and non-periodical publications which, to judge from their number, are not intended for the personal use of the persons to whom they are addressed, but are intended for sale, are liable to customs duties upon entering the United States of Columbia, and consequently are not transmissible by mail from the other countries of the Postal Union.

"Advertising circulars" are liable in Canada to a specific customs duty of one cent each, which duty Canadian customs officials are required to collect when such pamphlets arrive by mail in large quantities, even though each pamphlet bears a different address.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Boston.—Chas. F. Libbie & Co., book auctioneers, have removed from 27 Franklin St. to 608 Washington St., opposite the Park Theatre.
Boston.—A. Lovell & Co., of New York, have opened an office at 30 Franklin St., for the sale of their publications.
Mr. George B. Meleny is the agent in charge.

Brownwood, Tex.—Olenbush & Fogg, book-sellers, have dissolved partnership.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—In the recent earthquake the store of Messrs. Edward Perry & Co. was badily damaged, and the building of Walker, Evans & Cogswell also suffered.

CHATTANOGGA, TENN.—A. Burt & Co., booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

FORT COLLINS, COL.—S. E. Eddy & Co., booksellers and stationers, have sold out.

GREAT BEND, KAN.—J. N. Paine, bookseller, has sold out.

JACKSON, MICH.—Brown & Pilcher, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.: - Horace Drew, stationer, bookseller, and printer has associated with him his brother, William B. Drew. The firm is now H. Drew & Brother.

KALKASKA, MICH.—C. E. Ramsay, book-seller and stationer, has sold out.

KANSAS CITY. Mo.—Hanna & Mausell, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership-

ROCHESTER. N. Y.—E. Darrow has, we believe, effected a settlement with all but one of his creditors and expects shortly to resume business.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—John W. Roberts & Co. have enlarged their premises at 10 Post Street, and have added to their established business of advertising novelties and fine stationery a miscellaneous book department, to be under the management of Mr. H. R. Coleman, whose nineteen years' connection with the retail department of A. L. Bancroft & Co. was severed by the fire of April 30th last. They request publishers' catalogues.

SELMA, ALA.—Walter S. Butler, for some time with Rob. S. Wetmore, bookseller and stationer, has gone into business on his own account with Mr. Gatchell. The firm name is Butler & Gatchell. The new firm starts out with bright prospects, which we hope will be realized.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN WANAMAKER, Phila., will publish October 15 a new "Dickens Calendar" and a "Tennyson Calendar."

Four books, written by W. C. T. U. women, are now being published by the Women's Temperance Publication Association, all the stock of which is owned by white ribboners.

JOHN IRELAND, 1197 Broadway, N. Y., has nearly ready a neat little volume entitled "The Word for the Day," compiled by A. J. A. R., containing a text, hymn and prayer for every day in the year.

RUFUS C. HARTRANFT, Phila., have just published a volume of "Autograph Album Gems," containing over seven hundred verses adapted to Christmas, New Year, and birthdays; tokens of friendship and remembrance, comprising the gems of many languages, compiled and arranged by Margaret A. Rolfe.

LEA BROTHERS & Co., Philadelphia, have issued "A Household Manual of Medicine, Sur-gery, Nursing, and Hygiene," by Dr. Henry Hartshorne. The work is intended to enable the layman to take intelligent care of sudden cases of sickness and injury when, perhaps, no physician can be obtained, or to treat the lighter familiar ailments, especially among children, which are scarcely severe enough to necessitate a call from the doctor, yet which, if neglected, are likely to lead to severe complications, or to guard against all preventable causes of disease, and preserve the health of the family.

HENRY ALTEMUS, Philadelphia Bible Warehouse, is offering this season a larger variety than ever of new bindings, with rare effects in leather, of family and pulpit Bibles and photograph albums. Advance orders for his Oxford editions, with annotations, indicate that these lines are fast finding their way into popular favor. His fall catalogue has been largely increased, and presents a handsome appearance. It contains full descriptions of contents and bindings, with over fifty large illustrations. On request it will be forwarded to those of the trade whose names may have been inadverently omitted from their list.

A. J. HOLMAN & Sons. have added to their extensive lines of quarto bibles, English and German, now reaching over a hundred styles of type and binding (including their parallel editions of the old and revised editions), a number of new designs of bindings, among which are especially to be noted their new "basket" patterns and "cathedral gloss" in full leather, padded sides. These make a very handsome appearance, and the twenty new steel plates, added within the year past, and the combination of red edges and gilt which they have developed to compare favorably with the best English work, give them a strong hold on the market. They are also holding their own with their many staple lines of albums.

HUBBARD BROTHERS, Philadelphia, have just published the first volume of Ben Perley Poore's reminiscences, under the title of "Perley's Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis." This volume covers the very interesting period from the election of John Quincy Adams to the prelude to the Civil War, including the exciting times in which those giants. Clay, Webster, Everett, Jackson, Calhoun, Van Buren, Polk, Houston, Seward, Stevens, Douglass, Sumner, Davis, Lincoln, and a host of others flourished. The volume gives an insight into the private characters of the prominent men of the day, as far as is legitimate, and their social life, jealousies, rivalries, and peculiarities. The book is written in a cheery, chatty style, and wil, no doubt, be found entirely enjoyable. It cotains many portraits and illustrations. It is a subscription book.

Samuel Carson & Co., San Francisco, Cd. will publish in some suitable form a "History of the College of California," provided a sufcient number of subscriptions for the work can be secured to cover the cost of publication. It's now well-nigh twenty years since the College of California gave place to the University, to which it gave up its work, together with its site and much valuable property. Its history constitutes an important chapter in the general history of education in the State, and therefore, at the sugrestion of many friends, the Rev. Samuel H. Willey, who was Secretary of the Board of Trestees and Acting President of the College, has within the last year or two written it out in full He had at hand all the original records and documents, and together with his personal acquaintance with the affairs themselves was able to give the connected chain of events in a most authentic manner.

DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY OF THE FALL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE descriptive summary which here follows presents as usual, in its alphabetical arrangement by publishers, a survey of the entire field, so far as the necessary information is at hand. Other books, not yet fully determined upon, will find mention in subsequent issues. In our announcement lists proper, the books will be found arranged by classes, while the advertising pages will afford further detailed information as to prices, sizes, styles, etc.

THE ALDINE BOOK PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston, announce "The Ebers' Gallery," a collection of reproductions of paintings illustrating the romances of George Ebers, by the most celebrated artists of Germany, among whom are Herrmann Kaulbach, Otto Knille, Paul Thuman, Alma Tadema, and others. The plates are 12x17 inches. They also announce "The Globe Dictionary of the English Language," which they claim to contain over 100,000 words, edited and compiled by Hyde Clarke, from the dictionaries of Worcester, Webster, Walker, Johnson, Richardson, Murray, and Latham; a new edition of "A Nihilist Princess," from the French by L. Gagneur; and a handsomely illustrated volume for young children, entitled "Young America," edited by Frederick I. Davis.

THE AMERICAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY of Hebrew, Chicago, will issue shortly "An Arabic Manual," by Dr. J. G. Lansing. This is claimed to be the first Arabic grammar printed in America. While it is an elementary treatise, it is intended to be as complete as possible in every particular. The more special Arabic syntax has been left for a future work. The Cadman Pub. Co. has recently been merged into this society.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY announce a new edition of the "Dictionary of the Holy Bible," completely revised, re-set from new type, with new illustrations and fine maps in colors; three books descriptive of missionary fields, entitled "Scenes in Southern India," with sixteen illustrations, "Along River and Road in Fuh-Kien," illustrated, and "Jottings from the Pacific," with eight illustrations; also, two new booklets in the pretty Floral Gem Series. "Voices" and "Choices," gotten up with the same handsome paper, with colored pictures and silk tyings as the former volumes. In juveniles they will have "Foxwood Boys at School," a continuation of "Vacation Days at Froxwood;" "Fritz's Ranche," by Mrs. Raffensperger; and "Passion Flowers," by Rev. C. S. Hageman.

D. APPLETON & Co.. though they have in press a number of works, are not prepared, at the time of our going to press, to make definite announcements.

A. C. Armstrong & Son place at the head of their announcements an illustrated pocket edition of "Shakespeare's Dramatic Works and Poems, with Glossary and Life," by J. Talfourd Though there are many editions of Blair. Shakespeare, the publishers feel confident that there is a real want for one smaller in size and price than any which has as yet appeared, and will therefore aim to make this the smallest of The text is to be carefully edited, and will be illustrated with forty line block reproductions of Westall and others' well-known engravings. It will be in eight volumes, set up from a new font of nonpareil type, and beautifully printed by the Glasgow University Press, on thin, opaque paper specially made for this edition. "The Legendary History of the Cross" will be a treasure for the collector of the curious. It will be a series of nearly one hundred full-page woodcuts from a Dutch work published in 1483, with an introduction by John Ashton and a preface by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould. The work will be printed on paper made in Holland, and bound uniform with their edition of the "Biblia Pauperum," published a couple of years ago. "Poets in the Garden" will be a delightful collection, made by May Crommelin, of the finest descriptions of flowers that are to be found in our masters of song. It will be richly illustrated will full-page colored pictures of favorite flowers, and will form, in every respect, a most desirable acquisition for "How to Form a the drawing-room table. Library," by Henry B. Wheatley, is to be the first volume of a Book-lovers' Library, the object of which is to provide information, in condensed and accessible form, for those who are interested in the forming of libraries, whether those who propose creating a library for themselves, or desire to know something practically of the collection of books for other purposes. "A Budget of Letters from Japan" is a new work by Arthur C. Maclay, formerly instructor in the Imperial College of Engineers at Tokio, which has been pronounced by competent authorities to be a highly instructive work, replete with fresh information and vivid description of custom, thrilling incidents, historical facts, and magnificent scenery. "On Tuscan Hills and magnificent scenery. "On Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters," by Linda Villari, describes the beauties—natural and architectural—of Florence, Venice, and their neighborhood, with considerable "Ruskinere coloring." The volume will be illustrated with full-page engravings by Mrs. Arthur Lemon. They also announce a re-The volume issue of Hallam's complete works, in eight volumes, crown 8vo. In the department of religious literature they announce a work on "The Miraculous Elements in the Gospels." by Rev. Dr. A. B. Bruce, which is to form a companion volume to the author's well-known work on "The Parabolic Teachings of Christ," work characterized by learning, earnestness, and candor, and which will prove as useful to doubters as it will be acceptable to believers; "Light for the Last Days," by H. G. Guiness, in which are compared the predictions of Bible prophecy with the great facts of the history of the last twenty-five centuries; a new volume of the Clerical Library, entitled "Anecdotes of Old Testament Texts;" "The Churchette," a volume of sermons and parables for the young, by Rev. J. R. Howatt, uniform with "Talks with Young Men;" "The Good Fight, or, More than Conquerors," a collection of stories of Christian martyrs and heroes, by the Rev. Dr. John Hunt, with numerous illustrations; and a Golden Thought Series, three devotional books, neatly printed and bound, com-prising "Golden Thoughts from the Imitation of Christ," edited by Rev. T. M. Lindsay; "Give us this day our daily bread." thoughts on the Lord's Prayer, from the German of A. Stolz, with preface by Rev. A. Melville, and "Hours of Refreshing," from the German of Müller (1647–1660). For young people they will have "From Pole to Pole: a Tale of the Sea," by Gordon Stables, who has the rare gift of adding refinement of expression and a quick imagination to a perfect knowledge of the New World.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co. are planning to issue during the late fall two books of very great present interest—an exhaustive treatise on "Petroleum and its Products," by Benj. J. Crew, which will cover the ground more thoroughly than any existing work, and a monograph on "Aluminum, its History, Metallurgy and Alloys," by Joseph W. Richards, a recent graduate of Lehigh University. This metal is beginning to assume great commercial importance, and it may prove to be in comparison to iron what electricity is to gas, so that this pioneer volume, devoted especially to the one subject, may well be a landmark in industrial progress.

THE BALTIMORE PUB. Co. are about to publish a "Maryland Directory and State Gazetteer," which is to comprise a complete list of all the business men of every county in the State, no matter what their occupation, so long as they are engaged in an industrial pursuit, edited by John R. Bland, secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Baltimore.

LAWRENCE SLUTER BENSON, 25 Bond Street, New York City, announces that he will shortly publish two works of which he is also the author—viz.: "Geometry, Mensuration, and Trigonometry," a book for schools and colleges, designed to save time and labor to pupils, and to facilitate their practical mastery of mathematics, by clearly defined fundamentals, easy and reliable processes; and "Religious Belief in all Ages," a historical and analytical treatment, in compact form, of the doctrines of religion, from the remotest traditions to the present time, independent of sectarian bias.

Benziger Brothers will issue shortly "Glories of Divine Grace," translated from the German of Dr. M. Jos. Scheeben; "Great Means of Salvation and of Perfection," the third volume of St. Alphonsus' works; "Leben und Wirken des Hochw. P. Fr. Xav. Seelos, C.SS.R.;" and "Leitfaden der Kirchen-Geschichte für Katholische Volksschulen," a free translation of Bishop Gilmour's admirable "Compendium of Church History," which supplements his "Bible History." They have also in press a sixth edition of "Elements of Ecclesiastical Law," by Rev. S. B. Smith, D.D. It is completely revised according to the recent Third Plenary Council of Baltimore, and contains a full explanation of the new decrees, especially in regard to the new mode of electing bishops, the new consultors, the irremovable rectors, the Concursus, the changed form of trial in accordance with the latest instruction, Cum Magnopere, together with numerous other important changes and correc-The "Catholic Home Almanac" for 1887 and the "Catholic National New Fourth Reader " complete their announcements.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & Co.'s announcements for this fall comprise a number of new and valuable works, all of which will be found under the heading of Medical Science in our classified list preceding this department.

THE BOSTON SCHOOL SUPPLY Co. will issue this fall the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth "Natural History Readers," by Res. J. G. Wood. The series is carefully graduated both as to matter and language, and finely illustrated with pictures of animals.

Brentano Bros., New York, will publish shortly a novel which should prove interesting to both Anglo-maniacs and others in this cou-The book is to be called "Dollars or Sense? a tale of every-day life in England and America," by Arthur Louis. We are informed that the name is borne out by the contents, the story being based upon fact, the incidents having one and all actually occurred. The scene is laid in an English country house, changing the to America. The country house is an accurate description of one of the best English show places in England. The author makes no secret that he has drawn his characters from memory rather than imagination; moreover, he has described several games-such as polo, tennis, and cricket—as they really took place. There is also a chapter on racing, which should prove interesting to the sporting community.

A. M. Bridgman & Co., of Boston and New York, announce for immediate publication "The Labor Movement—the problem of to-day," edited by George E. McNeill, who represented the Knights of Labor before the committees of Congress last winter. The character of the work is historical. The growth and development of labor organizations in Europe antl America are detailed, and a full account is given of all the trades unions of the United States.

ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS have nearly ready a new story by that favorite writer, Mrs. Jennie Drinkwater Conklin, "That Quissen House," uniform with her other books. There will be a new volume of Spurgeon's Sermons, called "Storm Signals;" also the third volume of "Spurgeon's Sermon Notes," comprising Matthew to Acts. A fourth volume is expected early next year, comprising the rest of the New Testament, and completing the work. There is also a third book by Mr. Spurgeon, entitled "All of grace, or a word for those who are seeking for salvation through Jesus Christ. Besides these they announce a new volume by that prince of preachers to children, Dr. Richard Newton, called "Bible Warnings," with six illustrations; an important work on foreign missions, entitled "The Crisis of Missions, or, the Voice out of the Cloud," by Rev. sions, or, the Voice out of the Cloud," by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D., of Philadelphia: "My Pearl," a story by Alida W. Graves; a very fascinating series of books for boys and girls by the author of "Win and Wear," entitled the Gillettes, consisting of "Dick, the Captain of the Family Ship;" "Nan, the Missionary;" "Jack, a Boy Who Persevered:" "Bet, the Enterprising Boy;" "Bab, the Faithful Girl;" and "Will, the Honest Boy;" and a new edition of Dr. Hanna's "Life of and a new edition of Dr. Hanna's "Life of Christ," in three volumes, large print, and with twelve full-page illustrations.

CASSELL & Co., encouraged by the splendid success of their sumptuous art publications of previous years, are preparing for the coming holiday season a magnificent folio, to be entitled "American Art." It will consist of twenty-five plates, executed by the best American etches and wood engravers, from paintings selected from public and private collections, with descriptive and critical text by S. R. Koehler, to whom this country is very largely indebted for much that it knows in the direction of etched art. In "Christmas in the Olden Time," by Sir Walter Scott, they have a gem that will take a permanent place in the front rank of fine art books. The illustrations of this exquisite volume are from designs by Harry Fenn, Edmund H. Garrett, J. Stuplo Davis, George A. Teel, Henry Sandham, Childe Hassam, and H. P. Barnes, engraved and printed under the super-vision of George T. Andrew. The illustrations and text are printed in black, with ornamental and fanciful decorations in a tint. Other artistic books suitable for holiday gifts are "Shakes-pearean Scenes and Characters," a quarto illustrative of thirty plays of Shakespeare, with thirty steel plates and ten wood engravings after drawings by Dicksee, Hart, Barnard, Hopkins, Fredericks, and others, with text by Austin Brereton; a new quarto edition of the "Arabian Nights," with illustrations by Doré; "Songs from Shakespeare," a new volume in their Pop-estar Illustrated Series; "A Mother's Song," by Mary D. Brine, with full-page illustrations from designs by Miss C. A. Northam, engraved by Andrews; and new editions, in elegant double lithographed covers, of Keble's "Christian Year," Bunyan's "Holy War," and "The Adventures of Munchausen," with the Doré illustrations. They have also two new series of religious books, entitled the Chimes Series and Helps to Belief Series—the former four volumes each containing sixty-four pages of verses and thoughts from the Bible and old writers for every day in the year. The other is a series of helpful manuals on the religious difficulties of the day, by various authors, the whole being edited by Rev. T. Teignmouth Shore. In standard literature they announce the third volume of the "Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States," being sketches of Kean and Booth and their contemporaries; "Electricity in the Service of Man," a popular and practical treatise on the applications of electricity in modern life, translated and edited, with copious additions from the German of Dr.

Alfred R. von Arbanitzky, by R. Wormell;
a treatise on the "Management of the Eye, Ear, and Throat," by Drs. Henry Power, George
P. Field, and J. S. Bristowe; "An Introduction to the Study of Robert Browning," by Arthur Symons; "The Twilight of Life: Words of Counsel and Comfort for the Aged," by John Ellerton; and a "Beecher Book of Days," a collection of quotations from the writings of collection of quotations from the writings of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher for every day in the year. They also announce a "Beecher Calendar," a block calendar containing quotations from Mr. Beecher's writings, mounted on a handsome lithographed card. In the line of juveniles this house, as usual, makes an extensive announcement. The books in almost every instance are lavishly illustrated, and abound either in attractive cloth or in richly lithographed boards. At the head of the list we find "Behind Time," a charming fairy story, by George Parsons Lathrop; "Champion of Odin; or, the Viking Life in the Days of Old," a tale of ancient war among the Scandinavians, by Frederick Hodgetts, with eight original illustrations by Gordon Browne; "The Boy's Republic; or, by Gordon Browne; "The Boy's Republic; or, School-days and Holidays," by F. McCready Harris (Hope Ledyard); "Girls at Quinnemont; or, Miss Annie's Butterflies," also by Hope Ledyard; "In Quest of Gold; or, Under the Whanga Falls," by Alfred Johnston;

"Lost in the Wilds" and "Down the Mississippi," two tales of adventure in the United States, by Edward I. Ellis; "On Board the Esmeralda," a sea story, by John C. Hutcheson; "Tales of the Sixty Mandarins," by P. V. Ramaswami Raju, with an introduction by Prof. Henry Morley, a book which will interest older folks as well; and a number of others, which will be found fully enumerated under the heading of Juveniles in our classified list elsewhere in this number. In concluding the announcements of this house we must not overlook the bound volumes of the Magazine of Art, which is now in its 7th year, and which may now be truly called the leading art journal of England and the United States; The Quiver, full of pictures and stories for many a long winter night and rainy day, and their Family Magasine, which contains a plentiful supply of pure and well-selected fiction.

S. E. CASSINO, 137 High Street, Boston, has in preparation a number of illustrated books admirably suited for presentation purposes. Of these the most prominent and artistic is "The Mahogany Tree," by William M. Thackeray, superbly illustrated by Frank T. Merrill, reproduced by the photogravure process, and with a fine portrait of Thackeray. This work is issued in two styles—one, an édition de luxe, in sheets, limited to 100 copies, the illustrations being artist proofs on Japanese paper, with extra margins; the other edition is appropriately bound in mahogany wood, with white vellum cloth backs. A work similar in many respects to the foregoing is "The Christmas Carol," by Charles Dickens, illustrated by the well-known artists Gaugengigl and Cominski. It is published in an édition de luxe and as a royal quarto. The great success of Miss E. N. Little's "Beacon Lights for God's Mariners" and "Ruling Lights Calendar," as evinced by the sale of 50,000 copies within eighteen months, is to be followed up this season by two more beautiful and artistic productions. The one is entitled "'Long Shore," and will be in the same style as "Beacon Lights," containing a fine collection of texts for each day in the year, illustrated with charming marine views, represented in various kinds of sea-shells, lithographed in sea-weed colors and sea-green bronze. It will be bound in handsome "ivory" binding, with chromo-lithographic design. The other is entitled "Habitations of God and His Worshippers," and is in the same spirit of the author's "Beacon Lights," and made in the same style and shape. The vignettes consist of views of church steeples, etc., lithographed in sepia and gold. The "Ruling Lights Calendar," by the same author, is put up this season in three styles, on beautiful nickel-plated stand, on a bar for hanging, and in book form tied with silk strings and silver star. Mr. Cassino has also an attractive line of booklets in the following: "Christmas Carols and Songs." containing selections from Shake-speare, Scott, Thackeray, Tennyson, and others, by William Sloane Kennedy; "Lyrics of Love," selected by the same compiler from about fifty of the most prominent authors; "Heart to Heart," compiled by Alice L. Williams from the works of Emerson, George Eliot, H. B. Stowe, and others; "Breezes from the Fields," selected by William Sloane Kennedy from the most prominent poets; and "From a Friend's Garden," selections from George Eliot, Jean Ingelow, George Macdonald, Phoebe Cary, and others, compiled by Alice L. Williams. five booklets are bound in the new "ivory" style, with a gold design on the side, and in a handsome paper, with design in color and gold. Other attractive souvenirs which may be expected from this house in time for fall trade are: "Summer," by John T. Trowbridge, illustrated by Cominski with charming photogravures; "The Old Oaken Bucket," illustrated in watercolor designs by W. K. Harlow; "The Children," a neat collection of poems on child life selected by Alice L. Williams, and illustrated by Miss E. B. Gilman; and "Fairy Flowers from Ocean Bowers," being sketches by Jennie May Shaw, edited and arranged by Rev. A. B. Hervey, illustrated with eight colored plates of sea-mosses, together with sea sketches in black and white. The "Luna Calendar," a unique idea, is in the shape of the beautiful Luna Moth, containing twelve very appropriate designs, one for each month, printed in several The calendar is also put up in square book form. Mr. Cassino announces the following important scientific works: "Mineral Physiology and Physiography, or, Geological and Mineralogical Studies," by Thomas Sterry Hunt; "Strassberger's Microscopic Botany," a manual for beginners and students, from the German, by Rev. A. B. Hervey, with 100 illustrations drawn from specimens; and "The Naturalists' Directory," containing the names, addresses, and special departments of study of naturalists throughout the United States and Canada.

S. E. Cassino & Co. (Bradlee Whidden) have in preparation a work entitled "Precious Stones in Nature, Art, and Literature." by S. M. Burnham, author of "Limestones and Marbles," in which the author will give a large amount of new and interesting information concerning American precious stones and gems. They also announce a new edition of "American Wild Flowers," by Prof. George L. Goodale and Isaac Sprague. This has now also been withdrawn from the subscription list and given to the trade.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY COMPANY announce a volume of "Five Minute Sermons," preached by the priests of the congregation of St. Paul, in the city of New York, for low masses for every Sunday in the year. They will issue this month the "Illustrated Catholic Family Annual for 1887," which is promised to be the most important and interesting ever published.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have just published a new "Boy's Book of Sports," edited by Maurice Thompson, which will contain a number of stories and papers from the St. Nicholas magazine, divided into departments of Fishing, Archery, the Camera, Boats and Boating, Winter Sports, etc. All the work on this volume has been deliberately and carefully done, and a book of more than ordinary interest may therefore be anticipated. Of course, it will not only be profusely, but handsomely illustrated. The Century folks have also prepared for the fall season a new edition of the "St. Nicholas Songs," and have put "Babyhood" in a board cover at $1, while they have made the price of the same book, in cloth, $1.25, instead of $2 per copy. As has already been stated, the uniform rate of discount on all books issued by this company (except Hymn and Tune Books) is now twenty-five per cent. In cases where the discount was formerly greater than twenty-five per cent, the retail price has been reduced. The change, however, does not affect the discount on their periodicals, which remains as before.

THE JOHN CHURCH Co., Cincinnati and New York, announce "The Bugle Call," a collection of genuine "war songs" (the pieces for Deroration Day alone excepted), which were sung by the soldiers of the late war in every camp and bivouac of the army; a "Chorus Collection" d new and selected glees, part songs, anthems, operatic and oratorio choruses, by C. C. Case, "The Carol," a book of religious songs for the Sunday-school and the home, by Charles W. Wendte, with poetical contributions by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Miss Louisa M. Alcott, Susan Coolidge, Hezekiah Butterworth, Samuel Longfellow, and others; a revised and improved edition of Armin W. Doerner's "Technical Exercises for the Pianoforte;" "The Great Awakening," a collection of revival songs. prepared under the personal supervision of Rev. Sam P. Jones; "The Crown of Song." a new collection of music for choirs, conventions, and singing classes, by M. L. McPhail, with special contributions by Dr. George F. Root: "Ideal Anthems," a collection of entirely new anthems, canticles, sentences, etc., for quartet or chors choirs, etc., by H. P. Danks; "Modern Classics," a collection of the best music for the piane, by leading composers; and "Faith Triumphant, or, the Healing of Naaman," an unusually beantiful and interesting cantata by H. Butterworth and George F. Root.

GEORGE J. COOMBES, 275 Fifth Avenue, N.Y., announces a couple of volumes of interest to bibliophiles in "Old Cookery Books and Ancient Cuisine," by William Carew Hazlitt, and "Ballads of Books," edited by Brander Mathews. Of the former he will print, in addition to the regular edition, fifty copies on large handmade paper, to be bound in half roxburgh. He will also issue a volume of "Tales before Super," from Balzac, translated by Myndart Verelst, uniform with the charming "Atter-Dinner Stories" issued last fall; and "Roger Camerden: a Strange Story."

T. Y. CROWELL & Co.'s new and novel bindings for their "Red-Line Poets" are among their most important announcements. The "Bamboo Edition" is put up in a new style of embossed leather covers, imitating the bamboo wood. padded and with round corners, which for novelty of design and beauty of effect is said to be a complete success, rivalling the "Persian-Leopintroduced last year. The "Seal Russia Edition" is bound in a new style of leather binding, less expensive than the "Bamboo "Persian-Leopard," but almost as attractive.
Their "Library Edition" of the poets is some thing quite new, and prepared in response to frequent demands by their customers. The volumes are printed on laid paper, with uncul edges, and embrace thus far fifteen different works. In illustrated juveniles they have in preparation "The Christmas Country, and other Fairy Tales." translated from the Danish and German by Mary J. Safford, and illustrated by Charles Copeland, a really new selection of fair, tales, and not the old familiar friends that have done duty now for nearly a half century; "Boy's Book of Famous Rulers." by Lydia

Hoyt Farmer, and "In Perils Oft," by W. H. Davenport Adams. The latter is a book of daring adventures and heroic deeds by soldiers, sailors, travellers, and men of renown in various parts of the world. "Stories from Life," by Sarah K. Bolton, is also for young readers, but is not illustrated. The stories hit off the shams and follies of the day, and inculcate good moral lessons. They have added to their excellent list of books for Sunday school libraries, "The Broken Pitcher," "Luke Darrell," "Mabel Ross," "Unswerving," by Ernest Gilmore, and "Loyal to the King," by E. B. W. Their announcements of standard and miscellaneous publications include a number of interesting and valuable books. "Eminent Authors of the Nineteenth Century," by Dr. Georg Brandes, has been translated by Rasmus B. Anderson. It is a series of essays upon the works of John Stuart Mill, Hans Christian Andersen, Renan, Flaubert, and other European writers. It will make a handsome twelvemo volume, illustrated with many portraits. W. H. Rideing has almost ready "A Short History of English Literature." "The Labor Movement in America," by Prof. Richard T. Ely, represents this prominent writer's first complete treatise on the great social question. It is the result of several vears' work on the part of Prof. Ely, who is an acknowledged authority, both in Europe and America, on economic and social topics. "Silent Times" is a book to help in reading the Bible into life, by Rev. J. R. Miller; "Meditations of a Parish Priest," by Joseph Roux, to be issued immediately, is said to be full of power and eloquence. New editions are being prepared of Roget's "Thesaurus" and of "Initials and Pseudonyms," by Rev. William Cushing. The work of the former has been done by the author's son, J. L. Roget, who has also made many additions. In the latter work corrections will be carefully made up to date. From foreign fiction we are to have a translation of Don Armando Palacio Valdes's "Marta y Maria," by Nathan Haskell Dole, from the original Spanish, and two collections of short stories, "St. John's Eve" and "Dead Souls," from the Russian of Gogol. Dostoyevsky, another famous Russian, is to have his works presented to English readers. Three are in process of translation—viz., "Crime and Punishment," "Inquiry and Insult," and "Recollections of a Dead House."

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have in press "The Terrace of Mon Desir," an important and interesting work upon social manners and customs in Russia, by Mrs. DeMeissner, daughter of Admiral Radford, U. S. N., and wife of a Russian diplomat; "The Story of the Life of Mrs. Anna Lætetia Barbauld," an author whose writings will always command attention for their easy flowing style and pure and elevated sentiment, written by Grace A. Oliver; "Our Eyes and How to Take Care of Them," a popular book, by Dr. H. W. Williams, the eminent Harvard University ophthalmologist; a revised edition of the same author's treatise on "The Diagnosis and Treatment of the Diseases of the with much additional matter, illustrations, plates, index, etc.; "Two Comedies," a bagatelle de societé, by F. Donaldson, a well-known Boston society man; "The Imitators," a satire (in verse) upon Boston, by a Bostonian; and "The Relation of Hospitals to Medical Education" (the Boylston prize essay for 1885), by Dr.

Charles F. Withington. They have just ready a brochure that will interest those concerned in Rome and her antiquities, entitled "The Destruction of Rome." It is by the eminent Berlin professor Hermann Grimm, and written in the form of a letter, addressed to that larger "Rome, whose citizens are to be found in all countries," and is replete with fact and philippic against that piece of modern vandalism—the present "modernization" of the Eternal City. The translation is by Miss Sarah Holland Adams. Of special interest to lovers of Emerson is "Ralph Waldo Emerson, His Maternal Ancestors, with some Reminiscences of Him," by his relative, David Greene Haskins, D.D.—of which only three hundred and fifty copies have been printed from type. It is also just ready.

A. E. Davis & Co., of Chicago, will soon issue, in book form, "Apple Blossoms," a story by Anna Oldfield Wiggs, which appeared in serial form in the Current. The story goes through quiet scenes, among good people, without blood and thunder, and yet is filled with unquestionable human interest. They also announce a new book, entitled "Remarks by Bill Nye," to be sold by subscription only. It will be profusely illustrated, and will contain about 450 octavo pages of the best work of its author, of whom it would be gilding refined gold to praise.

DEWOLFE, FISKE & Co. have now ready a second series of "Daily Food for Christians," a new compilation of texts and verses; and an edition of the "Imitation of Christ," from new plates. They have in preparation "Mind and Words of Jesus," by Rev. T. R. Macduff; "Shakespeare's Complete Works," with life by Alexander Dyce, illustrated with steel portrait and numerous wood engravings; and a new edition of "Boyer's French Dictionary."

DICK & FITZGERALD, New York, will publish at once a "Commercial Letter Writer and Book of Business Forms," by William B. Dick, containing new original forms and models of letters, etc., on all business subjects, with appropriate replies; a "Letter Writer for Ladies," also by William B. Dick; a new volume of "Dick's Comic Dialogues," and Volume XVI. of Dick's "Recitations and Readings." Besides these they announce a volume entitled "Dinner Napkins and How to Fold Them," containing plain directions for folding and arranging servicetes or napkins for the dinner-table, from the simplest forms to the most elaborate and artistic designs, by Georgiana C. Clark; and "The Art of Attack and Defence," a practical manual of fencing, sword and bayonet exercises and boxing, by Major W. J. Elliott.

Dodd, Mead & Co. have prepared for the holidays a sumptuous edition of Dante Gabriel Rossetti's celebrated poem, "The Blessed Damozel." Distributed throughout the text will be twelve full-page illustrations, besides a number of pen-and-ink drawings and a quantity of specially executed head-and-tail pieces and decorative titles and initials, all drawn by Kenyon Cox, well known for his charming sketches. The cover for the book will also be designed by Mr. Cox, so that a most original work may be looked for. Another work of a high artistic character is a. fo'io of ten etchings, comprising examples of the best etched work of Masse, Cazanova, Rhead, Gravesend, Jacomb-Hood, Ballou, L'Hermitte, Jacquemart, Steele, and Veyrassat.

They have also arranged to complete another 100 copies of "A Score of Etchings," the first edition of which was exhausted on the day of publication three years ago, and for which there has been a constant demand. A welcome announcement is made to the host of E. P. Roe's admirers that his latest story, "He Fell in Love with His Wife," will be published in book form This story is in brief the account of a man and woman who, each having met with disappointments and reverses, and having lost faith in human nature, make a civil marriage that shall be a marriage in name only. But being thrown together in intimate daily relations, they rapidly learn to esteem and love each other, and a marriage by religious ceremony is a foregone conclusion. Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. having purchased the plates, etc., of Mr. Roe's "Nature's Serial Story" from Harper & Bros., will publish a $1.50 edition of the same, which will contain a large portion of the illustrations of the $5 edition. Mrs. Amelia E. Barr has written a new story, entitled "The Bow of Orange Ribbon." which is to be published October 15. The scene is laid in New York just after it came into the hands of the English, and concerns itself with the love affairs of a Dutch maiden and " Practical an officer in an English regiment. American Cookery and Household Management," by Miss Juliet Corson, concludes their announcements in this direction for the present. This volume is one upon which Miss Corson has been actively engaged for the past two years, and embodies the results of her long experience, and will be largely illustrated. For the young folks they announce "Blue Jackets of '61," a history for young people of the navy in the war of the Rebellion, by Willis J. Abbott, a grand-son of John S. C. Abbott, with many illustra-tions, mostly by W. C. Jackson; "Two Thou-sand Years Ago; or, the Adventures of a Roman Boy," by Prof. Alfred J. Church, with twelve illustrations by Adrien Marie, uniform with the other books by this author; "The Children of the Week: being the honest and only authentic account of certain stories as related by the Red Indian to Alexander Selkirk, Jr., herein truthfully set down by William Theodore Peters, with pictures thereunto by Clinton Peters, volume which promises to be as interesting for its literary matter as it will be unique in its get-up; "The Thorn in the Nest," a new novel by Martha Finley, of "Elsie Books" fame; "Elsie's Kith and Kin," a new novel in the ever-increasingly popular Elsie Series; and a new volume in the Mildred Series, entitled "Mildred's Boys and Girls," in which appear, we understand, the characters in the "Elsie Books."

E. P. Dutton & Co.'s great success of last season, Tennyson's "Day Dream," came out so late that they make an announcement of a new edition of it for this year. It is certainly one of the finest representations of purely American art ever published, and will be found quite as fresh and beautiful this year as last. The edition will differ in no way from that first issued, comprising all the original illustrations of Harry Fenn, St. John Harper, and others, and the exquisite decorative pages. Longfellow's "Wreck of the Hesperus" and Bryant's "Unknown Way" will be brought out in small quarto style, finely illustrated, and in novel bindings. Other quarto gift books printed in chromo lithography are Miss Havergal's "Fulness of Joy" and "Coming of the King," and "The Daisy Seekers" by the author of "Shiloh." A pleasant substitute for the fringed book or card is the "Season Songs and Sketches," a new series of four little volumes, printed especially for this house in Germany by E. Nister. They are small quartos, and entitled "Spring Songs and Sketches," "Summer Songs and Sketches," "Autumn Songs and Sketches," and "Winter Songs and Sketches,"and consist each of thirty two pages of exquisitely printed monotints, with verses appropriate to the season, and artistically printed colored covers, fastened at the side with ribbon "Beauty of the King" series embraces four miniature books of the size of the "Forget-menot" series, each illustrated with a different variety of flower. They contain Scripture texts for one month, and are called "His Loving Kindness," "His Good Promises," "His Testimonies," and "His Covenant." "Sunshine for Life's Pathway" and "Ye Auld Acquaintance" are also pretty little floral decorated books like the "Forget-me-not" series, being little gems of books in their way. The Duttons, as in former years, make a specialty of fine art color books for children. Those that they announce for the coming season have been especially printed for them in Nuremberg, Germany, by E. Nister, the famous printer of "Told in the Twilight" and "The White Swans," who has surpassed himself in his work on the books of this year. They are "All Around the Clock,"

"Under the Mistletoe," and "Christmas Roses." The first one is illustrated from original drawings in color and monotint by Harriet M. Bennett, and the last two in the same way by Lizzie Lawson. All three contain verses written by Robert Ellis Mack. As may be seen, the services of England's best color and monotine artists were secured to make these books notably lovely. In illuminated boards binding of most attractive guise they have for the little bits of children, "A Six Years' Darling," by Ismay Thorne; "Ingle Nook Stories," by Mrs. Stan-ley Leathes; "Sundays for 1877" and "The Old Picture Bible," in two parts—New Testament and Old Testament. "Pictures and Songs for Little Children" is a handsomely bound quarto. full of illustrations and charming songs. This concludes their new juvenile publications. They have just ready "Twenty Sermons," by Dr. Phillips Brooks, and "Sermons," by Rev. Morgan Dix, which will be eagerly read by the many admirers of these celebrated divines.

James H. Earle, Boston, announces for immediate publication a work entitled "Character Building," a volume for young men on character and success, from the graceful pen of Prof. Peabody, of Cambridge University. To meet the steady and remarkable demand for the volumes by Mr. Thayer, he will issue, September 30, The Log Cabin Series, in new, uniform and sumptuous binding, comprising Mr. Thayer's "Log Cabin to White House;" his lives of Grant and Lincoln, and his "Tact, Push, and Principle," the latter of which is meeting with a splendid success. Mrs. McConaughy's book for boys, "Capital for Working Boys," will be issued in the same series. For religious workers, pastors, and teachers, a series of five volumes is announced, to be issued in uniform binding under the title of The Soul-Winning Series. It will be specially attractive for presents to pastors, teachers, and religious people. "His Opportunity," a remarkable story of American life. by a factory superintendent, has reached its third edition already; "Friendship," a volume of verse, tender, descriptive, humorous, and abounding in the finer sentiment, by Mrs. E. A. Barrows, is an extra size 16mo, to be ready November I. "Thought Etchings," with its epigrammatic sentences, will prove a mine to writers and speakers. We understand Mr. Earle has on hand a larger number of books in manuscript than at any time in the nearly twenty years this enterprising publishing house has been established.

GEORGE H. ELLIS, Boston, has under way a volume entitled "Vexed Questions in Theology," a series of essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke; "The Problem of the Fourth Gospel," also by Mr. Clarke; "Social Problems," a volume of sermons upon some of the leading questions of the day preached last season by Minot J. Savage; a volume of sermons by Stopford Brooke; "The Fourth Gospel and other Critical Essays," selected from the published writings of the late Ezra Abbot; the "Proceedings of the National Conference of Charities and Correcton," edited by Isabel C. Barrows, and "The History of Medfield, Mass.," by W. S. Tilden, which will be very fully illustrated.

Estes & Lauriat underscore as one of their leading holiday books a handsome edition of "The Earl's Return," by Owen Meredith, which is generally placed by the critics next to "Lucile" among this author's works. It will be illustrated with drawings by W. L. Taylor, reproduced by photo-etchings and wood-cuts in the best possible style. The photo-etchings will be printed in appropriate colors, and the woodengravings with tinted margins. Other fine art books will be "Recent German Art," a series of seventeen beautiful photo-etchings, in tints, reproduced from selected original paintings by the most celebrated German artists, accompanied with descriptive text by Fred H. Allen; an edition, limited to 350 copies, of "Foreign Etchings," a collection of twenty original etchings by celebrated artists of France, Germany, and England, among whom are Unger, Leibl, Paul Rajon, Klaus, Woernle, from paintings by Rembrandt, Titian, Muncaczy, Leon Bonnat, Palma Vecchio, Gabriel Max, and others, with descrip-Koehler and others; "Fair Ines," Thomas Hood's beautiful poem, with original illustrations by W. St. John Harper and W. F. Freer; and "Wayside Flowers," a new and choice collection of colored lithograph plates of wild flowers and ferns, with descriptive text by A. B. Hervey and others. In connection with their gift-books, Messrs. Estes & Lauriat announce that they have succeeded, after a series of experiments, in perfecting three entirely new styles of ornamental bindings, and that they will offer their whole line of small quarto gift-books, including "Fair Ines," of this year, in each of these styles, which will be known as Burmese Plush, Wild Rose, and Peach Blow. In standard works and editions they will issue an édition de luxe (limited to 500 copies) of George Eliot's complete works, comprising all of the author's novels, essays, and poems, a concise biography by George Willis Cooke, the whole being illustrated by a series of illustrations consisting of flity or more India proofs of original painteretchings, etc., from designs by Church, Dielman, Unger, Low, Champney, and others, the text being printed from new electrotype-plates, on linen paper; "The Complete Poetical Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley," with notes and a me-moir by William Michael Rossetti, in an edition limited to fifty numbered copies, in three 8vo volumes; and "The French Revolution," by Thomas Carlyle, in two crown octavo volumes, finely illustrated. Among works of a miscel-laneous character we note "Mary Stuart," a concise and interesting narrative of the life of this celebrated woman, by Rosalie Kaufman, abridged from Agnes Strickland's "History of the Queens of Scotland;" a new and revised edition of the "Key to North American Birds," by Dr. Elliott Coues, with which is incorporated "General Ornithology" and "Field Ornithology," a manual of collecting, preparing, and preserving birds; a new edition of "What Young People Should Know," being the anatomy, physiology, and hygiene of human reproductive organs, by Prof. Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University; "Food Materials and Their Adulteraversity; "Food Materials and Their Adultera-tions," a short account of the early history and sources of the chief articles of food, etc., by Ellen H. Richards, Instructor in Chemistry, Woman's Laboratory, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston; "Can Matter Think," by F. T. S., a new volume in the Biogen Series, with preface and notes by Elliott Coues; "Kuthumi, the true and complete Œconomy of human life, also in the Biogen Series. In juvenile literature will appear "Zigzag Journeys in the Sunny South," by Hezekiah Butterworth, in which the Zigzag Club visit the Southern States, Havana, Nassau, and the Isthmus of Panama, with romantic stories of the early voyagers and discoverers of the American Continent, fully illustrated; "Three Vassar Girls on the Rhine," by Lizzie W. Champney, a summer tour along this famous river, full of amusing incidents and historic narratives, profusely illustrated by Champ and others; a holiday edition of "Dickens's Child's History of England," with 100 illustrations by De Neuville, Bayard, Lix, and others, bound in chromo-lithograph covers; 'Five Mice in a Mouse-Trap, the story of their lives and other wonderful things, related by the Man in the Moon, done in the vernacular from the lunacular form," by Laura E. Richards, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, illustrated by Addie Ledyard and others; "Pioneer Life and Frontier Adventure," by Colonel D. C. Peters, a new illustrated edition of this record of the romantic life and daring exploits of Kit Carson and his companions from his own narrative; "How a Village Full of Children Ran Away, and Other Stories," being a collection of stories by leading writers for the young, fully illustrated; "The Pig's Chowder Party," and other interesting illustrated stories for little folks about domestic animals, their habits, etc.; "Queer Dollies," by Sophie May, and others, containing nursery rhymes and stories for the little folks, crowded with original and attractive pictures; "Pussy's Queer Babies," a series of stories about animals, birds, and fishes, with fifty pictures; "A Trip to the Moon, and Other Stories," by Edith L. Tucker and Anna Talcott, a finely illustrated book for very little children; "The Little Cookie Boy and Other Stories for the Little Ones," by Florence Hallowell, Fred A. Ober, and others, illustrated. They also have bound volumes of their Annuals for 1886, which include the famous "Chatterbox," with over 200 illustrations; Volume V. of "Our Little Ones and the Nursery," with 370 original illustrations; "The Nursery—O," the bound volume for 1886 of this popular annual; "Our Little Ones—A," full of stories, poems, and illustrations; "Original Chatterbox Annual," with 200 illustrations; and "The Prize, 1886," a companion to the "Chatterbox," for the youngest children.

THE FOREST AND STREAM PUBLISHING Co. have just ready "Our New Alaska, or, the Seward Purchase Vindicated," by Mr. Charles Hallock, illustrated from sketches made on the spot.

THE FOWLER & WELLS Co. have in press two new handbooks—"An Eclectic Manual for the Teaching of Vocal Music to Beginners," by Prof. Alfred Andrews, which will fill a want in this direction, as it will be adapted to all classes and kinds of text-books; and "How to Succeed as a Stenographer or type-writer, with quiet hints and gentle advice by one who has been there," written by Arthur M. Baker, of this city, which contains suggestions for learning and practising the reporter's art. They inform us that they have made a good hit in the publication of "Heads and Faces," a manual of phrenology and physiognomy, of which 25,000 copies have been published in less than one year of its first issue. Recent editions have been improved by additional matter and new illustrations. The "Man Wonderful in the House Beautiful" has also run through several editions, and has been taken up especially as a text-book for teachers. This house has recently become the publishers of the American Kindergarten and Primary Teacher, a monthly magazine devoted to the interests of parents and teachers of young children. While this will be a Kindergarten work especially, it will consider all that relates to child culture.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have in press two new volumes of their excellent edition of "Meyer's Commentaries," of which "James, Peter, John, and Jude," edited by Timothy Dwight, will form one volume, and "Revelation," translated and edited by Prof. Henry E. Jacobs, the other. The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes of "Thirty Thousand Thoughts," edited by Canon D. M. Spence, Rev. Joseph S. Exell, and Rev. Charles Neil will be brought out, completing this great work, which is virtually a library upon each subject presented, being extracts covering a comprehensive circle of religious and allied topics gathered from the best available source of all ages and all schools of thought-a masterpiece of order and classification. third and fourth volume of Spurgeon's "My Sermon Notes" will complete this useful series of outline sermons delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London. Additional volumes of "Parker's People's Bible," an admirable collection of discourses upon the Scriptures, may be expected. They also promise a "Dictionary of Living Divines," an appendix to the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopædia, by Dr. Philip Schaff: "Methods of Church Work," a practical work for the clergy and laity, by Rev. Sylvanus Stall, author of "How to Pay Church Debts;" a new commentary on the Pentateuch, by Dr. J. Glenworth Butler, in two volumes; "Mission Economics," by C. W. Carpenter; "The Bible Heaven," by Dr. Samuel T. Spear, and "Bird Songs Translated into English Words," by Rev. Dr. Miller Hageman. They also expect to issue before the close of the year an important work on "Latin Hymn-Writers and Their Hymns," by Rev. S. W. Duffield. This work, in addition to the sketches of the hymn-writers, beginning with Hilary of Poitiers and closing with Thomas à Kempis, will include descriptions of the praise service of the early Church, a study of the Lain hymns, and trace, as far as possible, the unknown singers and their songs. It will be accompanied with copious indices to the hymns, the writers, and an extensive bibliography.

P. GARRETT & Co., Philadelphia, are preparing the twenty-sixth number of their capital series of "One Hundred Choice Selections," which they will have ready early in the fall. They have been extending the earlier numbers of the series, so as to make them all the full size of two hundred and sixteen pages, by adding a dramatic supplement, giving short, bright little plays for reading or amateur acting—a very taking and desirable feature. These are goods which every bookseller who has any school trade should keep in stock, as they are just what is needed for every day school use.

GINN & Co. will issue during the year the following list of books: "The Beginner's Latin Book," complete, with grammar exercises and vocabulary, by William C. Collar, of Roxbury Latin School, and M. Grant Daniel, of Chauncy Hall School; "The Satires of Horace," edited by Prof. J. B. Greenough, of Harvard: "The Armals of Tacitus," books i. to vi., edited by Prof. W. F. Allen, of the University of Wisconsin, and "The Brutus of Cicero," by Prof. Maria Kellog, of the University of California, which will appear in their College Latin Series. In their College Greek Series will appear quite a number of books, among others "Thucydides," book i., by the late Prof. Morris, of Johns Hopkins University; book vi., by John Williams White, of Harvard; and book vii., by Prof. Charles Forster Smith, of Vanderbilt University; "As chines against Ktesiphon," by Prof. Rufus B. Richardson, Ph.D., of Dartmouth College; "Æschylus' Persians," by Prof. Seymour; "Æschylus' Prometheus," by Prof. F. D. Allen; "Aristophanes' Clouds," by Prof. M. W. Humphreys; "Aristophanes' Knights," by Prof. W. W. Goodwin; "Euripides' Bachantes" by Prof. J. T. Reckwick; "Euripides' Bachantes" by Prof. J. T. Reckwick; "Euripides' chantes," by Prof. I. T. Beckwith; "Euripides Iphigenia in Taurus," by Prof. Isaac Flagg: "Herodotus," by Profs. White and Betters; "Homer," by Prof. Seymour; "Homer's Odysey," by Prof. B. Wright; "Selected Orations of Lysias," by Prof. J. G. Crosswell; "Plato's Apology and Crito," by Prof. L. Dyer; "Plato's Protagoras, by Prof. Iames A. Towle; "Sophocles' Antiby Prof. James A. Towle; "Sophocles' Anti-gone," by M. L. D'Ooge; "Xenophon's Heller by Prof. James A. 10 Wie; Supundes gone," by M. L. D'Ooge; "Xenophon's Hellerica," by Chancellor Irving J. Manatt, of University of Nebraska; and "Xenophon's Memorabilia," by W. G. Frost. They also announce "A Beginner's Book in French," with come illustrations, by Sophie Doriot, designed for children; "Nine Jatakas," Pali text, with vocabulary, by Levi H. Elwell; "The Practical Elements of Rhetoric," by J. F. Gerrang, of Amherst College; "A Hand-book for Teachers of Primary Grammar and Ungraded Schools." of Primary Grammar and Ungraded Schools, by John T. Prince, Agent Mass. State Board of Education; Chaucer's "House of Fame," edited by Prof. J. R. Lounsbury, of Sheffield Scientific School; "A Chart of English Literature," by J. S. Lee; "Elementary Lessons in English: Part II., The Parts of Speech and How to Use Them," by Mrs. N. L. Knox-Heath; "First Weeks at School," by Stickney and Peabody, an introductory book to Stick-ney's Primer; "A Second Reader," by Miss Stickney; "Hans Andersen's Fairy Tales," edited by J. H. Stickney, and "The Peasant and the Prince," by Harriet Martineau, in their Classics for Children; "Stickney's Third Reader;" an "Old and Middle English Reader," which is Zupitza's "Alt und Mittel-Englisches which is Zupitza's "All und Mitter-Englishes Lesebuch," translated by Prof G. E. MacLean, of University of Minnesota; "Cynewuli's Phoenix," volume iv. in their Library of Anglo-Saxon Poetry, edited by Prof. W. L. Currell; "Combined Number and Language Lessons," by F. B. Ginn and Ida A. Coady, designed for the second year of school; "The Philosophy of Wealth," economic principles newly formulated by John B. Clark, of Amherst College; "The Elements of Plane and Solid Analytic Geometric Colleges of Plane and Solid Analytic Colleges of Pla try," by John D. Runkle, Mass. Institute of Technology; and "Adjustment of the Compass, Transit, and Level," by A. V. Lane, University of Texas. The following music books are also in preparation: "Veazie's Four Part Song Reader," by G. A. Veazie, Jr., Supervisor of Music, Chelsea, Mass.; "First Music Reader," by Luther Whiting Mason; "Advanced Third Music Reader for Mixed Schools," "Advanced Third Music Reader for Girls," and "New First Series of Charts' are by Luther W. Mason; "The Barcarolle" (Time and Tune, book ii.), by A. S. Caswell and J. E. Ryan. They are also to establish a Journal of Morphology, devoted principally to embryological, anatomical, and histo-logical subjects. The size will be the usual magazine form, crown octavo, of one hundred to one hundred and fifty pages, and from five to ten double plates.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER has in press a new translation of Feuillet's "Roman d'un Jeune Homme Pauvre," which has been virtually out of print. The translation has been made by J. Henry Hager, who translated "La Morte." As a novel "Le Roman" has now reached its ninety-seventh edition in France. It was first published in 1858.

S. C. GRIGGS & Co. will publish in October a complete edition of the poetical works of Benjamin F. Taylor, the well-known Western poet, whose "Isle of the Long Ago" and many other poems have become almost classics. The forthcoming volume will include all his poems under the headings of "Songs of Yesterday," "Old Time Pictures," "Dulce Domum," etc., together with about as much new matter as is contained in "Songs of Yesterday." It will make a twelvemo of probably 400 pages.

HARPER & BROTHERS will have ready, well in time for the Christmas trade, the most generous issue of holiday books their presses have sent forth for some years. The pièce de résistance will, of course, be Abbey's illustrations of Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," the publication of which is fairly an art event, since this is the most important continuous work of an artist now recognized in England (and particularly among artists there), as well as in America, as the foremost of living illustrators. The book will be a sumptuous quarto, in fitting binding, and, as usual, Mr. Abbey will have the help of his Damon-and-Pythias friend, Mr. Alfred Parsons, for some of the decorative designs. Charles Dudley Warner's charming travel novel, "Their Pilgrimage," will be finished in the magazine in time to permit its issue as a Christmas book, and Mr. C. S. Reinhart, who, living and working in Paris, is the close and friendly rival of Mr. Abbey in London in the leadership of American illustration, has done some of his best work in catching the types and incidents of American summer resort life. The story, it will be remembered, follows its characters from Old Point Comfort through almost all the well-known watering-places—Cape May and Atlantic City, White Sulphur Springs, the Catskills, Saratoga and Lake George, the White Mountains, Newport—a trip taken together last year by author and artist, the latter of whom was brought from Paris "by cable" under special contract for this piece of work. Mr. W. Hamilton Gibson will again appear as author and artist in a series of papers on his favorite topics, happily titled "Happy Hunting Grounds"—the grounds having a wide range from a city back yard to a sweep of mountain side, in each of which Mr. Gibson, unrivalled in his own field, finds abundance of subject for his nature-loving pencil. The volume will be uniform with his "Pastoral Days" and "Highways and Byways." A fourth illustrated book will be "Home Fancies and Heart Flowers," in which engravings by Frank French will ac-company poems by Mrs. M. E. Sangster. Dr. von Reber's "History of Mediæval Art," as translated by J. Thacher Clarke, will be issued with many illustrations, uniform with his "History of Ancient Art." "Ancient Cities of the New World," by Desiré Charnay, is an archæological study which should interest all Americans. "Retrospections of America," by John Bernard, is the diary of an English actor who was among the earliest in his profession to visit the United States, as edited by Lawrence Hutton and Brander Matthews. Contrariwise there will be a couple of books by Americans about other countries: "Mexico of To-Day," by S. B. Griffin, with many illustrations; and "A Tramp Trip; or, How to See Europe on Fifty Cents a Day," by Lee Merriwether, a young American who donned a workman's blouse and shouldered a knapsack, and thus was able to make acquaintance with the working people of Italy, Germany, the Balkan provinces, Tur-key, Russia, and England, as the ordinary traveller could not do. His book will have an ener could not do. Als book will have an economic interest, as will also a little book called 'A Plain Man's Talk on the Labor Question," by Prof. Simon Newcomb, whose "A B C of Finance" was a model of clear good sense. Among other books will be "Outlines of International Law," by G. B. Davis; "Microscopy for Beginners," illustrated, by A. C. Stokes, of Trenton; "Psychology," a school and college manual by Prof. John Dewey, of Michigan University, and "Introduction to Psychological University, and Introduction to I sychological Theory," a more elaborate work, by Prof. Borden P. Bowne; and "A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament," enlarged from Grimm's Wilke's Claris, by Prof. J. H. Thayer, of Harvard Divinity School. Of new Americand "A els, there will be "Toward the Gulf" and "A Demigod," both anonymous, and new editions will be issued of "Castle Nowhere" and "Rodman the Keeper," by Miss Constance F. Woolson, whose books are now all together in Messrs. Harper's list. Of new English novels, in the Franklin Square and Handy Volume series, the name will be legion. For the young people, Colonel Thomas W. Knox will show his "Boy Travellers in the Russian Empire," in a book as taking and as fully illustrated as its predecessors, and James Otis will have a new story, "Silent Pete," in Harper's Young People's Series.

H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, will publish at once "Songs of Pilgrimage: a Hymnal for the Churches of Christ," compiled by H. L. Hastings. The volume will contain 1533 hymns and over 300 tunes. In addition to this he will publish shortly "The Wonderful Law," and "The Separated Nation," two issues of the Anti-Infidel Library, bearing on the Jews and the laws of Moses.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish at once one of Hauff's tales, entitled "Das Kalte Herz," edited, with notes, glossary, and grammatical appendix, by William H. Van Der Smissen, Lecturer on German in Toronto University College; "Elementary Course in Practical Zoology," by B. S. Colton, of Ottawa High School, Illinois, which is designed to give the student a clear idea of the animal kingdom as a whole, by the careful study of a few typical animals; " Select Bibliography of Pedagogical Literature," by G. Stanley Hall, of Johns Hopkins University, a valuable medium through which teachers may select their reading; "Modern Petrography," by George Huntington Williams, an account of the application of the microscope to the study of geology; and "The Study of Latin in the Preparatory Course," by Edward P. Morris, Professor of Latin, Williams College. They have in preparation "Schiller's Ballads," edited, with an introduction, notes, and vocabulary, by Henry Johnson, of Bowdoin College, which will also be published without the vocabulary; "Meissner's German Grammar," by Prof. A. L. Meissner, of Queens College, Belfast, adapted for use in American schools, by Edward S. Joynes, of South Carolina College; "Method in Education," translated from the Italian of Antonio Rosmini Serbati, by Mrs. William Grey, who is prominently identified with the movement for the higher education of women in England; "Mathemathical Teaching and its Modern Methods," by Truman Henry Safford, Ph. D., of Williams College; "How to Teach Reading, and What to Read in the Schools," by G. Stanley Hall, of Johns Hopkins University; "Studies in Greek and Roman History; or, Studies in General History, from 1000 B.C. to 476 A.D.," by Mary D. Sheldon; "Smaller Outline Map of the United States," for the pupil's desk, prepared by Edward Channing and Albert Bushnell Hart; "Reading for Home and School," a series of volumes to be edited by Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, of Harvard University, the first volume of which will be ready this fall; "Suggestive Lessons in Language and Reading," a manual for primary teachers, by Anna B. Badlam, of the Rice Training School, Boston; "An Introduction to the Study of Robert Browning's Poetry," by Hiram Corson; "Manual Training," by Prof. C. M. Woodward, of the Washington University, St. Louis; "Civil Government," by Woodrow Wilson; "A Text-book of Sanitary Science," by Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, of the University of Michigan; "Health Studies," by Axel Gustaísoa author of "The Foundation of Death," to ke issued in three volumes, one for primary schools one for intermediate schools, and one for his schools and seminaries; and "The Earth in Space; or, a Fortnight in Astronomical Geography," by Edward P. Jackson, Instructor in Science at Boston Latin School.

HENRY HOLT & Co. have in preparation sereral works in the departments of general literature and education. They are not prepare at present to give definite word as to any of these projected books, and we must therefore defer their announcements to a future number.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co.'s fall list includes not a few books of excellent promise in history. biography, fiction, poetry; also holiday books and others. To the series of American Statemen will be added the "Life of Thomas Betton," by Theodore Roosevelt; "Henry Clar." by Carl Schurz; "Martin Van Buren," by Hoa William Dorsheimer; "George Washington," by Henry Cabot Lodge; and, perhaps, "Parrick Henry," by Prof. Moses Coit Tyler. The subjects and writers guarantee books of especial value and interest. In the series of American Men of Letters will appear the 'Life of Benjamin Franklin,' by Prof. J. B. McMaster. Res. O. B. Frothingham has written a life of Rev. William H. Channing, who died not long since: London, and who is widely known as one of the most philanthropic and excellent Americans who ever devoted themselves unselfishly to lofty ends. The memoir of the late Prof. J. L. Diman, of Providence, a man of admirable accomplishments and character, has been written by Caroline Hazard, who knew him well. The letters of Mrs. Madison, who was the social leader of America in her time, have been collected, and the necessary connecting narrative furnished, so that the book supplies not a little additional information with regard to the his tory of the time in which Mrs. Madison was 50 conspicuous and charming a figure. In history Hon. Ellis H. Roberts, of Utica, editor of the Herald of that city, has written of New York for the American Commonwealths series, and a subject so singularly full of material of varied interest, and by such a writer, assures a book of great value. Mr. Brooks Adams writes of "The Emanci-pation of Massachusetts," in which he states some things which the critics of the history of Massachusetts will find very welcome, and for which the stanch defenders of the reputation of that State will undoubtedly take him sharply to task. Hon. Henry S. Dana, of Woodstock, Vt., has written a history of that town. The sixth volume of the Gentlemen's Magazine Library will be devoted to archæology. In the department of fiction are several books of posttive interest. The story which has been running serially in the Atlantic for several months, and will continue to the end of the year-"In the Clouds," by Charles Egbert Craddock-will be one of the most notable. The characters and the scenery of the book are those which Miss Murfree has made peculiarly her own. Charlotte Dunning, who has written some magazine articles of excellent interest, has written a novel of New York life, entitled "A Step Aside;" and while the plot cannot be given here, it may be stated that it is one of no little ingenuity, that the characters are very strongly drawn, and that the story as a whole is one of unusual power and narrative skill. Miss Sarah Orne Jewett has collected into a little volume eight or ten short stories, which she has printed in the Atlantic and other magazines, calling the book "A White Heron, and Other Stories." The simplicity and admirable truthfulness of Miss Jewett's descriptions, and the charm of her style, are too well known to need mention here.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, author of "In War Time," which brought him very strong commendation from critics in this country and in Great Britain, has written another story relating, like that, in whole or in part, to the war for the Union. It is entitled "Roland Blake," and cannot fail to attract marked attention from novel readers. Mrs. Whitney gathers "Zerub Throop's Experiment," "Buttered Crusts," and other stories into a book called "Seed-Down." In poetry there will be a volume entitled "The Silver Bridge, and Other Poems," by Mrs. Elizabeth Akers, who has not published a book of poems for many years; Mr. C. P. Cranch has gathered his later verses into a volume entitled "Ariel and Caliban." Mrs. Thaxter will have a small volume, somewhat in style like Whittier's "St. Gregory's Guest," and entitled Cruise of the Mystery, and Other Poems." This volume is not of the sea, like her previous poems, but is very strongly and warmly human. Mrs. Whitney has written a little volume of verse, "Holy Tides," in regard to the festivals of the Church-Easter, Christmas, Whitsuntide, etc., and the exterior features of the book will be made as chaste and beautiful as possible, to correspond with the spirit and character of the poetry. Of new illustrated holiday volumes, "Well-Worn Roads," a series of sketches reproduced from water colors by F. Hopkinson Smith, is sure to be popular. consists of phototypes representing scenes in Holland, Spain, and Italy, and with Mr. Smith's descriptive text, giving incidents and impressions of travel, the book, which will be beautifully printed and bound, will be an unusually attractive holiday volume. A book of perhaps even wider interest will be "The Book of the Tile Club," containing phototypes of about thirty pictures, by members of the Tile Club of New York. The artists have chosen the pictures by which they will be represented, so that the volume will be one of singular variety and artistic value. The reproductions by the phototype process will be perfect fac-similes of the originals. There will be an account of the Tile Club and other letter-press, in which will be sprinkled portraits of the members of the Club and other illustrative cuts, and the binding of the book will be as tasteful as the Riverside Press can produce. The stamp for the cover is designed by Mr. Stanford White, son of Richard Grant White. Miss Phelps's story, "The Madonna of the Tubs," has been illustrated by Ross Turner and George H. Clements, who have made a study on the spot of the scenes and characters o. Miss Phelps's story. New editions, at reduced price, are promised of Darley's ex-cellent outline illustrations of "Evangeline," which will now be phototypes from the original designs, instead of lithographs, as heretofore; and of Vedder's magnificent illustrations to the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. The religious books will consist of "Orient," a new volume of lectures by Joseph Cook; "The Story of the Resurrection Told once More," a book of admirable spirit and breadth, by Rev. Dr. William H. Furness; "Ancient Cities, from Dawn to Daylight," by Rev. W. B. Wright, of Boston. This last, while perhaps not strictly a religious book, deals principally with cities which are either prominently mentioned or alluded to in the Bible, and the book is one which should have great interest in Sunday-school libraries, while its popular character will make it a book of interest to general readers. Miss Larcom, whose "Breathings of a Better Life" have been enjoyed by so many, has collected a little volume called "Beckonings," which consists of noble and helpful sentences which she has culled from authors of all literatures, and which will be found one of the most desirable little books of its class for daily readings. Benjamin B. Comegys, of Philadelphia, has prepared a book entitled "Thirteen Weeks of Prayers for the Family." E. M. Wherry's "Comprehenhensive Commentary on the Quran" will be completed by the publication of the third and fourth volumes. Other books not easily classified are the works of Edward Fitzgerald, the famous translator of Omar Khayyam, which will include, in addition to this, the Agamemnon of Æschylus, and other translations from the Greek and Persian; a small but very desirable book by Mr. Lowell, entitled "Democracy, and Other Addresses," comprising half a dozen of the remarkable addresses which Mr. Lowell made while in London, together with one quite as remarkable upon books and libraries delivered in this country; "A Century of Electricity," telling in popular style what is known of the nature of electricity and its applications, by T. C. Mendenhall; "Applied Christianity," a series of papers on questions which are of especial interest now, referring to labor, amusements, education, etc., by Rev. Washington Gladden, who has given proof of his wisdom and sagacity in treating such topics; "The Round Year," a volume of delightful short essays by Edith M. Thomas, on out-door subjects largely, which will remind readers of Thoreau and Burroughs and Torrey, and yet will be found to have a special charm of its own; a memorial volume to the eminent architect, H. H. Richardson, containing illustrations of the more important buildings which he designed, and an account of his life and character, by Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer; "Talks about Law," for people who are not lawyers, by E. P. Dole; a new edition of Pomeroy's "Constitutional Law," a standard work, now edited by Judge Bennett, Dean of the Boston University Law School, and a volume of lectures on "International Law in Time of Peace," also by Mr. Pomeroy; a book on "Liens," by Leonard A. Jones, author of important works on mortgages, etc.; the Works of Thomas Marston, in the series of English Dramatists; "The Far Interior," two volumes of South African travel and adventure, by Malcolm Kerr; and eight calendars, on tastefully decorated cards, containing extracts from the writings of Browning and Hawthorne (these two being new), Emerson, Longfellow, Lowell, Holmes, Whittier, and Mrs. Whitney. But the price of these, though they are quite as attractive as the calendars of previous years, will be but fifty cents each. Several noteworthy new editions are promised. The most important of these are Longfellow's works in the Riverside edition, entirely new, and to comprise all of his writings in eleven volumes. These will be in typography, in size and appearance of page, in editing, in printing, and in binding as perfect as the Riverside Press can produce. "A Journey in Brazil," by Prof. and Mrs. Agassiz, will be brought out in a small volume and at a reduced price, and uniform with this will be brought out "The Life of Agassiz," and his volumes of "Geological Sketches" and "Methods of Study in Natural History." Tennyson's poems will also be brought out in a very attractive form in six volumes, forming beyond question the most attractive library edition of Tennyson's works yet produced in America. New editions are also promised of "Religious Poems of Sorrow, Comfort, Counsel, and Aspiration," by Prof. Child, of Harvard, University; an abridged edition of "Rural Hours," by Susan Fenimore Cooper; a Household edition of Parton's "Humorous Poetry of the English Language," uniform in style with Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s other Household poets; Jones Very's "Poems," complete, embracing several pieces not included in the volume published two years since, and supplemented by three prose essays of much literary value; a new edition of Richard Grant White's "Shakespeare" in six volumes, on somewhat thinner paper than the previous sixvolume edition; a Fireside edition of Hawthorne's complete works in six volumes; a new edition of Cranch's "Translation of the Æneid" in a volume like the Library edition of Longfellow, Lowell, etc. The Riverside Pocket Series will comprise, in a tasteful and inexpensive form, with cloth covers, at fifty cents each, Miss Jewett's "Deephaven," Lathrop's "Study of Hawthorne," Bishop's "Detmold," Bret Harte's "Story of a Mine," Warner's "In the Wilderness," James's "Watch and Ward," Deming's "Adirondack Stories," Fawcett's "A Gentleman of Leisure," Hawthorne's "Snow Image" and "Exile," from the series of Little Classics. The books comprised in the Diamond edition of poets, which have had a very large popularity, will be brought out in volumes of better shape and much more attractive appearance.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS, New York, has just ready a new work for the study of French by the natural method, in which Prof. Sauveur and his numerous disciples have been so successful in the United States. The author of the new book, "La Méthode Pratique," is Prof. Paul Bercy, a teacher of many years' experience in New York and in Paris. He has also nearly ready "L'Ami Fritz." by Erckmann-Chatrian, in his Romans Choisis; and "La Fille du Roland," an epic drama, by Henri de Bornier, in the Theâtre Contemforain. He has in preparation "Le Chien du Capitaine," by Louis Enault; "Le Buste," by Edmund About; "L'Ombra," by A. Gennevraye; and Ohnet's popular novel of "Le Maître de Forges," which will appear in Contes Choisis. He will publish for the little ones Mme. de Segur's amusing story of "Les Malheurs de Sophie." In veterinary works he will shortly issue a new and revised edition of Dr. Liautard's "Vade-Mecum of Equine Anatomy." Those interested in French literature will find his "Catalogue of French Books" a most useful compilation.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY (Publication Department) propose to issue a series of extra volumes in connection with the regular annual series of the University Studies in Historical and Political Science. It is intended to print them in a style uniform with the regular Studies, but to publish each volume by itself, in numbered sequence, and with a neat cloth binding. The volumes will vary in size from 200 to 500 pages, with corresponding prices. The first volume, which may be looked for early in the fall, will be entitled "The Republic of New Haven," a new study, by Charles H. Levermore, from original records, of a most remarkable chapter of municipal development. Other volumes will be announced later.

T. & J. W. JOHNSON & Co. have just ready Volume I. of "Pennsylvania County Court Reports," containing cases decided in the courts of the several counties of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, together with opinions of the Attorney-General on questions of corporations, etc.; also practical forms of precedure—a series of reports which they started within the year past as a periodical, and which absorbs the Cheter County Reports. They have in press also Volume 63 of the Mississippi State Reports, a series of which they were publishers before the war, and which they have again taken up in recent years.

E. L. KELLOGG & Co., 25 Clinton Place, New York, have nearly ready a volume of odd quetions and answers, entitled "Handy Helps," by the author of "Quizzism and its Key;" and "School Devices," a volume by E. R. Shaw and Webb Donnell, whose object it is to afford "practical assistance to teachers who wish to keep their work from degenerating into mere routine by giving them in convenient form, for constant use at the desk, a multitude of new ways to present old truths." Also a new quetion book by Edward R. Shaw, of Yonkers, the title of which has not yet been decided.

CHARLES H. KERR & Co., Chicago, propose to issue in October, provided enough advance orders are received, "Heart's Own," verses by Edwin R. Champlin, a volume of about 75 pages, comprising some 50 pieces, varying in length from two to forty lines, nearly all of which will then appear for the first time. The subjects will be Love, Duty, and Friendship, the form of verse, the sonnet, the couplet, and the quatrain. The book will be a sixteenmo, with wide margins, well printed and tastefully bound in cloth, and the price will be 75 cents. They have nearly ready in their series of History to Literature Study a leastet of outline studies in the prose and poetry of George Eliot, prepared by Celia P. Wooley; also a new issue of Theodore Parker's "Lessons from the World of Matter and the World of Man," the price of which will be reduced to $1.25.

Thomas A. Knox & Co. have issued a new sixteenmo edition of Mrs. Browning's works in seven volumes, which include all her poems, letters, essays, and a biography, together with her earlier poems rarely found in other editions. This edition is handsomely printed on laid paper and bound in vellum cloth, gilt tops. They have also prepared a new edition of her poetical works in three crown octavo volumes printed from large type on paper of extra quality and bound in vellum cloth, gilt top. They will also get up Ware's "Aurelian" and "Zenobia" and Strickland's "Queens of England" in new and improved shape as regards printing, paper and binding. They make a specialty of fine leather bindings. They have put up most of their leating publications in half bindings and in usteful flexible leather bindings, both of which are admirably suited for presentation purposes. In juvenile literature they announce new editions of a large number of books, some of which have been out of print for a long time. It is impossible to enumerate them all here, and we therefore refer our readers for a list of them to the department of Juveniles in the classified list elsewhere in this issue.

LEA BROTHERS & Co., Philadelphia, have under way an unusually large list of important books, for full titles of which and other particulars we refer the reader to the department of Medicine in the classified list elsewhere in this issue.

LEACH, SHEWELL & SANBORN, Boston, will publish in November a text-book on "Plane and Solid Geometry," by Webster Wells, Assistant Protessor of Mathematics in Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

LEE & SHEPARD congratulate themselves upon having obtained "another triumph in the realm of art," in the production of "Nature's Halle-lujah," by Irene E. Jerome, whose "One Year's Sketch Book" and "The Message of the Bluebird" achieved such enviable success. As in her "One Year's Sketch Book," so in this, the author has caught the spirit of Nature in all her enoods; and she has been fortunate in having had the co-operation of so consummate an engraver as George T. Andrew to present on the wood a perfect reproduction of her delicate sketches. The volume contains nearly 50 fullpage illustrations, 94 × 14 inches, and is bound in a variety of styles. A genuine novelty in art is the "Plastic Sketches" of J. G. and J. F. Low, the famous tile artists, a series of designs, making 47 original bas-relief prints, 10 × 12 inches, in a portfolio. The "Plastic Sketches" of J. G. and J. F. Low, of Chelsea, Mass., marked an epoch in the history of the working of clay. As is known, each subject was limited to 50 reproductions, price originally being fixed at $50 each. Many of the subjects reached that limit long ago, and they are now scattered and in the hands of private collectors, and no complete collection is in exist-ence. This is to be exceedingly regretted, and it is here attempted to preserve, as far as possible, a record of these marvels of fictile art. The beauty and value of these Albert-types will he appreciated, when it is known that, although but five or six years have elapsed since the first "Plastic Sketch" came from the kiln, it has been found impossible to secure copies of several of the earlier ones for illustration. In their Illustrated Series of Favorite Hymns they will issue this year Tennyson's "Dora," illustrated by W. L. Taylor from special sketches made in England expressly for this work, compris-ing many charming bits of English landscape and rural life. They have put in one volume, under the title of "The Three Gems of the Bible," the "Lord's Prayer," "The Lord is My Shepherd," and the "Beatitudes," as versified by Prof. W. C. Richards, which were published in the three years past in various editions, and which in this shape make a handsome and appropriate gift-book. This house will issue this season their line of hymns, ballads, poems, and songs in novel and attractive styles, comprising sixteen favorites, in the following bindings: Imperial Antique, uniform with "The Message of the Bluebird;" The Petite Alligator, a flexible binding; The Royal Plush, of the finest material and best workmanship; and the Embroidered Silk, for which it is claimed that it excels most hand-painting in richness and beauty. They have also reproduced "Curfew Must not Ring To-Night," "Abide with Me." "Rock of Ages," "Home, Sweet Home, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," to vest-pocket size but with all the original illustrations. pocket size, but with all the original illustrations, which are issued in a series called the Golden Miniatures. In a lighter vein they announce a new novel by Miss A. M. Douglas, entitled "Foes of Her Household," which will, no doubt, be welcome news to this popular author's large circle of readers; "A Boston Girl's Ambition," a novel for young ladies, by Miss Virginia F. Townsend; and a new edition of Anne Beale's novel, "Simplicity and Fashion." Among works of a miscellaneous character nearly ready and in preparation we notice " The Family," an historical and social study, by Rev. Charles F. Thwing and Carrie F. Butler Thwing, which cannot fail to command attention as a historical and philosophical study upon the important subject of divorce and other social problems; a new instalment of "Parlor Variecontaining a series of home plays, by Olivia L. Wilson; No. 17 of "The Reading Club and Handy Speaker," edited by George M. Baker!; "A Year's Experiment, or, How Shall I Teach My Child," a practical treatise upon the subject of home education, by Louisa Parsons Hopkins; "Five-Minute Readings for Young Ladies," edited by Walter K. Fobes. uniform Ladies," edited by Walter K. Fobes, uniform with his "Five-Minute Recitations;" "Mistakes in Writing English," by Marshall T. Bigelow, proof-reader at the University Press, Cambridge, and author of a "Hand-book of Punctuation;" and "Psychology in Education," a treatise for parents, by Louisa P. Hopkins. For young folks they have a "Young People's History of Ireland," by George Makepeace Towle, with an introduction by John Boyle O'Reilly; "All Taut, or, Building the Boat," a new volume, by Oliver Optic, in the Boat-builders' Series, in which the author continues the narrative which has been found to be one of the most successful series of books this universally popular author has written; two new books in the Tids-Mill Stories, by J. T. Trowbridge, entitled "The Little Master" and "His One Fault;" "Little Miss Weezy," by "Penn Shirley," a bright story by a real sister of Sophie May, and who has already acquired great popularity as a writer in the children's magazines; "The Young Wrecker of the Florida Reef, or, the Trials and Adventures of Fred Ransom," by Richard Meade Bache, a capital book for boys, drawn from real life; "Down the West Branch, or, Camps and Tramps Around Katahdin," by Captain Charles A. J. Farrar, being the third volume of the Lake and Forest Series; and "Young Folks' Pictures and Stories of Animals," by Mrs. Sanborn Tenney, an interesting set of six volumes, containing 500 illustrations. In their new "Dollar" juveniles they have three more sets—the Live Boys Series, in six volumes, comprising "Live Boys in Texas," "Live Boys in the Black Hills," "Paul and Persis," "Young Trail Hunters," "Crossing the Quicksands," and "Young Silver Seekers;" the Castaway Stories, comprising "Adrift in the Ice Fields," "Cast Away in the Cold," "Willis the Pilot," "The Arctic Crusoe," "The Prairie Crusoe," and "The Young Crusoe;" and the Wild Scenes

Library, in five volumes, comprising "Wild Scenes in a Hunter's Life," "Noble Deeds of American Women," "Pioneer Mothers of the West," "Gulliver's Travels," and "Æsop's Fables."

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have been busy setting their table for a Christmas feast, but will not wait till then to tempt the appetite of the reading public. They commence in October the issue, two volumes each month, of a new Library Edition of the Waverley Novels, 25 vols., at $1.75, corresponding with their Library Editions of Thackeray, Dickens, and Carlyle, and put forward as at once the best and the cheapest in the American market. To their Standard (26 v., $3), Library (24 v., $2), Popular (26 v., $1.25), and Globe, (13 v., $1.25), editions of Thackeray they now add the "Miscellaneous Essays" and "Contributions to Puck," collected papers not hitherto in any American editions, and they will handle in America a fifth edition of the ever-genial satirist in the well-named Handy Edition, now printing on the other side, compactly printed and daintily bound, to be in 26 v., at 50 cents cloth, $1 half morocco. A similar Handy Edition of Dickens, to be in 30 v., at the same prices, will also be marketed by them, making three editions of this author, to which will be added a reprint of the origi-nal editions of the "Christmas Stories," from the original plates, with all the illustrations, the fine thin old-fashioned volumes in the familiar red cloth, at 50 cents each volume. There will also be a new edition, in similar style with the Cabinet George Eliot, of Charles Lamb's complete works, including some newly collected matter, small, handy volumes as becomes Elia, six volumes, at $9 the set; and the Burlington Edition of the ever-humorous "Ingoldsby Legends," with thirty-six illustrations of Cruikshank, Leech, and Tenniel, three volumes, at $4.50 the set. So much for standards. Of new books, "Three Thousand Miles Through Brazil," by James W. Wells, an English surveyor, whose sketches afford interesting illustrations for his two informing volumes, will add to our knowledge of the interior of that country. A "Manual of North American Birds," by Robert Ridgway, curator of that department in the National Museum, will describe, for naturalists and sportsmen, every species known on the Continent, with 425 outline cuts of genera. "House-plants as Sanitary Agents," in the living- and the sick-room, with a discussion of the health influences of torests and plantations, by Dr. J. M. Anders, is a book that will be welcomed because of the great importance of its subject. Of scientific and medical books, a series of studies on "The Curability of Insanity," by Dr. Pliny Earle, will attract attention because of the authority of that distinguished expert. Dr. H. C. Wood will add a "Diagnosis of Nervous Diseases" to his other well-known works, and there will be translations of Landoldt's "Refraction and Accommodation of the Eye and their Anomalies," and of Leuckart's "Parasites of Man, and the Diseases which Proceed from them." Brigadier-General R. W. Johnson will contribute to the prevalent war literature "A Soldier's Reminiscences in Peace and War," and under the title of "A Signal Success," the work and travels of Mrs. Martha J. Coston will be presented autobiographically. New novels will be, "Transformed," by Florence Montgomery;

"Red Beauty," a story of the Pawnee trail, by W. O. Stoddard; and "Harcourt; or, a Soul Illumined," by Mrs. A. S. Gilchrist; of poems, "Aegle," by Mrs. M. B. M. Toland, will be added to her "Sir Rae," "Iris," etc., and by Mrs. A. S. Gilchrist; of poems, Emily Thornton Charles will publish "Lyrical Poems," and there will be a new volume of "Folk Songs." A very capital notion is the extension to American literature of Charks Knight's useful plan of compilation from anthors, and "Half Hours with the Best American Authors," selected by Charles Morris, by courtesy of many American publishers, in four crown octavo volumes, at $6 the set, should become a work of standard sale. But it is in holday books proper that the Lippincott house "does itself proud" this year. "The Book of American Figure Painters," in a superb large quarto (15x20) of novel and richly decorated cloth binding, will show by examples in photogravure from thirty-two American artists how strong we are growing in this direction of at, and with text by Mrs. M. G. Van Renssalaer and a prefatory poem by R. W. Gilder should outdo the success of Will Low's "Lamia" of last year. A more modest but very attractive bobday volume will find its text in Buchanan Read's "The Closing Scene," and its illustrators in Gibson, Garrett, Pyle, Bruce Crane, Bolton King, and other well-known artists— a companion piece in tone and style to Gray's "Elegy" of a previous season. There will be also a superb royal quarto limited edition of "The Song of Songs," with twenty-six Bida etclings; a reduced (small quarto) edition of the charming Leloir edition of Sterne's ever-de-lightful "Sentimental Journey," at only $3.50; and a dainty novelty will be twelve booklets of "Golden Songs," favorite hymns illuminated in gold and color, with the music. sold as a packet or bound into one volume. The flat, small quarto set, including Gray's "Elegy," Read's "Drifting," etc., will be reissued in a dainty and delicious new style of binding, gold and color on white, with blue silk fastenings, and in like size and shape will be added, in the Washington Irving Series, "Knickerbocker Sketches," Irving Series, "English Sketches," and "Pride of the Village," as well as the favorite English poems.
In Juveniles the J. B. Lippincott Co. will make an excellent showing. One of their best new books-the fascinating autobiography of the distinguished Hungarian traveler, Arminius Vambéry, with an introductory chapter to English boys—is already out. Under the more de scriptive title of "The Boy Wanderer," there will be an illustrated edition of that charming French story, "No Relations," of Hector Malot. "Charley Lucken at School and College." by Rev. H. C. Adams, will be another attractive boy's book, and there will be a new story for girls, by Rosa N. Carey, author of "Not Like Other Girls," the title of which is not yet giren. All these will be illustrated. There will be another volume of "Boy's Stories" from the pen of Ascot R. Hope. Two handsome small tolio books, each with twenty-four full-page illustrations - "Animals, their Homes and their Habits" and "Birds, their Homes and their Haunts," by Uncle Warren, will be sure 10 please as well as instruct: Uncle Lawrence's latest story, "Young Folks' Ideas," will be brought out with new editions of his "Young Folks' Queries" and "Young Folks' Whys and "Young Wherefores"-all books full of information de lightfully put and freely illustrated; and under the title of "Ou. Young Folks' Encyclopædia of Travel" will be combined James T. McCabe's "Our Young Folks Abroad" and "Our Young Folks in Africa." An important series for young folks at school is announced in a "First Year of Science," by Prof. William H. Greene, four books dealing with Anatomy and Physiology; Natural History and Botany; Mineralogy, Geology and Chemistry; Physics.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. will publish this month a work of interest to the politician and student of history in "The English Parliament in its Transformation Through a Thousand Years," by Dr. Rudolf Gneis, of the Berlin University, translated by R. J. Shee, of the Inner Temple; and an addition to their Badminton Library of Sports and Pastimes, to be entitled "Shooting." This will be in two volumes, written by Lord Walsingham and Sir Ralph Payne-Gallwey, with contributions by Lord Lovat, Lord Charles Kerr, the Hon. G. Lascelles, and A. J. Stuart-Wortley. An attempt is made in these volumes to cover the subject of shooting in all its branches. In the first volume, entitled "Field and Covert," considerable space is devoted to the manufacture and peculiarities of various guns; hints are then given to the youthful sportsman, and points of interest to experts are examined. Rearing and breeding are discussed at length; and when weapons and birds have been sufficiently described, the questions of how to approach the game, or to bring it toward the gun, are dealt with. It is believed that instructions in the various methods of driving and beating, here comprehensively treated with illustrative diagrams, have never before been contained in a book. The second volume, entitled "Moor and Marsh," discusses at length grouse shooting, driving, breeding, and preservation. The important theme of deer stalking occupies a long chapter, and to this is appended an examination of the subject of deer forests. "Woodcock" and "Snipe" follow, and the remainder of the book-except a final chapter, entitled " A Little Plain Law for Game Preservers, Keepers, and Poachers''-is filled with an elaborate description of wild-fowling, of the various birds found on the coasts, of double and single punting, wild fowl shooting on shore, swivel-guns, punts, and every detail that can assist the sportsman.

THE LOCKE PUBLISHING CO., Toledo, O., have in preparation two volumes on "Woman's Work" and "Home Talks," both by Miss Emily S. Bouton, associate editor of the Toledo Blade.

GEORGE R. LOCKWOOD & SON. N. Y., have now ready an attractive line of Christmas souvenirs in their Lockwooa's Parchment Dainties, which comprise this season: "Glad Tidings." "Twas the Night before Christmas," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Poems for Christmas and New Year," by Frances Ridley Havergal, and "Christmas Festivities," by Charles Dickens and Washington Irving. They have also two novelties in "Holly Leaves" and "Mistletoe Sprays," which consist of appropriate verses, bound in dainty covers, each being cut in the shape of the leaves named (so universally associated with Christmas), and richly lithographed in bright colors and hard polished silver. "Seekers after the Light," from "Ben Hur," is another souvenir that will prove an appropriate and acceptable holiday gift. It is issued with the permission of Messrs. Harper &

Brothers, publishers of "Ben Hur," and General Lew Wallace, its author. It consists of four colored etchings, illustrating the meeting of the three wise men as seekers after the Light, and the appearance of the star announcing the birthplace of the Redeemer. The etchings are accompanied by text explanations selected from "Ben Hur." Embossed silver stamping on a heavy tinted cardboard, bound with a wide satin ribbon to match, forms the unique cover.

D. LOTHROP & Co.'s list of announcements for this season is even more embarrassing than those of former years—not only in the output of volumes of fresh beauty, but in the array of sterling works fully abreast with the growing demand for attractive books of some educational value. Their array of costly illustrated volumes includes seven fine art issues. Foremost is the magnificent folio, "Iydls and Pastorals," com-Foremost is the prising twenty-four poems by Celia Thaxter, written expressly for this work, accompanied by twenty-four superb fac-simile photogravures from paintings, water-colors, and line drawings by eminent American and foreign artists, including Kate Greenaway, Howard Pyle, William T. Smedley, Edmund H. Garret, Childe Hassam, Jessie Curtis Shepherd, Miss L. B. Humphrey, W. L. Taylor, Joseph Pennell, Thomas Hoven-den, F. H. Lungren, T. W. Wood, N.A., Charles Volkmar, Hy Sandham, F. T. Merill, and Henry Bacon. These photogravures are printed by hand, in colors, on the finest imported India paper. The book is bound in vellum cloth with designs in two metals, also in white calf embossed in imitation of antique carved ivory. A popular edition, octavo, with a selection and fine engravings, is bound both in cloth and in embossed "Youth in Twelve Centuries" is another de luxe folio, holding twenty-four bold, picturesque drawings by Hassam of youthful racetypes of both sexes, ranging from Egyptian, 1500 B.C., down through Chinese, Greek, Roman, Scandinavian, Gaul, to the Renaissance of the Medici and the American Colonial. These drawings are in hand-printed photogravures in twelve tones, and are accompanied by twenty-four poems by "M. E. B." The book is in two styles of binding: in rick silk canvas from the New York Associated Artists' art-fabrics, with emerald calf corners and back, and in linen fabric overprinted in photogravure with a rich and mystic design. A popular edition of the same, with wood-engravings, is bound in fine cloth. "The Minute Man," by Margaret Sidney, is a ballad of "the shot heard round the world;" it has drawings by Sandham printed with the text, also a strong water-color and three historic Concord views in toned photogravures. In "Bye-o'-Baby Ballads," the "color-book" of the bound at the large text. color-book" of the house, the little folks have a volume as perfect in taste as the costly adult gift-books; the ballads are by Charles Stuart Pratt (editor of Wide Awake and Babyland) and the pictures, by Hassam, the popular water-color painter, include many strong charming fullpages and hundreds smaller, reproduced in exquisite colors by G. H. Buck & Co. They have also made a handsome presentation volume of the immortal love sonnets from the Portuguese, by Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Among the new issues for popular reading are "The Land of the Czar and the Nihilist," by Rev. J. M. Buckley, LL.D., an illustrated octavo of recent travel; "All Among the Lighthouses," by Mrs. Crowninshield (the wife of Commander Crowninshield, U.S.N.), finely illustrated and uniform in size, price, and importance with the famous "Family Flights;" and "Souvenirs of My Time," by Mrs. Jessie Benton Frémont, a large book crowded with personal reminiscences of famous people, celebrated places, and notable scenes and events. The books of permanent and educational value for young folks include "Stories from American History," by Pansy; "Real Fairy Folks," by Lucy J. Rider, of Illinois, who claims to have succeeded in evolving real fairies out of the misty gases, the liquids and solids that appear in chemistry, and in arranging a series of object lessons that are scientific, but none the less fascinating; "My Land and Water Friends," by Mary E. Bamford, of California, one of those books that children of an inquiring mind will want to own, so that they can refer to it again and again; "Nelly Marlow in Washington," by Laura D. Nichols; "The Story Book of Science," by Mrs. Lydia Hoyt Farmer; "Stories of Foreign Lands," by Pansy; and "Adventures of Columbus," by Mrs. F. A. Humphrey; while for their entertainment there are "Pansy's Sunday Book," "The Adventure of Ann," a Colonial story, by Mary E. Wilkins: "Two Modern Princes in the Tower," by Margaret Sidney; "Polly," an illustrated quarto also by Margaret Sidney, and the great "Golden Year" quarto of short stories. All are beautifully illustrated and attractively and strongly bound. Besides these they have, as usual, the regular ansides these they have, as usual, the regular annuals bound up for the holidays—viz., Wide Awake "U" and "V." Babyland, Our Little Men and Women, and The Pansy. Wide Awake "U" contains complete serials by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney and Margaret Sidney—"How the Middies Set up Shop," and "A New Departure for Girls," and "V" has the beautiful complete story of "A Girl and a Jewel," by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford. Our Little Men and Women has the delicious English serial written for it by has the delicious English serial written for it by L. T. Meade. Babyland has that dainty dozen of "Crib-Curtain Stories," by Mrs. Ella Farman Pratt. Pansy has Margaret Sidney's "St. George and the Dragon" and "Reaching Out," by Pansy.

A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, have in preparation five new books of more than ordinary interest. At the head of these we notice Lucien Biart's "The Aztecs—their history, manners, and customs," translated from the French by J. L. Garner. The author of this work ranks as the best living authority on the subject of the Aztecs. He is a distinguished French scientist, who spent twenty-five years in Mexico, and to his own studies has added the testimony of all available authorities. The original was highly praised in all of the leading European critical journals. The English version will contain reproductions of the original illustrations. "The Home Life of Great Authors," by Hattie Tyng Griswold, will contain a collection of upward of thirty descriptive sketches of leading American and English authors—France being represented by Hugo and George Sand. These sketches are not critical, but rather descriptive of their subjects' common every-day life, and especially their domestic experiences—not in the style of vulgar gossip, but presenting such facts as are matters of legitimate interest and essential to a correct understanding of the character. In Victor Hugo's work "On Shakespeare," translated by Melville B. Anderson, they have a work of in terest not only for the admirers of the sables, but of the author as well, because this is cosidered to be pre-eminently the most characteristic—the most intensely Hugoesque—of all the author's prose works. "Besides being an estmate and interpretation of Shakespeare, it presents Hugo's ripest and most brilliant thoughts about the writers of all ages; a sweeping and dazzling survey of all literature and all buman life. As a work by the most conscious of a great writers, about the least conscious, it is of the greatest interest to the literary student: while its wide range and fascinating style appeal not less strongly to the general reader. publishers promise for the work an exceptionally conscientious, scholarly, and adequate translation." "Whist Scores and Card-Table Talk," with a bibliography of whist, by Rudolph H. Rheinhardt, is an attractive little volume that owes its origin to an observation of the authoran adept at whist-playing -that a record of past games in a family or whist-party was always a matter of peculiar interest, yet was seldom accessible. By means of a cleverly constructed scoreblank, this volume enables a full record, points, games, rubbers, to be easily kept, with autographs of the players, and little items of personal interest. This blank is printed upon each left-hand page, while upon the right-hand pages is given a great variety of entertaining and instructive matter connected with cards and cardplaying. Nothing like an original treatise on whist has been attempted, yet the rules and points of the game are concisely given, with many odd and curious facts, the results of very extensive researches. "The Standard Oratorios," by George P. Upton, is a compendium of the most popular oratorios, with full sketches of their subjects, history of their composition. musical analyses, and lives of their composers; including also an historical sketch of the development of the oratorio. Like the "Standard Operas," by the same author, it is intended for popular use, and will be printed uniform with the former very successful work. It will contain an historical sketch showing the origin and progress of the oratorio from its inception as a sacred drama to its present form, and including descriptions of the Mysteries, Miracle plays, and Passion music. Each one of the best-knows oratorios will be separately treated, and considered historically, dramatically, and musically. In addition to the Oratorios the work will also contain sketches of the best Te Deurus, Stabel Maters, and Requiems, and other interesting matter connected with sacred music.

Townsend MacCoun, New York, has in prep 'New Historical Atlas and General aration a "New Historical Atlas and General History," by Dr. Robert A. Labberton. The plates of the old edition having been destroyed by fire, the venerable author has entirely fe-drawn the maps of his celebrated atlas, besides which he has made over fifty new maps, a third of which he claims have no counterpart in any book, either American or foreign. Among these are a series (the result of fifteen years' personal study and camparison of the cuneiform and hieroglyphic inscriptions) showing at different epochs the Chaldean, Elamitic, Hittite, Armenian, Kossean, Egyptian and Assyrian Empires, also entirely new and striking American maps. One distinguishing feature of the atlas is that each nationality has its own color, which it retains; hence the maps being progressive become evolutionary. The maps will be engraved and printed in colors in the finest possible manner.

MACMILLAN & Co. have a treat in store for the admirers of Addison's masterpiece in a superbly illustrated edition of Sir Roger de Coverly. The illustrations are from original drawings by Hugh Thomson, whose character sketches are attracting considerable attention in artist The volume will be carefully printed on paper of a superior quality and attractively bound. The Jubilee Edition of the "Pickwick Papers," by Charles Dickens, will be issued in bound. two octavo volumes, with notes and illustrations, edited by Charles Dickens the younger. Washington Irving's "Old Christmas and Bracebridge Hall" will be issued in an édition de luxe, with numerous illustrations by Randolph Caldecott. They also announce "Early Letters of Thomas Carlyle," edited by Charles Eliot Norton; a new book by Baron Nordenskiöld, en-titled "Greenland;" a new popular edition, in four volumes, of Lanfrey's "History of Napoleon;" and a popular treatise on "Electricity and Magnetism," by Amédée Guillemin. In fiction they announce the new novel by John H. Shorthouse, entitled "Sir Percival;" a new novel by Miss Yonge, entitled "A Modern Telemachus;" and a new story book for children by Mrs. Molesworth, entitled "Four Winds

JOHN P. MORTON & Co., Louisville, Ky., have in press a revised edition of "Florida Fruits and How to Raise Them," by Helen Harcourt. This book has been largely rewritten, and will contain about 325 pages, bound handsomely in cloth. Many chapters have been added, and the book in every respect brought up to the times.

JOEL MUNSELL'S SONS, Albany, N. Y., have in press "The Journal of Captain Pausch, chief of the Hanau Artillery during the Burgoyne Campaign," translated and annotated by William L. Stone, with an introduction by Edward J. Lowell, which will throw a good deal of light on the naval action against Arnold on Lake Champlain, and the battles on the 19th of September and the 7th of October: "Virginia Carolorum," an aid to the study of the history of Virginia under the rule of Charles I. and II., 1625 to 1685, by Edward D. Neill; "The Historical Writings of the late Orasmus H. Marshall," with an introduction by William L. Stone; and a "Gerealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island," comprising three generations of settlers, who came before 1690, by John Osborne Austin.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE PUB. Soc. has a new series of illustrated story books for children and youth that will be found very attractive. The Brooklet Series is the name, and Miss L. Penney is the editor. It is adapted for Sunday-school libraries and home reading, the volumes being entitled "Little Stories for Little People," "Little Drops of Water," "Fireside Stories," "Pebbles from the Brook," "Gems for Bands of Hope," and "Our Pets." They also announce "The Making of a Man," by Mrs. J. McNair Wright, and "The Bird-Angel," by Miss M. A. Paull, two stories treating, as do most of their publications, of the temperance question. "Book of Dialogues," No. 1, by the Rev. J. A. Davis, is a new collection of humorous, pathetic, and instructive dialogues, adapted for entertainments and literary exercises of all kinds.

THOMAS NELSON & Sons. have in the line of handsome gift-books a new volume in their Pen and Pencil series, which this year will describe in word and picture Australia, the largest island in the world. It will be uniform with the vol-umes that have preceded it. To their Favorite Hymns series they have added the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments, and to their new series of illuminated text-books they have added "Thoughts for Sunrise," "Thoughts for Sunset," and "Thoughts of Heaven." In this department we may also mention their lines of "Oxford" Teachers' Bibles, the Gift Bibles, and their Prayers and Hymnals. As to the qualities of these books, we can think of nothing to say that we have not said before. For neatness, compactness, and elegance they cannot be surpassed. It remains only a question with the buyer as to how much money he will spend, and his wants can be satisfied in this line whether he wants a cheap book for twenty-five cents or one for that many dollars. In the line of miscellaneous books they have on their fall list a history of "The Land of Greece," by Charles H. Hanson, with forty-four illustrations; a new edition of Jules Michelet's work on "The Mountain;" a new and enlarged edition of "The Plants of the Bible," by Dr. John Hutton Balfour; and "Outlines of the History of Protestant Missions, from the Reformation to the present time, by Dr. Gustav Warneck, translated from the second edition by Dr. Thomas Smith. In the department of Juveniles they have a number of new volumes, many of them by authors who, by their former books, have won the hearts of hosts of boys and girls in this country. Among these are "In the Land of the Moose, the Bear, and the Beaver," a glowing account of adventures in the forest of Athabasca, by Achilles Daunt; "Dunalton; or, the Story of Jack and his Guardians," by Louisa M. Gray; "The Naresborough Victory," a prize temperance tale, by the Rev. T. Keyworth; "On Angel's Wings; or, the story of Little Violet of Edelsheim," by the Hon. Mrs. Greene; "Seeking a Country; or, the Home of the Pilgrims," by the Rev. E. N. Hoare; "With Pack and Rifle in the Far Southwest," an account of adventures in New Mexico, Arizona, and Central America, by Achilles Daunt; "Winning the Victory; or, Di Pennington's Reward," by Evelyn Everett Green; and a number of others, the titles of which will be found under the heading of Juveniles in the classified list elsewhere in this number.

T. B. PETERSON & BROTHER announce for the fall a considerable number of popular, attractive novels, by American and French authors. Foremost among these are a new Russian novel, "Princess Nadia," by Henry Greville; also "Genevieve's Victory," by the same writer, and a new edition of her "Trials of Raissa," from which the popular play of "Zitka" is taken. Other translations will be "A Young Girl's Romance," from the French of Ernest Daudet, and "The Woman of Silver," by Hector Malot; "Almost Wrecked; or, Last Love is Best," by Hugo Furst, is said to be sure to make a mark, and "Rolf Fwai," a Norwegian romance, to be of unusual power and interest. Mrs. S. A. Dorsey's Creole Story, "In the Dark Hours," will be a chief feature among American novels, which should interest South and North; and Mrs. Greenough's "Her Secret Told" is expected to make a strong impression. We note also "Lindia Lee," by Mrs. Elizabeth Van Loon; "Langley Hall," by Mrs. Francis Henshaw Baden; and "My Son's Wife," by the author of "Caste," a noteworthy English story. "The Lawrence Reciter," edited by Prof. Philip Lawrence, is expected to be ready this season.

PHILLIPS & HUNT have in preparation an interesting volume of travel, entitled "Two Thousand Miles through the Heart of Mexico," by the Rev. Dr. J. Hendrickson McCarty; "Matter, Life, and Mind," speculations as to their mysteries and manifestations, by H. H. Moore, D.D.; a revised and improved edition of S. I. Hamill's "Science of Elocution;" a volume of poetry by Miss Josephine Pollard entitled "Vagrant Poems;" an illustrated quarto edition of the "Pilgrim's Progress;" and "Left in the Wildera story by Miss Mary A. Roe, sister of E. P. Roe, which was first published, we believe, in the Christian Advocate. For the younger people they will publish "No," an interesting story for both boys and girls, by Rose Terry Cooke, now publishing serially in Our Youth; and "The Amber Star: a fair half dozen," by M. L. Dick-They will publish at once a new volume in the Up-the-ladder Series, entitled "Manhood—out of the Breakers," by Edward A. Rand.

PORTER & COATES have already issued some of their most interesting fall books, as the monograph on "The Battle of Gettysburg," from the Comte de Paris' great history of the Civil War, with the appendices, edited by Colonel John P. Nicholson; they cannot yet name the date of the appearance of the Count's fourth volume, although half his material is in their hands. An interesting volume of "Horse Breeding Recollections," from the German of Count Lehndorff, head of the German stud, will have 'additional American matter written by Major J. R. Hubbard ("Albion") of Philadelphia. will become the publishers of "Manna for the Pilgrim; or, Readings for a Month;" of Packard's "Stanley and the Congo," with illustrations, timely in view of Stanley's proposed lecture trip in this country; and of Miss Higgins's "Holidays at the Grange; or, a Week's Delight," for the children, of all of which new editions will be issued. Margaret Vandegrift's new book for girls, "Ways and Means," uniform with "Dr. Gilbert's Daughters," will delight a wide circle, while the boys have already had a chance at Castlemon's "Joe Wayring at Home," a fishing story, the first of a Forest and Stream Series; Alger's "Helping Himself," the last volume of the Atlantic Series; and Ellis's "Footprints in the Forest," concluding the Log Cabin Series. The new edition of Wallace's "Amature Photographer," with new chapters, should be kept in mind as standard authority on this subject. To their Alta Series, popular standard 12mos at an astonishingly low price, Porter & Coates have added half a hundred volumes already this year, and the series is selling as fast as they can print.

JAMES POTT & Co. have just received a special edition for this market of the new edition of Paul Lacroix, "The Arts in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance," newly revised and illustrated with twelve chromo-lithographic prints and upward of four hundred wood-engravings. The price is reduced to $7.50. They have also a new edition of Cutts's "Scenes and Characters of the Middle Ages," with 182 illustrations. A number of valuable theological works are in press, the titles of which will be given in a later issue. This firm have also become importers of the Bagster Bibles, which have been greatly improved and reduced in price. Some seventyfive pages are now added to this series of facsimile Bibles, making them valuable for students and teachers. A "Child's Pictorial Bible," with fourteen outline illustrations, in various bisdings, has proved a popular edition for the young. In the department of bindings, for which this firm is justly renowned for novelties, taste, and fine work, they have introduced a beautiful leather representing the bamboo wood. This in delicate tan shades is most unique and bear-

JOHN E. POTTER & Co. announce several new school books for early issue, the plan of which is to embody essentials only. These are "Essential Lessons in English Etymology "—the history of words, their derivation, composition, etc.—by Prof. J. G. R. McElroy, of Philadelphia; "Essentials of English and American Literature," by James Baldwin; and "Essentials of French Grammer," a practical progressive book, by Profs. James A. Harrison and R. E. Blackwell, of Virginia.

L. PRANG & Co. have just ready a revised edition of their "Standard Alphabets," and call attention to their "War Pictures," a series of eighteen fac-simile prints, after original paintings by T. de Thulstrup and J. O. Davidson. The size of the pictures is 17x23\frac{1}{2} inches. They will, of course, be printed in the most perfect manner possible, and be accompanied with very full descriptive text. The last part will be accompanied by an elegant portfolio of special design, and a copy of an excellent souvenir picture of General Grant descriptive of his military career from West Point to Appomattox. The work will be sold only by subscription.

THE PRESEYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION will issue well in advance of the new year is thirteenth annual publication of the "West-minster Question Book"—for 1887, a manual intended for teachers and older scholars in connection with the International Sunday-school lessons. An important volume will be that on "Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates; of, the False and the True Spiritualism," a treatise against spiritualism so-called, by Rev. John Chester, of Washington, D. C.; and later there will be an interesting work on Mexico, illustrated, by Hannah More Johnson. Among the attractions for young people will be some "Sea Shore Talks," by Ella Rodman Church, a favorite writer; "The Chester Coterie," by Kate L. Hamilton; "Miss Ruth and Miss Susan," by Helen E. Chapman; and "Hidden Sunbeams," by Rev. S. R. Scofield, all illustrated.

G. P. Putnam's Sons list of fall announcements promises a number of works that will be of unusual interest to the students of American literature and history. Among the former is the collection of "Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature," edited by Edward T. Mason, In this work, which will be in three volumes, uniform with "Prose Masterpieces from Modern Essayists," the editor covers American literature from the time of the writings of Washington Irving to the present day. "American Literature from 1607-1885," by

Prof. Charles F. Richardson, of Dartmouth College, will be in two parts. The first part, entitled "The Development of American Thought," will trace the progress of American prose literature from its beginnings to the present day, in its various departments of history, politics, theology, philosophy, the essay, criticism, science, humor, etc. The second and concluding part, devoted to "American Poetry and Fiction," will appear two years hence. In the field of American history they announce Documents Illustrative of American History," taking in consideration all the documents that mark important epochs in the history of this country from the issue of the first Virginia charter in 1606 to the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863. The work will contain an introduction and references by Howard W. Preston. "Half a Century of American His-Preston. "Half a Century of American History," by Prof. Alexander Johnston, of the College of New Jersey, is a review of the affairs of this country from 1846 to 1886, as viewed from the standpoint of a jurist and political econo-"A History of the United States Navy from 1775 to 1886, with a review of the colonial naval expeditions and sketch of our present navy," by Edgar Stanton Maclay, will probably be one of the most important works on this sub-ject. The work has been in preparation for a number of years, and the writer has had assistauce not only from the American Naval Departments, but, through the courtesy of Admiral Aube of the French Navy, Mr. Maclay has discovered documents bearing upon United States naval affairs which have not heretofore been accessible. Sir Provo Wallis, Senior Admiral of the British Navy and a survivor of the War of 1812, has also favored the author with many documents of great importance. The materials for this work are drawn with great care from the highest sources, the subject is treated in a broad, impartial spirit and is presented in an interesting and comprehensive manner. It will be completed in two large octavo volumes of about 500 pages each, with numerous maps, plans, and documents, the first volume of which may be expected in October. "Reminiscences of the Filibuster' War in Nicaragua (1855-'60)," by General C. W. Doubleday, is a narrative by a participant of a curious episode in American history. General Doubleday has had the use of all the official documents in existence, and his Reminiscences will very likely remain the authority on this subject. "Memorials of Half a Century," by Bela D. Hubbard, presents the observations of a pioneer upon the early history, archæology, and physical and climatological features of the region of the great lakes, with a number of illustrations. In this department we may also mention the handsome edition of "The Complete Works of Benjamin Franklin," including his private as well as his official and scientific correspondence, and numerous letters and documents now for the first time printed; also the unmutilated and correct version of his antobiography, edited by John Bigelow. This edition will be limited to six hundred sets and be published in ten royal octavo volumes, handsomely printed from pica type, in the general style of Lodge's edition of "Hamilton's style of Lodge's edition of "Hamilton's Works," with several engravings on steel. In the department of general literature we note "The Dawn of the Nineteenth Century in England," by John Ashton, said to be "a complete and thorough account of those early days, full of quaint humor and graphic sketches, faithful to life, and taken from undoubted contemporary sources." It will be found most valuable as a It will be found most valuable as a book of reference to the student of society. The work will be in two volumes and will contain one hundred and sixteen illustrations drawn by the author from contemporary engravings. "The Romances of Chivalry," also by John Ashton, is a collection of the legends and traditions of "Sir Humbras," "Sir Degori," "Guy of Warwick," and others, with fifty illustrations in fac-simile. "Problems and Social Studies," by Rev. R. Heber Newton, discusses the labor problem, co-operation, the relation of the State to the people, and other of the burning questions of the day. Other works are, in brief, "An tions of the day. Other works are, in brief, "An Inventor's Notes on American Railroads," by John Swann; "A Study of Sociology," by John Bascom; "The History of the English Constitution," by Prof. Rudolph Gneist, translated by P. F. Ashworth in a limited latter processed." F. Ashworth, in a limited letter-press edition; a limited edition of "Essays in Finance," by Robert Giffen; "Lessing's Prose," in Hart's German Classics, edited by Prof. H. S. White; "Le Romantisme Français," a selection from the writers of the French Romantic school, 1824–1848, edited by Prof. T. F. Crane, which will form one of the volumes of their French Classics for American Students; and "The Pocket Atlas of the World," a comprehensive series of maps, of the World," a comprehensive series of maps, illustrating political and physical geography, prepared by John Bartholomew. In fiction they announce "The Old Order Changes," a story of to-day, by W. H. Mallock; "The Psychologist," a romance by Putnam P. Bishop; and a new and cheaper edition of Alice Durand Field's Christmas story, entitled "Palermo." In poetry they will have "Risifi's Daughter," by Anna Katherine Green, author of "The Leavenworth Case:" and the Prart Series, a selection from Case;" and the Pearl Series, a selection from the poets in six volumes, uniform with the popular Nutshell Series of prose selections published last season. For young people they will issue, in their admirable Story of the Nations Series, a volume on "Carthage," by Prof. A. J. Church; "The Moors in Spain," by Stanley Lane-Poole; "Alexander's Empire," by J. P. Mahaffy; and "The Story of the Goths," by Henry Bradley. They are also preparing the second and third volumes of "Scripture for Young Keaders," the first volume of which met with a flattering reception. In "Chivalric Days and Youthful Deeds," E. S. Brooks, author of "Historic Deeds," E. S. Brooks, author of "Historic Boys," will tell in his charming manner the stories of "Cinderella's Ancestor," "The Favored of Baal," "The Gaze of a Princess," "The Field of the Cloth of Gold, 'and others, in all of which are accentuated the deeds of brave, manly boys and womanly girls. In "Uncle Sam's Medal of Honor," General Theo F. Rodenbough presents an account of some noble deeds for which it has been conferred in the United States. The United States Medal of Honor, which was instituted by Congress at the instance of Washington, is the only authorized military decoration for valor in this country, and this volume has been planned to present some of the most stirring and dramatic incidents connected with the history of the Medal. ratives are in many cases related by the actors. In the Boys' and Girls' Library of American Biography, "Robert Fulton and Steam Naviga-Biography, "Robert Fulton and Steam Floring-tion," by Thomas W. Knox, has just been is-sued; and "Abraham Lincoln," by Noah Brooks, and "George Washington," by E. E.

Hale, are in preparation. All of these volumes will be profusely illustrated.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have in preparation a valuable volume by the Rev. J. H. McIlvaine, author of the "Wisdom of the Holy Scripture," under the title of "The Wisdom of the Apocalypse." The aim of the work is to render the study of the Apocalypse intelligible, interesting, and edifying not only to scholars but also and no less to average readers. "Siam, or, the heart of Farther India," by Miss Mary Lovina is a most important volume by one who for many years has been a resident of the place and has had unusual facilities of gaining useful and interesting material to contribute to the subject. A new edition has also prepared of the Elstow Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," ' which for the past few years has had such success both in this country and abroad. It will be handsomely and attractively bound in cloth, and will doubtless prove a choice volume for the season of presentation. Among their special holiday attractions will be a volume under the title of "Three Kings: a Legend of Long Ago," by Mary Leland McLanathan. It is a legend of King Arthur's time, strongly told in verse, and has four full-page illustrations in the never-failing interesting style of Miss Rosina Emmet. All that author, artist, paper, press-work and binding could do has been done to render this work attractive and interesting to holiday purchasers. Among dainty editions especially prepared for the Christmas holidays are the following: "The Holy Night," "The Song of the Angels," "The Happy Christmas Time," and "Centuries Ago: Songs of Bethlehem," four volumes of Christmas hymns, carols, and melodies, selected from various authors and illustrated with three or more photographs of celebrated paintings by old and modern masters. All that care and patience could command have been employed to make the four books suitable in every way for presentation purposes. They are printed on hand-made paper especially prepared for them, the illustrations selected with care and handsomely mounted upon the same paper the book is printed on, and the cover is of thick creamy etching paper, highly embossed. It is needless to say they cannot fail to prove popular through the season. Besides these they promise a new volume of poems by Mrs. Margaret J. Preston under the title of "For Love's Sake;" and a new volume by Miss Rose Porter, "In Quietness and in Confidence, a Heart to Heart Diary," a companion volume to "A Year of Blessing and a Blessed Year." They are also preparing a new and cheaper edition of "Divine Origin of Christianity Indicated by its Historical Effects," by Dr. Richard S. Storrs, which immediately upon its first publication commanded a wide attention and of which three editions were sold in this country and three in England; also new and cheaper editions of "Stepping Heavenward," by Mrs. E. Prentiss, and of "The Life and Letters of Mrs. Prentiss." Of the former. it is stated, seventy-five thousand were sold in this country and abroad, while of the latter twenty thousand copies have been sold here and in England.

ROBERTS BROS. have a beautiful illustrated work for the holidays, "The Procession of Flowers in Colorado," upon which much care has been bestowed. The designs, consisting of twelve plates painted in water-colors by Miss

Alice A. Stewart, represent some of the lovelies specimens of the flora of this luxuriant region. The much-lamented author, Mrs. Helen Jackson ("H. H."), is the writer of the text. He long residence in Colorado and her special lone for flowers are assurance that it is well dose Only a limited edition of one hundred topis will be published, numbered and signed, printed on Whatman's drawing paper. Lord Rossie Gower, who made a pleasant reputation as a literary man through "My Reminiscences," has been devoting his leisure to a study of the ta-The result happy queen of Louis the Sixteenth. is a graphic and pathetic sketch of "The Las Days of Marie Antoinette," which includes a steel portrait of Marie Antoinette and a facsimile letter she wrote just before her execution The work will be a small quarto, printed @ hand-made Irish linen paper, and the edition a limited one. A collection of Helen Jackson's poems, including everything of importance witten by her since the publication of the first volume of "Verses by H. H.," is in press, under the title of "Sonnets and Lyrics," and also her last short stories, named by herself "Between Whiles." "Berries of the Brier" is the name by which Arlo Bates has designated the latest effusions of his poetical muse. We may hope for something strongly characteristic from him, judging from his novel, "A Wheel of Fire." "Cousin Pons" will be added to the much-praised translations of Balzac's masterpieces, and "Susanna Wesley," by Eliza Clarke, and "Margaret of Angoulême, Queen of Navarre," by A. Mary F. Robinson, to the Famous Women Series. by A. Mary Jean Ingelow has written another novel, "John Jerome, His Thoughts and Ways," which will awaken curiosity in its sub-title—"A Book without Beginning." Harriet Waters Preston's new novel, "A Year in Eden," is most felicitors in its subject. For the first time we are to have a history of Benjamin Franklin's life in France. the purchase by the United States Government of the Franklin papers affording the material Edward Everett Hale is preparing the first properly written narrative of this period so rich in varied interests under the name of "Franklia in France." Mr. and Mrs. Pennell, authors, artists, and bicyclists, have been making a journey on wheels from Florence to Rome, a record of which, with many illustrations, will be embraced under "Two Pilgrims' Progress from Fair Florence to the Eternal City of Rome." With the memory of their delightful little book, "A Canterbury Pilgrimage," fresh in mind, a rafe literary treat is anticipated. "Mabel Stanbope." a story by Kathleen O'Meara, author of "Madame Mohl," and "Familiar Talks on some of Shakespeare's Comedies," by Mrs. E. W. Latimer, are also promised. They call attention 10 a limited English édition de luxe of "Reynard the Fox," after the German version of Goethe, by Thomas James Arnold, which they include among their publications. The original designs of Kaulbach and etchings by Fox from designs by Joseph Wolf make the work a rarely attractive one. The new edition of Hameton's "The Unknown River," which has long been tive one. out of print in America, is an enterprise that will interest all art lovers. The work will contain the author's thirty-seven etchings, that were a feature of the first edition. The new volumes promised to complete the new and uniform edition of George Meredith's novels are: "Sandra Belloni," "Vittoria," "Rhoda Fleming," "Bearchamp's Career," "The Egoist," and "Diana of the Crossways." This house's admirable list of juvenile works is to have a number of important additions, all of them being works well worthy of notice and from which reading children will extract exceeding pleasure. In the first place is Louisa M. Alcott's sequel to "Little Men." Every one is happy that her pen is resumed and that its first-fruits is the story of "Jo's Boys and How They Turned Out." A large sale is expected for the book, and also for Miss Alcott's previous volumes, with which it is issued uniform. Other works for young people are "Key-Hole Country," a story about things you would certainly see if you went through the key-hole, by Gertrude Jerdon; "What Katy Did Next," a sequel to "What Katy Did," and "What Katy Did at School," by Susan Coolidge;
"The Last of the Peterkins," by Lucretia P.
Hale, and "Uncle Peep and I." a child's novel, by Mary Cowden Clarke. "One Day in a Baby's Life," translated and adapted from the French of M. Arnaud by Susan Coolidge, is a pretty artistic work that will please parents as well as young folks. It contains thirty-two full-page illustrations by F. Bouisset, printed in colors, which portray the tears and sunshine of a baby's day. Their desirable edition of Mrs. Juliana Horatio Ewing's charming stories will receive three new volumes—namely, "Melchior's Dream," "Lob Lie by-the-Fire," and a "Flatiron for a Farthing.'

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & Sons are preparing several superbly illustrated works, which bid fair to rival anything they have ever produced. They have also their usual profusion of juveniles and richly gotten-up gitt-books. Their leading work will be "England, Scotland, and Ireland," translated by Henry Frith from the French of P. Villars. The illustrations are from pictures sketched on the spot, or from photographs, and have been drawn expressly for the work by the best artists. No money has been spared to make the volume a chef d'auvre. An English édition de luxe of Victor Hugo's mas-terpiece, "Les Misérables," will be issued in five volumes, in as many successive months. When it is known that such artists as Meissonier, De Neuville, Bayard, and others equally world renowned have made the designs which illustrate it in great profusion, no exception can be taken to the statement that this will be the choicest edition ever published of this classic. Paper, type, and binding will be worthy of the illustrations and graphic text. The illustrator of "Gulliver's Travels," Mr. V. A. Porson, has been at work upon an edition of Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," which will be uniform with the former work in size and general appearance. The illustrations are all colored, the process by which they are reproduced being extremely delicate and beautiful, the colors, it is claimed, having the transparency of water-colors, and being laid with perfect clearness of outline and precision of detail. The famous "Fan" and "Glove" are to have a successor in "The Frenchwoman of the Century," Mr. Octave Uzanne's work being most exquisitely illustrated in colors from designs by Albert Lynch. It is characterized by the same grace and dainty beauty as the former works. "More Graphic Pictures" is a new series of the late Mr. Randolph Caldecott's contributions to the London Graphic. printed in colors, and makes a lovely holiday book. A little collection of volumes designed for Christmas souvenirs has been illustrated and arranged by Harriet Stewart Miner, the author of "The Royal Family of Orchids." The collection is called "The Voice of the Flowers," and embraces four books—"The Shakespeare Book," "The Longfellow Book," "The Moore Book," and "The Whittier Book." Selections from the poems of these writers, with colored representations of flowers richly printed in gold and colors, are the features. In general literature a new edition—the Copperfield—of Dickens's Works, in fifteen volumes, illustrated by Barnard, is under way; also the Jubilee edition of "The Life and Times of Queen Victoria," by George Barnett Smith, and Schiller's "Plays and Poems," with an introduction by Henry Morley, in one octavo volume. "The Shrine of Death, and Other Stories," by Lady Dilke, is very handsomely printed on rich paper with mourning borders. Kate Greenaway has a new Christmas book that will, as usual, delight old and young—"A Apple Pie," beautifully printed in colors by Edmund Evans. "Kate Greenaway's Almanack for 1887" is also ready, and a new and cheaper edition of her "Language of Flowers." It is impossible to enumerate here the wealth of books for children of all ages that they have under way for the tall and holiday season. For the bulk of these books we must refer to the department of Juvenile Literature in our Classified List of Fall Publications. Among the more important are three quartos by Helen Ainslie Smith, "One Hundred Famous Americans," being an interesting biographical series, with portraits and illustrations; "Animals Wild and Tame," studies in natural history in words of easy reading, and a companion vol-ume, "Birds and Fishes." "Routledge's Every Boy's Annual for 1887" is a most desirable pub-lication, as is "Little Wide Awake for 1887." Walter Crane has made a companion volume to "Baby's Opera" under the title "Baby's Own Æsop." It is printed in colors, and is very charming. "The White Chief of the Caffres," by Major-General A. W. Drayson, is a notable addition in this line, and the lovely new toy books by Harry Furniss are worthy of special

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS are not quite ready as yet to make definite announcement of all the books in contemplation for publication this fall; but the books already in an advanced state of preparation give promise of a list that will be equal if not superior to any published by this house in past years. Among the books about to be published we notice "The Making of New England -1580-1643," by Samuel Adams Drake. In this work the author, who is considered an authority on all that pertains to the early history of New England, gives in an extremely interesting way an account of the chief incidents which form the history of the earliest American settlements and later the American colonies. He relates with special clearness those events which had most to do with the formation and the success of our early government. While the book may be said to be especially useful for supplementary reading in schools, it is equally well suited to that large class of educated people who always feel the need of "supplementary" reading on the subject of American history. The illustrations, of which the volume is full (in all about one hundred and fifty), are uniformly excellent, and historically accurate as well. In "A History of Greek Literature from the Earliest Period to the Death of Demosthenes," by Frank Byron Jevons, they have a very scholarly and wellarranged history of one of the greatest literary developments which the world has ever known. The readers of "How to be Happy Though Married" will be glad to hear of a new book by the same author, which will be published this fall under the title "Manners Makyth Man." The author says in his preface: "It is not a book of etiquette, for I am by no means a master of ceremonies; nor does the motto of Winchester Ab-bey, 'Manners makyth man,' refer to those social rules and forms which are often only substitutes for good manners, but rather to manners in the old sense of the word, which we see in the text, 'Evil communications corrupt good manners.'" We have chapters on "Woman's manners." We have chapters on "Woman's Work," "A Husband and Wife Mutual Improvement Society," "Keeping Up Appearances," "About Reading," "Conversation," and "Success in Life," titles which indicate how helpful and interesting the book is. "The Messianic Prophecy' is a new work by Prof. Charles A. Briggs. of the Union Theological Seminary of New York, which discusses all the Messianic passages of the Old Testament in a fresh translation, with critical notes, and aims at tracing the development of the Messianic idea in the Old Testament. The accomplished tragedian, James Anderson, has since his retirement from the stage devoted some of his spare time to the preparation of a volume of reminiscences. This has just been completed, and is entitled "Seven Decades of an Actor's Life On and Off the Stage," which will be issued by this house. It has been a long time since an announcement of a new book by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett has appeared; but in a few weeks this house will issue Mrs. Burnett's charming story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," a book well worth waiting for. It is one of those children's stories which appeal not only to young people, but to older readers also, who even better appreciate the writer's delightful style and her tender and graceful manner of telling the adventures of the manly little hero. The engravings with which the volume is embellished illustrate the story in the best sense of that term, and form an exceptionally pleasant feature of the book. Among other volumes for juvenile readers which Messrs. Scribner have in preparation are two companions to books issued last year. One is by Mr. Charles F. Holder, the author of "Wonders of Animal Life," and is entitled "The Ivory King," a description of elephants and their ways, full of good pictures; the other is Miss Henrietta Christian Wright's "Stories of American Progress," excellently illustrated, a companion volume to her "Children's Stories in American History." Another book for young folks is "Among the Law-Makers," by Mr. Edmund Alton, with many engravings.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD will add to their new series of historical memoirs, of which the "Memmoirs of Colonel Hutchinson" was the first volume, a new edition of "The Memoirs of the Life of William Cavendish, Duke of Newcastle," by Margaret, the Duchess of Newcastle. To the memoirs, which have been judged by Charles Lamb a book "both good and rare," has been added "The True Relation of my Birth, Breeding, and Life." The work is edited by C. H. Firth, and will be sumptuously printed. No better view of both sides of the Civil War in Eng- book for Tobacco Planters in all Parts of the land can be had than by reading these memois for the royalist and the memoirs of Col. Huichinson for the parliamentary side of the struggle. In the same series they will issue the "Ambiography of Edward, Lord Herbert of Cherbury" with an introduction with an introduction, notes, appendices. and a continuation of the life from 1624 to the date of his death, together with an estimate of Herbert's place in English literature, philosophy, history, and religion. "The Philosophy of Religion on the Basis of its History" is a new work of the Theological Translation Fund Library. It is divided into several parts, of which the first volume, now ready, is a treatise on the subject from the time of Spinoza to Schleiermacher. It has been prepared by Prof. Om Pfleiderer and translated by Prof. Allan Menzies and Rev. A. Steward. They will have besides this in theological literature a translation of Dr. Doerner's "Christian Ethics," by Prof. Meade, of Andover. For artists and art lovers they have an interesting volume on the master sculptor, "Giovanni Dupré," by Henry Simmons Frieze, Dupré's President of Michigan University. name, whatever may have been his failures, will live for all time as one of the best and noblest masters of plastic art in the nineteenth century. Not much has been written concerning him for English readers, and therefore this forthcoming volume will be an interesting as well as a valuable contribution to art literature. They have, in the way of table books, two folios of reproductions, (in pastel,) entitled "Scenes from the Life of our Saviour," twelve plates by H. Hoffmann: and "Female Costume Pictures," also twelve plates. by Robert Beyschlag. Besides these they will have a handsome volume, entitled "The Follies and Fashions of our Grandfathers," one of those curious compilations for which Mr. Andrew W. Tuer has become deservedly famous. It will be an illustrated digest of the most amusing and characteristic matter contained in the English magazines more or less flourishing in the year 1807. The illustrations, chiefly from original copper plates, will be carefully tinted by hand and heightened with gold and silver. "Stories of the Magicians," a collection of Arabian and Indian narratives, by Prof. A. J. Church, with quaint and curious illustrations; a limited edition of Stephens's "Recollections of Mr. James Lenox of New York and the Formation of his Library:" and a new issue of F. G. Fleay's "Chronicle History of the Life and Work of William Shakespeare, Player, Poet, and Playmaker," complete their announcements for the present. For young people they have inter-esting volumes in "With Wolfe in Canada; or, the Winning of a Continent," by G. A. Henty, with twelve full-page illustrations by Gordon Browne; and "The Young Carthaginians; or, a Struggle for Empire," also by G. A. Henty, with twelve full-page illustrations by C. J. Staniland. In the line of colored Juveniles they have "The Land of Little People," with poems by Frederic E. Weatherly, with pictures by Jane M. Dealy, beautifully printed in colors and monotone by Hildesheim & Falkner; and a folio edition of "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen," from the best German and Englishment of the color of the Color of lish editions, with a series of eighteen magnificent illustrations from original designs by Bichard, printed in colors.

E. & F. N. Spon have nearly ready a "Hand-

World," giving useful information on the growing, curing, and manufacturing of the "weed," edited by C. G. Warnford Lock. The following will be published shortly: "Lectures on Electricity for the Use of Students," by Prof. Flemming; "Treatise on Storage Batteries," by Prof. Silvanus P. Thompson; and "The Manufacture of Paper," by E. J. Bevan and C. F. Cross.

N. TIBBALS & SONS, will publish this month and next new issues of "Twelve Hours with Young People," by Rev. H. M. Kellogg; Trench's notes on the Parables and on the Miracles, the two volumes in one as well as separately; a new volume of poems, by Dr. James A. Whitney, containing in addition to those already issued a number of recent poems; a revised, corrected, and indexed edition of "Many Mistakes Mended;" and a number of juveniles in sets, the titles of which will be found under the heading of Juveniles in the Classified List in this issue.

TICKNOR & Co. have a rich and varied catalogue of books in preparation. They announce for immediate issue a series of papers written by Frederic Crowninshield that have excited great interest and attention in the American Architect. They will be called "Mural Painting," and found most valuable in their enlarged and amended form. Following will be "The Vir-ginia Campaign of General Pope in 1862," being v. 2 of papers read before the Military Historical Society of Massachusetts, and giving a careful and dispassionate account of the great retreat from the Rapidan to the Potomac. Robert Grant's latest novel, "A Romantic Young Lady," will no doubt be eagerly read. It may also be expected in September. For this same month they have new editions-the Tremont and Pocket—of Byron's "Childe Har-old," and their leading holiday work, Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel." This is, of course, a new edition of this famous and popular poem, illustrated by leading American artists. It will be uniform with the previous successes in this line, "The Lady of the Lake," "Marmion," etc., and produced under the supervision of Mr. Anthony, with the same richness of decoration and elaborate care. A holiday volume for little people is "The Peterkin Papers," by Lucretia P. Hale, of which a new revised edition is ready, filled with characteristic pictures, and uniform in size with "Davy and the Goblin." The last book of the late Mr. Edwin P. Whipple is a literary event, so many years have elapsed since his previous publication. He had gathered a number of his latest and most charming papers together in "Recollections of Eminent Men. The best of James Jeffrey Roche's vers de société contributed to Life are comprised under the title "Songs and Satires," and Mr. M. M. Ballou gives a wealth of anecdote of the literary and notable people of the world in a volume "Genius in Sunshine and in Shadow." In October are promised Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement's "Stories of Art and Artists," a complete résumé of the history of art, profusely illustrated; and a magnificent art work, Mrs. Browning's "Sonnets from the Portuguese," which will be illustrated by Ludvig Sandöe Ipsen. Mr. Ipsen is celebrated particularly as a decorative artist, and some of his best designs have been put into this work, which has been a labor of love with him for years. They consist of half-titles and ornamental borders encircling the poems, emblematic and full of significance. The Hon. S. G. W. Benjamin's work on "Persia and the Persians" will follow. Mr. Benjamin is our late U. S. Minister to the Court of Persia, his book embodying his experience and his observations upon manners and customs and politics. "Steadfast," a novel by Rose Terry Cooke, and Julian Hawthorne's "Confessions and Criticisms" complete the delightful intellectual feasts in store for October. For later issue we may expect Howells's latest novel, "The Minister's Charge;"

"Rankell's Remains," a novel by Barrett Wendell, the author of "The Duchess Emilia;" "A Muramasa Blade," a story of feudalism in old Japan, by Louis Wertheimber; a new novel by Edgar Fawcett, "The House at High Bridge," and "Agnes Surriage," a novel by Edwin Lasseter Bynner, the author of "Damen's Ghost."
"The New Astronomy," by S. P. Langley, is a fascinating and instructive volume, giving the latest discoveries and theories in astronomical science, and "Safe Building" is a collection of papers by Louis De Coppet Berg, from which architects may receive many practical and valuable suggestions. A work in a new field is the Hon. J. S. Morrill's "Self-Consciousness of Noted Persons." William Winter's recent tour in England is embraced under the title "Shakespeare's England," and Nora Perry has ready a new volume of her latest "Poems." William D. Howells's "Italian Poets," previously announced, will surely be published during the winter. The volume embraces essays, biographical and critical, on the masters of Italian poetry, and is in Mr. Howells's most graceful His little comic opera, "A Sea Change, is again among the promised good things; also a new volume of "Stories and Sketches," by John Boyle O'Reilly. The Rev. J. B. R. Walker's "New and Enlarged Concordance to the Holy Scriptures" will be found indispensable to all Biblical students. In its present completed form it is a monument of patient industry and unfaltering diligence.

THE THOMPSON PUBLISHING COMPANY. Philadelphia, will publish this month "The Life and Works of Josh Billings," by E. J. Bishep. The work will have an introduction by the Hon. Charles E. Hamlin.

THE UNITARIAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION, Boston, have in preparation a number of helps to Sunday-school teachers and scholars, among which are a series of lessons on the lives and deeds of Bible heroes of which the first volume, entitled "Bible Characters," has been prepared by Rev. C. F. Dole, the second, "Hebrew Kings," by Rev. Henry G. Spaulding, and the third, "New Testament Characters," also by the Rev. Mr. Spaulding. They will also publish a second manual of Mrs. E. C. Wilson's "New Testament Parables," illustrated by pictures and stories.

THE UNITED BRETHREN PUB. HOUSE, Dayton, O., have in preparation a volume entitled "The Great Invasion; or, General Lee in Pennsylvania," by J. Hoke, of Chambersburg, Pa. The work will be illustrated with a number of new portraits, and sold by subscription.

J. H. VAIL & Co. have in preparation Crookshank's "Photographs of Bacteria," an investigation into the value of photography for delineating preparations of bacteria, illustrated with fifty autotypes and numerous wood engravings;

a revised edition of Dr. R. H. Dawbarn's "Aid to Materia Medica;" new editions of Hart and Barbour's "Manual of Gynecology;" Hill's "Essentials of Bandaging;" and Wooton's treatise on "Toilet Medicines;" also, a memorial edition, with a biography and portrait, of Dr. J. Marion Sims's "Clinical Notes on Uterine Surgery."

THE ESTATE OF D. VAN NOSTRAND has just ready a "Handbook of Mineralogy," by Prof. J. C. Foyc, of the Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis. A part of the material of this work was prepared and published by the author under the title of "Mineral Tables." The second edition of the "Tables' being exhausted, the author has taken advantage of the opportunity to revise, largely rewrite, augment, and correct the work. It has been the author's intention to furnish a work by the aid of which minerals found in this country may easily be determined, to give concisely their prominent and distinguishing characteristics, and to present the classifications usually used in arranging cabinets. This house has in contemplation several scientific works of which notice will be given later in the season.

MARCUS WARD & Co. will publish for the holiday season "At Home Again," a handsomely colored child's book, showing children at home, by J. G. Sowerby, with illustrations by Thomas Crane; "A Romance of the Three R's," by Walter Crane, the first R being "Little Queen Anne and Her Majesty's Letters (Patent)," the A B C Serpent," and the third, "Slate and Pencilvania," both letterpress and illustrations (in color) being the work of the artist; "Baby's Birthday Book," comprising one hundred and seventy pictures, with nursery rhymes, old and new, with spaces for signatures; " Pets and Playmates," an illustrated child's book, handsomely printed in colors; and "Three Blind Mice," illustrated and set to music by E. Caldwell. In presentation books they have a number of dainty volumes, among which are a small edition of Wordsworth's Poems, printed in gold; "Golden Tribute," a case containing two books, "Harps of Gold," with hymns for morning, and "Golden Lamps," with hymns for evening, the pages of which are illuminated with harps and lamps in gold and floral wreaths in color; "Christmas Angels," a small book with appropriate texts for Christmas, bound in white cloth; "The First Christmas," a book similar to the foregoing, and gotten up uniform with it; "Passing Waves," a Byronic souvenir; and "By the Wayside," a volume of selections from Wordsworth. In the line of Christmas cards they will have a number of novelties, among which will be moonlight, sepia, and marine sketches and some of Kate Greenaway's figures on a gold background. Their calendars for 1887 will comprise, as usual, the Shakespeare, Day-unto-Day, Every Day, To-Day, Our Daily Portion, and the Calendar of the Seasons.

WARD & DRUMMOND, New York, will publish shortly a new edition of the Red Shanty Series in three volumes, comprising the "Red Shanty Boys," 'The Wooden Spoon," and "Nick Hardy;" "Minnie and Her Pets," in six volumes; "Heroes of the Desert," the story of the lives of Moffatt and Livingstone; and "Golden Texts and Bible Gems for 1887," in a handsome new lithographed cover printed in six colors.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. announce a set edition, revised by the author, of Napier's "Perinsular War." It is in six volumes, and contains fifty-five steel maps and plans, and is uniform with their Chandos edition of Knight's "Hall Hours;" also new editions of Dodd's " Beanies of Shakespeare," and "The Angler's Souvenir. by P. Fisher, edited by G. Christopher Daws. The steel illustrations of the latter are beautifully printed on India paper. A new work for loves printed on India paper. A new south in Many of sport and adventure is "Sport in Many Table 1" by "The Old Shekarry." It contains several chapters on large game in the United States, sport in the Rocky Mountains and the Far West, while embracing accounts of sport is many interesting countries of Europe, Asia, and Africa. It is full of page illustrations. An inportant addition to their Library edition of the Chandos Classics is the "Shah Nameh" (Epics d Kings) of Firdausi, translated from the Persias by James Atkinson. The new volume in The Albion Poets is "Wordsworth's Poetical Works." In religious literature they have two little allegories by the Rev. W. Adams, "Shadow of the Cross" and "The Distant Hills," prettily printed with red lines around the text and embellished with original illustrations. "The Wesley Birthday Book" is selections from the hymns of the Wesleys, with a text of Scripture for every day in the year; and "Abide in Me" is also an autograph or birthday book made up of Scripture texts and verses from the sacred poets. "Health, Beauty, and the Toilet," by Dr. Anna Kingsford, is a series of letters to ladies on obesity, leanness, clothing, the complexion, etc. Their principal books for young people are a new edition of Marryatt's "Settlers in Canada," choicely illustrated; "Ronald Hallfax," by Lieutenant Arthur Knight; "The Land of Fire," a tale of adventure in Terra del Fuego, by Captain Mayne Reid, "Conjuror Dick; or, the Adventures of a Young Wizard," by Angelo J. CHARLES L. WEBSTER & Co. will publish, December I, General George B. McClellan's reminiscences of the Civil War under the title of "McClellan's Own Story: the War for the Union, the soldiers who fought it, the civilians who directed it: and his relations to it and to them." The illustrations are by A. R. Waud, who accompanied General McClellan, and the drawings are from sketches taken on the battlefield. Nothing as yet can be definitely said of the memoirs of Pope Leo XIII., which this house is to publish.

nursery literature they call attention to some charming toy books printed in colors and mounted on linen, for full titles of which see Juvenile Literature in our Classified List.

WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN make a number of important announcements in all the lines of general literature, the major part being illustrated works, gift-books, poems, and books for young people. Their leading work is similar in design to "Some Modern Etchings" and "Recent American Etchings," two artistic holiday volumes of previous years. It will be known as "Notable Etchings by American Artists," and will consist of about ten original etchings with descriptive text and an essay on the etching of the past year, by Mr. Ripley Hitchcock. It will esemble its companion volumes in general nake-up and in the variety and richness of edi-The one enterprise to which the strongest popular interest attaches is The Bird-Songs Series, suggested by The Flower-Songs Series, which it is designed to surpass in every way. Like the Flower-Songs Series, it is a pretty combination of colored plates, fac-simile >oems, and original bindings, and is expected to ierve as a graceful souvenir, suitable for almost any festal occasion. As the name suggests, " birds" will be the leading motive on the plates, n the poems, and as adornments for the covers, and as the studies will be from the pencil of Miss Fidelia Bridges, who has long been fa-mous as a delineator of the little feathered songsters, we may hope for a very delightful series of books. Three volumes of the series—of which Miss Susie Barstow Skelding will be the editor—are announced: namely, "Songs of Birds,"

"Birds of Meadow and Grove," and "Songsters of the Branches." A handsome volume bound in cloth is to be made up from the first three numbers of the series under the title "Familiar Birds and What the Poets Sing of Them. Besides the plates and poems of the series, it will contain some additional reading matter, and will be printed on larger paper. Again the plates will be utilized as "Studies for Painting Birds," and sold separately or in sets of twelve in a box. A new volume is promised in Miss Skelding's Flowers from Hill and Dale Series, embracing plates of jacqueminot roses, trailing arbutus, white daisies and grasses, moss roses, Easter lilies, etc., with poems by Helen Jackson, Celia Thaxter, and Lucy Larcom. The plates from this book—No. 5 of the series—will also be sold separately or in sets as "Studies for Painting Flowers." In the same line as the preceding volumes is "Easter Messengers," a new poem of the flowers, by Lucy Larcom, which Miss Skelding has illustrated in a series of colored plates of Easter lilies, white daisies and grasses, jonquils and crocuses and sweet-peas. It may be mentioned here that the last-named book, with the numbers of the Flower-Songs and Bird Songs series, are all issued in both the sateen and ivorine style of bindings, while special numbers of the Flower-Songs Series appear in entirely new and original covers, denominated the photo-etching binding, of which this firm make a specialty this season, using it on others of their dainty publications, The Chips Series notably, three little volumes of selections from Dickens, Thackeray, and other great authors. The third series of "The Good great authors. The third series of "The Good Things of Life" is now ready. It is a volume similar in size and shape to the first and second series, with a new stamp on the front cover after a design by F. G. Atwood. Art students will be glad to know that Mrs. Clement has completed her work on "Architecture." General readers will also find it a pleasant, readable book of reference, covering the whole subject in an attractive and authentic style. The many exquisite little volumes of poems in rich and novel bindings published by White, Stokes & Allen will receive several additions of new works, and a number of new editions of old standards. Among the new works are "Cap and Bells," by Samuel Minturn Peck, a collection of sparkling verses, some of which have appeared in the Century and other well-known publications; "Thoughts and Remembrance," a new volume of verses by Emily Leith; "Make

Thy Way Mine," chiefly religious poems, by George Klingle; a collection of poems of flowers, seasons, etc., called "Leaves from Maple Lawn," by William White, with an introduction by R. H. Stoddard; and the second series of "Life's Verses," illustrated by Mitchell, Brennan, Atwood, and others. The new edition of Sir John Suckling's "Poems" announced last year, but unavoidably delayed, is now first published. It is a handsome 12mo from new electrotype plates, with memoir and notes, and is edited by Frederick A. Stokes; it also contains a new etching by J. S. King after the portrait by Vandyke. New editions are in preparation of Miss Alexander's "Religious Poems;" Allingham's "Ballad Book;" Gosse's "On Viol and Flute;" Dobson's "At the Sign of the Lyre:" Tennyson's "Lyrical Poems, selected and arranged, with notes, by Francis Turner Palgrave; and George A. Baker's wonderfully successful little volume of vers de société, "Point Lace and Diamonds," to which several new poems will be added. They have reduced or changed the price of Owen Meredith's "Lucile," George Eliot's "Poems" and "Spanish Gypsy," Locker's "London Lyrics" and "London Rhymes," Heine's "Book of Songs," Gray's "Poems," Goethe's "Faust." Palgrave's "Golden Treasury," Thackeray's, Dickens's, and Charlotte Bronte's "Poems." One of the most desirable children's books for the holiday season will be the newly illustrated edition of Clement C. Moore's familiar rhymes about St. Nicholas, "A Visit from Santa Claus." Miss Virginia Gerson, the artist of "Rosebuds," "Tiny Men and Maidens," etc., has made nearly a dozen full-page brilliantly colored designs for the book, which are well adapted to delight children. This is their only new "juvenile," though new ediis their only new "juvenile," though new editions, at reduced price, will be offered of the popular books of last season—viz., "Rosebuds," "The Kindergarten Children," "Little Folks in Green," "Tiny Men and Maidens," and "Merry Little People." Mr. George H. Picard, whose first novel, "A Matter of Taste," was received with so much approbation, has written his third work of fiction, "Old Boniface," a story of Lon-don and American and Scotch people. A most delicate and enjoyable wit and satire is said to pervade it. "Real People," a volume of new short stories by Marion Wilcox, we find also on the list for immediate issue. A new biographical series of importance, written to interest all readers, but especially young people, and of which two volumes are ready, is "Lives of the Presidents." "George Washington" "Ulysses S. Grant" are the subjects of the first and second volumes, the life of Grant being published out of chronological order because of the present great interest in him. The intention is to make this the standard series of its class. The well-known caterer, Thomas J. Murrey, has compiled from his own valuable receipts two additional little books of special interest to housekeepers, which will be brought out in the pretty style of "Fifty Soups" and "Fifty Salads." "The Book of Entrées" will be found invaluable for dinners, lunches, and late breakfasts, while "Salads and Sauces" gives the fullest attention to condiments, dressings, and garnishings. A new edition, on fine laid paper, will be brought out of "The Bad Habits of Good Society," by George A. Baker, Jr., uniform with his "Point Lace and Diamonds." Their new calendar for 1887, designed by Genevieve S.

Hall, is very pretty and novel. It is "The Sun and Star Calendar," and is in the shape of a silver star combined with a circular figure, with a wavy outline printed in gold and crimson bronzes.

C. H. WHITING, Boston, has in preparation "Roderick Douglass; His Life and Adventures," by Captain D. B. Mackintosh, a tale of thrilling adventures in the South Seas, by an old salt from Cape Cod, that will completely "take the breath away" from "landlubbers."

THOMAS WHITTAKER'S list for the fall season is particularly strong in the line of pretty presentation books for daily reading, including a handsome line of birthday books. Among the more noticeable are "Golden Thoughts from George Macdonald," whose writings lend them-selves readily to excellent excerpt; "The Daily Renewal—being Prayer, Praise, and Meditation for Every Day in the Year," by Dr. Vaughan, Master of the Temple; "Flowers of Hope," a new Scripture text-book, printed in colors by the celebrated firm of E. Nister & Co., of Nüremberg; "The Churchman's Birthday Book," being extracts from the "Imitation." The Dickens, Shakespeare, and Tennyson Birthday Books appear in beautiful new bindings. In fiction Mr. Whittaker will publish "Through Unknown Ways," an historical story by Lucy Ellen Guernsey; "Her Gentle Deeds," a quiet romance, by Sarah Tytler; and "A Crippled Robin," a tale, by M. E. Winchester. In children's books the following will appear: "That Child," books the following will appear: "That Child," a very charming tale, by the author of "Mademoiselle Mori;" 'Through the Wilderness; or, the Deserted Children," by Mrs. S. Currier; "Margaret Casson's Resolve, a Tale of Victory," by E. C. Kenyon; "Us Three," a story for boys; "My Backyard Zoo," a delightful course in natural history, by the Rev. J. G. Wood; "Faithful Friends: Stories of Struggles and Victory," by L. T. Meade; "King Frost: the Wonders of Snow and Ice," by Mrs. Thorpe; "Three Little Heroes," by Mrs. Charles Garnett, the last four being very numerously illusnett, the last four being very numerously illustrated; "Elliott Malcolm's Chronicle, a Story of a Scotch Lassie;" "The Master's Likeness, a School Story for Boys," by Joseph Johnson. This house will also issue the Rev. J. G. Wood's "Half Hours with a Naturalist-rambles near the shore," forming a companion to his "Half Hours in Field and Forest," published last season. A new colored text-book, with the seasonable title "Pine and Cedar." will be ready for the Christmas trade. It will be somewhat longer in shape than "Bible Forget-Me-Nots" and "The Prince of Peace," and will appear in emblematic colors and designs throughout, with a preface by Anna Warner. In theological literature Mr. Whittaker will bring out during the season Tuck's "Handbook of Biblical Difficulties; or, Reasonable Solutions of Perplexing Things in Sacred Scripture;" "Probation," a symposium on "Is salvation possible after symposium on "Is salvation possible after death?" by leading clergymen of England, uniform with "Inspiration" and "Immortality," already published; "Liturgies and Offices of the Church," by Rev. Edward Burbidge, an important contribution to liturgiology; "True Words to Brave Men," from the unpublished sermons of the late Charles Kingsley; Cheyne's "Commentary on Job and Solomon," uniform with his "Prophecies of Isaiah;" "Sermons in Brief from the Ms. Notes of a London Clergyman," in two volumes. Among other items of announcement are: "Gem Series of Reward Books," two packets of attractive toy books with colored pictures about the size of ordinary menicards; the "Scripture" and "Proverbial" bleet calendars, with very chaste backs; "Echos from the Psalter," a series of poems for each day of the month, by J. C. S.; "Records of a Active Life," by Herman Dyer, D.D., a widely known clergyman of the Episcopal Church; and "The Ascension Catechism," intended as a improvement on the "Calvary Catechism," which was written a generation ago.

Trautwine, being the ninth revised edition of his work on "Excavations and Embankments," which has been to a great extent re-written, and tables and diagrams for narrow gauge roads inserted; a work on "Lithology," by Williams; and a treatise on the "Azimuth." with a study of the astronomical triangle and of the effect of errors in the data, illustrated by locii of maximum and minimum errors, by Lieut.-Com. J. E. Craig of the U. S. Navy.

The Worthington Company, true to its tradition of making artistic and appropriate American books for the American children, have this year aimed higher than ever before, and have succeeded in producing books which may properly be called "books not for one season, but for all seasons." At the head of these may be placed the new book by Miss M. A. Lathbury. entited "From Meadow Sweet to Mistletoe." The book consists of forty original and artistic designs printed in photogravure, from the original septa drawings, on extra size heavy drawing paper, with illustrative verses by the author. This beautiful volume, which is a new departure from the books hitherto published for young folks will not only interest those for whom it is gotten upbut will no doubt prove attractive to their elders.

ne volume begins with the meadow sweet of :Id and garden, and goes on with appropriate ustrations and verses to the season of the istletoe, appropriately carrying out the idea intained in the prefatory verses:

'Christmas Elves' is an excellent collection of new stories by Agnes C. Sage, well known for ter contributions to juvenile magazines. Worthington's Annual for 1887," it is promsed, will positively outdo all its predecessors. It is crowded, as usual, with appropriate reading for young folks, and printed this year in two colors. The text is printed in black and all the pictures opposite in a rich tint giving a very pleasing effect to the whole volume. "How? pleasing effect to the whole volume. or, Spare Hours made Profitable for Boys and Girls," by Kennedy Holbrook, will be found a capital book for children of an inquisitive turn of mind. It is full of practical information given in just the kind of way that chi dren take to kindly. Besides these they have for the young folks new issues of "Worthington's Natural History," the "American Chatterbox," "Babyland," and quarto editions of "Robinson Crusoe," Grimm's "Fairy Tales," Andersen's "Fairy
Tales," and "Æsop's Fables." In miscellaneous literature they have chiefly new editions of standard works and remainders of English editions, of which they now control the sale in this country. Among the former are "The Female Poets of America," by T. B. Read; a series of Poets of America," by T. B. Read; a series of Household Novels, comprising "Lorna Doone," "Wanda," "Daniel Deronda," East Lynne," "Adam Bede," "David Copperfield," "Jane Eyre," and "John Halifax;" an edition of Irving's "Works" in nine volumes; and "Library of Love," a series of three volumes, containing poems of the passions, on the sentiments, and on love. The works of which they have purchased the remaining copies, and of which they now claim to control the market in which they now claim to control the market in this country, comprise "Masterpieces of French and German Art," consisting of twenty-two illustrations of the specimens of the best work of the artists of Germany and France, with critical and descriptive letter-press; "Masterpieces of Modern English Art," a work similar to the foregoing; Montalembert's "History of the Monks of the West," translated by Mrs. Oliphant, in seven volumes; and the "Old Spanish and English Romances," which they have now in twenty-one instead of twenty-four volumes, bound in roxburgh style.

E. & J. B. Young & Co. have some interesting theological works and quite an array of literature for the young. The Rev. E. M. Goulburn has written a volume on "The Liturgical Gospels for Saints' Days," and the Rev. G. H. Wilkinson, "Some Laws in God's Spiritual Kingdom." "Likenesses of our Lord" is in the order of holiday books, being fac-similes, in gold and colors, of paintings by the old masters, and from other sources, with letter-press description. Their new quarto-colored books for children have been prepared with much care as to details. "Robinson Crusee" has been put into a new and pretty dress; "Home Sunbeams" provides a series of pictures, with letter-press in prose and rhyme, by Mrs. Molesworth: "For our Little Ones" is a book similar to "Home Sunbeams," but for younger children; "The Holy Childhood" depicts the scenes immediately connected with the birth of Christ. All four are in illuminated covers, and illustrated very beautifully in chromo-lithography. The new bound volumes of "Sunday" and "The Child's Pictorial" are unusually rich in pictures and reading matter, and are always welcomed by young readers. Books that are more notable for their reading matter than their illustrations are the following stories: "The Linen-Room Window; or, What the Snow Conceals the Sun Reveals." by Miss C. Balley; "The Fakenham Ghost," by Robert Bloomfield; "Happy Sunday After-noons," Bible outlines for the little ones to color and write about, either from memory or with the use of the Bible, by J. A. Miles; "A Story about London Life," by James F. Cobb; "The Wrath of the Fay," a fairy tale in verse, by F. Wyville Home; and "Fragrant Flowers," a Bible text-book for every day in the year. "Mazarin," by Gustave Masson, has been added to the Home Library, "Physicists," by W. Garnet, to Heroes of Science Series, and "The Ethics of Aristotle," by Rev. I. G. Smith, to Ancient Philosophers Series. "Architecture Especially in Relation to our Parish Churches" is the title of a new work by the Rev. H. H. Bishop, and "Man and his Handiwork" is announced by Rev. J. C. Wood. This house being the agents for the London Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge embrace in their catalogue a long list of the society's publications. These are specially notable for their excellent moral tone and their low price. The titles of works not mentioned here will be found in our classified list under Juvenile Literature, where we quote quite a number of books for young people at prices ranging from $1 to ten cents. For the Christmas holidays they have in preparation an entirely new line of cards, the "Peniel" cards, possessing features not hitherto attempted, and for which there has been repeated inquiry. design and wording have special reference to the Christmas festival as the anniversary of the birth of Christ, the verses being by the Bishop of Exeter, Canon Bell. Horatius Bonar, D.D., and other eminent authors.

THE "YOUNG CHURCHMAN" COMPANY, Milwaukee, will publish on October 1 a revised edition of "The Family Altar; or, Prayers for Family Worship," compiled by Rev. James A. Bolles, D.D., rector emeritus of Trinity Church, Cleveland, O.

Some few announcements which have come too late for reading notice may be found in the lists, or will be noticed in future issues. We are aware of but two important omissions in this summary, (which this year is more than three times the size of that of ten years ago,) and these are only due to the fact that the houses in question were not ready at the time we went to press to make definite announcement of the books in contemplation.

HENRY HOLT & CO.'S

NEW

16mo, flexible cloth, with a new design, 50 cents each.

No. 1. OBLIVION. By M. G. McClelland.

"The thrilling and central idea of 'Oblivion' is worked out so beautifully, with such natural and such stick touch, and the whole plot is set in such a frame of delicate and charming work, that the treatment goes for more than the subject, although the reader is certainly absorbed in finding out the result. . . . It is perhaps the dealing with mountaineer life which suggests Craddock so quickly, and the new author does not suffer by the comparison. The conversations, while perfectly natural, are full of a rough romance that suggests the skill of George Eliot in puting the sharpest wisdom and the most poetic poetry into the mouths of the least cultivated of her men and women."

"Remarkable for its direct and rapid narrative. . . . and delicate exhibition of noble character."—N. Y. Tribune. . Admirable for poetical spirit. . . . A very natura

"So freshly and delicately outlined as to give it the charm of an idyl. . . . So touches the sympathy of the reader that the conclusion comes as a positive pain. . . There is in the book such a power of imagination is bent on high things, so touched to fine issues, that we are fain to dwell on the promise of a future which shall said in the present ability a trained artistic skill."—Nation.

No. 2. HANNIBAL OF NEW YORK. A New Novel. By THOMU WHARTON, author of "A Latter-Day Saint,"

"An uncommonly clever novel, well written, and very nearly solves that much-perplexing problem, the American novel, pure and simple. Those phases of the national life with which it deals are depicted with marked skill; she characters are typical Americans, and the story throughout has a pre-eminently local flavor. The author has followed the modern realistic method, but having invention and a just sense of the claims of art, has provided an interesting plot, about which his characters revolve consistently. The satire is sharp, bright, and just; what is carnet in the book is strongly marked by sincerity; the moral, though cynical, is skilfully painted, and there is a vigor and few in the work as a whole that make it exceptionally attractive reading. It is by far the best fiction of the year that we had from a native author."—Boston Gazstie.

"It is a novel of New York and Newport, with much of the unpleasantness of those maris about it, and a gree deal of human interest. It is clever, and will pay to read or to skim, as the reader may have a leisure season or a leisure hour."—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

No. 3. PRINCESS. A New Novel. By M. G. McClelland, author of "Oblivion"

"By the author of 'Oblivion,' which has attained fame in two continents. It is a tale of Southern life, the disactors graphically drawn, and the interest sustained through every line. . . . 'Princess' is one of the most above ingly interesting love-stories that has appeared for years."—Boston Traveller.

No. 4. CHILDREN OF THE EARTH. By ANNE ROBERTSON MAC

"A very original and deeply interesting novel, full of plot, incident, spirited talk, and character, and never no improbable for belief. It deals with that question—decidedly of the earth, earthy—which novelists had much being leave entirely alone, unless they can treat it as well as it has been treated here—the old, old problem of confused and duty, passion and law. The situation has new features, however, and is admirable and noteworthy for the way the problem is solved. The extreme cleverness and the innate noblenees of this conception are hardly appreciated on the first reading, when the reader is absorbed in the interest of the book as a mere story; but the law ness of it, as a study of human nature, makes it really a striking study of the conflict between good and eril. Such a situation is novel in the world of fiction, and is worth dwelling upon as a, bit of subtle psychology. Between the conflict between good and eril. All se painted with skill and sympathy, and the book as a whole is really a remarkable one."—Critic.

"A very clever story.

Wine Manfarlane's landable ambition to write from the local and with "A very clever story. . . Miss Macfarlane's laudable ambition to write from the inside has proved min-that she can write most entertainingly from the outside. . . The charm of the story is in the bright, here telling of it, its constant piquancy, its occasional pathos. Under all its lighter features one can see that its informal spirit is a serious one."—Toronto West.

THE NEW IVORINE BINDING.

A remarkable and beautiful style of binding prepared especially for a number of VOLUMES FOR GIFTS. A fine engraving of perfect finish is printed by a secret process upon the "Ivorine," a material which closely resembles ivory in every particular. This then has a title embossed upon it, and is mounted upon rough white drawing-paper or heavy antique paper, in colors.

The whole, with a "ragged edge" and a knot of silk-andmetal cord, forms a dainty cover of great novelty.

Brooks Adams.

THE EMANCIPATION OF MASSACHUSETTS. By Brooks Adams. 1 vol. crown 8vo.

CONTENTS: The Migration; The Antinomians; The Cambridge Platform; The Anabaptists; The Quakers; The Scire-Facias; The Witchcraft; Brattle Church; Harvard College; The Lawyers; The Revolution.

Mr. Brooks Adams's study of Massachusetts history has convinced him that certain important aims and objects of the early settlers of that State have been hitherto ignored or very inadequately recognized. In this book he attempts to point out and illustrate these, and to show the steps and agencies by which Massachusetts was emancipated from the ecclesiastical and political narrowness, bigotry, and intolerance, which he claims dominated the colony down to the Revolution. His book is vigorously written and challenges careful study.

Louis Agassiz.

A Journey in Brazil. By Louis Agassiz and Elizabeth C. Agassiz. With eight full-page Illustrations, many smaller ones, and a new Map, prepared expressly for this edition. 1 vol. 12mo, price reduced from $5.00 to $2.50.

A new and cheaper edition of a work which the Pall Mall Gazette pronounced "a most charming and instructive volume." The New York Tribune ascribed to it "a high degree of interest in the richness of its details concerning the manners and customs, social life, and natural scenery of Brazil, its animated and often picturesque narrative, and the graceful freedom and simplicity of its style'

A new and uniform edition of the Works and LIFE of LOTS AGASSIZ, including

LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE, edited by ELIZABETH C. AGASSIZ. With Portraits and Illustrations. In two volumes, 12mo, $4.00. METHODS OF STUDY IN NATURAL HISTORY. Illustrated. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.50.

GEOLOGICAL SKETCHES. First and Second Series. In two volumes, 12mo, $1.50 each.

A Journey in Brazil. Described above.

The set, six volumes, cloth, $10.00.

This new edition of Agassiz's Works and Life brings into attractive form for libraries a singularly interesting biography, an admirable book of travel, and three volumes in which many important facts of geological science and suggestions for scientific study are stated with the remarkable clearness and enthusiasm which made Professor Agassiz so successful and charming a teacher.

Elizabeth Akers.

THE SILVER BRIDGE, and Other Poems. By ELIZABETH AKERS. 1 vol. 16mo.

It is several years since Mrs. Akers has published a volume of poetry. During this time she has continued to write, and now she gathers into a book the lyrics, ballads, and narrative poems which she has thus produced. Those who have read her poetry previously published will understand how attractive a volume is here promised.

American Commonwealths.

A series of volumes narrating the history of those States of the Union which have a striking political, social, or economical history. Edited by Horace E. Scudder.

New York. By Ellis H. Roberts, author of "Government Revenue." With a Map. 2 vols.

New York, by its geographical position and size, its settlement, its vast commercial and industrial development, and its varied political changes, has a history of conspicuous interest. Though lacking some features peculiar to others of the United States, on the whole its history is perhaps fuller than that of any other State in the various elements of political and social experience which form so large a part of human history. Mr. Roberts, the well-known editor of the Utica Herald, has so familiar knowledge of the origin and growth of the State, and is so well fitted by his intimate acquaintance with public affairs, that his book is certain to be an excellent history of New York and a very valuable addition to the series to which it belongs.

American Men of Letters.

Brief biographies of distinguished American authors. Edited by Charles Dudley Warner.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. By JAMES BACH McMaster, author of a "History of the People of the United States." With a steel Portrait. 1 vol. 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

Franklin is generally thought of as a sagacious statesman, an accomplished diplomat, a philosopher, an inventor, but not as a man of letters. Yet he was one of the most prolific and most effective writers of his time, and if his fame as a philosopher and statesman had been less, his Autobiography and essays on political, historical, philosophical, and moral subjects would have gained for him the literary renown to which they justly entitle him. Professor Mc-Master, whose History of the People of the United States has made him famous, will portray Franklin's qualities and achievements as a man of letters; and his book cannot fail to be one of the most engaging of the series to which it belongs.

The following volumes have already appeared in this series:—

WASHINGTON IRVING. By CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

By Horace E. Scudder. Noah Webster.

HENRY D. THOREAU. By FRANK B. SANBORN.

GEORGE RIPLEY. By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

J. FENIMORE COOPER. By T. R. LOUNSBURY.

MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI. By T. W. HIGGINSON.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON. By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

EDGAR ALLAN POE. By GEORGE E. WOODBERRY.

N. P. WILLIS. By HENRY A. BEERS. Each volume, with Portrait, 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

American Statesmen.

Brief biographies of men conspicuous in the political history of the United States. Edited by John T. Morse, Jr.

THOMAS H. BENTON. By THEODORE ROOSEVELT. 1 vol. 16ma gilt top, $1.25.

A biography of this distinguished Southern statesman, whose long and eventful political career covered a most interesting period in American politics, will be included in this series. It is by Theodore Roosevelt, who has already shown himself an excellent writer, and who is considered one of the most able of our younger political leaders. Mr. Benton's life gives him an opportunity to combine his powers as a writer and a political student, — the result of which should be of unusual interest.

Henry Clay was so conspicuous a figure in American politics, and was so intimately connected with the important industrial, financial and political questions which claimed consideration during the long term of his public life, that he eminently deserves to be included in the list of American Statesmen. Besides, he was a man of so large a nature and of so marvelous fascination that his memory is peculiarly dear to multitudes of Americans. The story of his life as related by Mr. Schurz cannot fail to be equally interesting and instructive. The signal ability of Mr. Schurz, his profound understanding of the principles, history, and public men of the United States, and his remarkable candor, assure a work of unusual value.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. By HENRY CABOT LODGE. 2 vols. 16m0, gilt top, $2.50.

This work will call attention to a part of Washington's great public service not hitherto adequately recognized, namely, his sagacious and far-seeing statesmanship. His counsel and influence in the domain of politics were hardly, if at all, less potent and judicious than his authority and achievements in war and in guiding a divided and often disheartened people. Mr. Lodge has made a very careful study of the subject, and his previous works in this series guarantee his success in portraying Washington as a statesman.

President Van Buren's ability, his long and intimate familiarity with political movements and questions, and the great importance of many subjects which were debated and decided in his day, lend to the story of his public career a peculiar interest. Mr. Dorsheimer is an admirer of Van Buren, and his own political and literary experience will enable him to describe the multitude of topics and the many dramatic political situations in which Van Buren took part.

PATRICK HENRY. By Moses Coit Tyler. ı vol. 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

Patrick Henry is generally regarded only as a great political ora-But in fact he contributed to inspiring, organizing, and sustaining the Revolution not only an eloquence which has made him immortal as an orator, but political counsel of a breadth, wisdom, and practical philosophy which entitle him to rank among American statesmen whom we do well to honor. Professor Tyler will surely delineate his career so that henceforth we shall appreciate his public services more adequately.

Edwin M. Bacon.

By Edwin M. Bacon. New Edition, A Dictionary of Boston. thoroughly revised. With an Introduction by George E. El-LIS, D. D. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $2.00.

This excellent book, which has been almost wholly rewritten, describes fully, minutely, and compactly the Boston of to-day, — its historic buildings and localities; its noteworthy edifices; its literary, historical, religious, charitable, and social institutions and organizations; its system of public schools and other educational facilities; its important commercial, financial, and manufacturing corporations; its newspapers, magazines, and publishing interests; the steam and horse railways which serve the city; the various steamship lines which run therefrom; its harbor and the islands contained in it, — in a word, whatever of the organized activity and the external development of Boston one wishes to learn, this Dictionary tells; and the alphabetical arrangement makes its wealth of information easily accessible.

Mr. Bacon has for many years been conspicuously identified with the press of Boston, and his intimate knowledge of the city and his excellent style render this book at once exceedingly valuable and interesting.

Cabinet Edition of Poets.

The several volumes heretofore published in Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s Diamond Edition, which has had a remarkable popularity, are now brought out in a different form and more attractive binding.

Calendars for 1887.

Eight Calendars for 1887, namely: —

Browning Calendar.

Emerson Calendar.

Hawthorne Calendar.

Holmes Calendar.

Longfellow Calendar.

LOWELL CALENDAR.

WHITNEY CALENDAR.

WHITTIER CALENDAR.

Of these the Browning and Hawthorne Calendars are new. All contain selections for the year from the several authors, and indicate the day of the week upon which each day of the year will fall, the consecutive number of each day of the year, the days on which the moon is new and full, the anniversaries of noted events and of the birth of famous men, and the great ecclesiastical and civil days, and give practical information respecting rates of postage, and measures of length, weight, and capacity. The calendars are mounted on attractive decorated cards. All except the Whitney Calendar have portraits and other artistic designs drawn from the authors' residences, or from characters or incidents in their writings. Printed in colors. Price, 50 cents each.

N. B. The price of our Calendars has heretofore been $1.00 each. Attention is invited to the beauty and attractiveness of these Calendars, which, though no less artistic than those for previous years, are offered at half the price.

Francis J. Child.

POEMS OF RELIGIOUS SORROW, COMFORT, COUNSEL, AND ASPIRATION. Collected and edited by Francis J. Child, Professor in Harvard University. New Edition. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Professor Child, widely known as the accomplished professor of English Literature in Harvard University, has brought together in the above-named book an unusually varied and excellent collection of poems relating to trial and bereavement, and inspired by religious trust and consolation.

Benjamin B. Comegys.

THIRTEEN WEEKS OF PRAYERS FOR THE FAMILY. Compiled from Many Sources. By Benjamin B. Comegys. In one volume.

Mr. Comegys has compiled, from various sources, short, earnest, and comprehensive prayers for use in families. He has arranged them for morning and evening devotion for thirteen weeks, and has added special prayers for occasions and anniversaries. The quiet, sincere tone of the book, its freedom from extravagance of phrase, and its purity of diction, will commend it to those who wish to use forms of prayer that shall have both variety and a general harmony of tone.

Joseph Cook.

ORIENT. Being the Tenth Volume of Boston Monday Lectures. By Joseph Cook. With a fine steel portrait. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.50.

This book comprises six of the Lectures given by Mr. Cook in 1883. They treat Palestine, Egypt, and the Future of Islam; Advanced Thought in India; Keshub Chunder Sen and Hindu Theism; Woman's Work for Woman in Asia; Japan, the Self-Reformed Hermit Nation; and Australia, the Pacific Ocean, and International Reform. The Preludes to the Lectures discuss National Aid to Education; Revivals, True and False; Limited Municipal Suffrage for Women; Religion in Colleges, at Home and Abroad; Foreign Criticism of America; International Duties of Christendom. In five appendices Mr. Cook speaks of the Taj Mahal, In the Himalayas, The Death of Keshub Chunder Sen, The Classical Associations of Kioto, and proposes Twenty-Four Questions on New Japan. It is altogether unnecessary to speak of the variety, the vigor, the logical and rhetorical power, of the book.

Susan Fenimore Cooper.

Rural Hours. By Susan Fenimore Cooper. A New Edition, abridged. 1 vol. 16mo.

Miss Cooper's "Rural Hours," when published several years ago, was received with great favor. Mrs. Sarah J. Hale said of it: "The scenery described so charmingly is that surrounding her own fair home in Cooperstown. Out of these simple materials Miss Cooper has formed one of the most interesting volumes of the day." And Professor Hart commended it as "an admirable portraiture of American out-door life, just as it is." Miss Cooper has now abridged the work considerably, by omitting some portions less likely to interest the present generation of readers. It forms so agreeable a book, so attractively written, that it is amply entitled to a fresh lease of life and popular favor.

Charles Egbert Craddock.

IN THE CLOUDS. A Novel. By CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK, author of "In the Tennessee Mountains," "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains," "Down the Ravine," etc. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

The scene of this remarkable story is in the mountain region of East Tennessee, in which most of the author's previous stories have been laid, and which is likely to be long regarded as the literary domain of Charles Egbert Craddock. Certainly it is treated with a perfect mastery and a tenderness which would indicate undoubted possession; and the characters of the new story, as of the earlier ones, belong to the author hardly less than does the majestic and beautiful landscape.

Christopher Pearse Cranch.

ARIEL AND CALIBAN. A new volume of Poems by Christopher Pearse Cranch. I vol. 16mo.

Mr. Cranch is so well known as a poet that a new volume of poems by him needs no commendation to lovers of genuine poetry. This book contains the verse written by Mr. Cranch during several years past, and will be found to embody the ripe results of his observation and reflection, illumined by imagination, and expressed in poetry wrought out with so faithful art and of such lyrical excellence that it ought to win a multitude of good readers.

THE ÆNEID OF VIRGIL. Translated into English Blank Verse by Christopher Pearse Cranch. New Edition. 1 vol. 8vo.

A new and less costly edition of Mr. Cranch's Æneid, which the Philadelphia Press pronounced "The best translation of the Æneid yet published." The New York Tribune remarked: "We do not hesitate to give the preference to Mr. Cranch's version over any translation of the Æneid with which we are acquainted."

Henry S. Dana.

HISTORY OF WOODSTOCK, VERMONT. By HENRY S. DANA. With several Portraits. 1 vol. 8vo.

The history of any typical New England town from its settlement, through the development of its self-governing town-meeting, its social, educational, and religious institutions; its patriotic response to the call for men in the Revolution, the War of 1812, and especially in the War for the Union,—this history is at once deeply interesting and profoundly instructive. Such a history is here presented of a Vermont town, and it will doubtless find not a few eager readers outside of the circle to which it naturally appeals with especial force.

F. O. C. Darley.

Twelve Outline Illustrations to the Evangeline of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. By F. O. C. Darley. New and cheaper edition. Quarto, $7.50.

Mr. Darley's illustrations of Evangeline have for years enjoyed great popularity. The large book containing them has been one of the most available and acceptable of gift-books, notably for weddings and birthdays. A new edition has been prepared, not with lithograph prints as heretofore, but with phototypes from Mr. Darley's original designs. The result is very gratifying; the illustrations are exact reproductions of the artist's drawings. The book is bound with great care, and is offered at a considerable reduction from the price of the former edition.

E. P. Dole.

TALKS ABOUT LAW. By E. P. Dole. In one volume.

If one were to sit down with a clear-headed lawyer of experience and ask of him questions, not concerning some special case, but concerning the general principles and processes of common law, he might receive some such information as Mr. Dole has given in this volume; but no lawyer who has not carefully considered what the person of ordinary intelligence desires to know regarding law would be likely to put the subject before him so lucidly, so comprehensively, and in so interesting a manner as Mr. Dole has done in this thoughtful and rational book.

Charlotte Dunning.

A STEP ASIDE. A Novel, by Charlotte Dunning. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

In some important respects this is one of the best novels recently written in this country. It is a story of New York life, in which both hero and heroine pass the ordeal of a strong and subtle temptation. The story is told with great skill, and is exceedingly interesting and wholesome, while the style is vigorous and effective.

English Dramatists.

THE DRAMATIC WORKS OF JOHN MARSTON. Edited by A. H. Bullen, B. A. In three volumes, octavo. Cloth. $9.00, the set. Large-Paper Edition, $12.00, net.

In this handsome Edition of the English Dramatists have already appeared the works of Marlowe, in three volumes; and the works of Middleton, in eight volumes. Under the very competent editorship of Mr. Bullen the edition is much the best that has ever appeared of the writings of the dramatists who flourished in England about the time of Shakespeare.

Edward Fitzgerald.

THE WORKS OF EDWARD FITZGERALD. Edited by M. KENNEY. In two vols. 8vo.

Mr. Edward Fitzgerald had a remarkable genius for translation. It was not unusual scholarship or skill in verbal and rhythmical gymnastics, but a marvelous power of appreciating the work he translated, and of reproducing it without loss either in thought or expression, frequently with a distinct gain in both. The volumes here announced will contain his translations of the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám, the Agamemnon of Æschylus, and other translations from the Greek and the Persian.

Octavius Brooks Frothingham.

The Life of William Henry Channing. By Octavius Brooks Frothingham, author of "George Ripley," "Transcendentalism in New England," etc. With a fine Portrait. 1 vol. crown 8vo.

Rev. William Henry Channing was one of the most noble and pure idealists ever produced in New England. His life, both in America and in England, was devoted to all movements and plans for the improvement of the condition, and the elevation of the aims, of mankind. The number and character of these movements, and the varied activity of Mr. Channing in them, give a singular interest to the story of his life, which Mr. Frothingham's admiring sympathy and practiced literary skill enable him to present in a very engaging manner.

William H. Furness.

THE STORY OF THE RESURRECTION TOLD ONCE MORE. With Remarks upon the Character of Jesus and the Historical Claims of the Four Gospels, and a Word upon Prayer. By WILLIAM H. FURNESS, D. D. A New Edition, with Additions. 1 vol. 16mo, gilt top, $1.00.

CONTENTS: — The Story of the Resurrection; The Decline of Faith; The Effect of a Mistaken Theology; The Mythical Theory; The Origin of the Gospels; Familiarity with the Bible; The Great Loss; Jesus from a Legendary Point of View; The Gospels: how to be Approached; The Gospels read between the Lines; God and Immortality; Conclusion; A Word upon Prayer.

This list of subjects treated by Dr. Furness will give an idea of the scope and aim of the book. It does not indicate the marvelously candid, truth-loving, spiritual character of the whole, which gives a peculiar and lofty charm to this book, as to all that Dr. Furness has written.

The Gentleman's Magazine Library.

The chief Contents of the "Gentleman's Magazine," from 1731 to 1868. Edited by G. LAURENCE GOMME, F. S. A. In fourteen volumes. Each volume, 8vo, $2.50; *Roxburgh, printed on hand-made paper, $3.50, net; *Large-Paper Edition, Roxburgh (50 copies), printed on hand-made paper, $6.00, net. Vol. 6. Archæology. Part II.

Single volumes sold in cloth only; the Roxburgh style and LARGE-PAPER EDITION are sold only by subscription for the entire set.

This volume is a continuation of the preceding valuable one on Archæology, and concludes the reprint of all the archæological papers contributed to The Gentleman's Magazine. It is divided into departments which treat of Stones and Stone Circles, Miscellaneous Antiquities (British Period), Early Anglo-Saxon Remains, Anglo-Saxon Local Antiquities, Anglo-Saxon Ornaments, etc., Late Anglo-Saxon Antiquities, and Scandinavian Antiquities. The volume also contains an Introduction and Notes by the editor, and a good Index. It will be of special interest to the antiquary and the historian.

Washington Gladden.

Applied Christianity. By Washington Gladden, author of "The Lord's Prayer," etc. Uniform with "The Lord's Prayer." I vol. 16mo, $1.25.

CONTENTS: — Christianity and Wealth; Is Labor a Commodity? The Strength and Weakness of Socialism; Is it Peace or War? The Laborers and the Churches; Three Dangers; Christianity and Social Science; Christianity and Popular Amusement; Christianity and Popular Education.

This is a peculiarly timely and significant book. It discusses some of the most important questions which agitate modern society and imperatively demand the most serious consideration; and it treats them with remarkable candor, a sincere purpose to get at the heart of the matter, and to summon all intelligent and patriotic men and women to aid in building a wiser and juster social life. Mr. Gladden is widely known as a writer of great thoughtfulness and suggestiveness on questions of social science.

THE LORD'S PRAYER. By WASHINGTON GLADDEN. New Edition. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.00.

Of this book the Lutheran Quarterly said: "Often as we offer this prayer, and much as we have studied over it to give proper expositions of it from the pulpit and in the catechism, we shall henceforth pray it more intelligently than we ever have before; nay, we have learned, we think, to pray better in all our supplications, and to comprehend more in them than has been our wont."

Nathaniel Hawthorne.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. New Fire-side Edition. In six volumes, 16mo, $10.00; half calf, $20.00. (Sold only in sets.)

THE SAME. Little Classic Edition. This will be brought out in a new and more desirable binding. 25 vols. 18mo, $1.00 each; the set, $25.00; half calf or half morocco, $50.00; tree calf, $75.00.

Caroline Hazard.

A Memoir of Professor J. Lewis Diman. By Caroline Hazard. With a Steel Portrait. In one volume, 16mo.

Professor Diman was in many respects so admirable a man that the story of his life ought to be both instructive and engaging. An accomplished scholar, a vigorous thinker, an effective writer, an eloquent speaker, a successful teacher, and a man of strong and ennobling influence,—all who knew him personally, and all who have heard him on the platform and in the pulpit, or have read his important work on "The Theistic Argument," and his "Orations, Essays, and Sermons," will be grateful to Miss Hazard for describing a career and character so exemplary and inspiriting.

Sarah Orne Jewett.

A WHITE HERON, and other Stories. By SARAH ORNE JEWETT, author of "A Country Doctor," "Deephaven," etc. 1 vol. 18mo, new and effective style of binding, cloth, $1.25.

CONTENTS: — A White Heron; The Gray Man; Farmer Finch; Marsh Rosemary; The Dulham Ladies; A Business Man; Mary and Martha; The News from Petersham; The Two Browns.

Miss Jewett's short stories hold a very distinct and high place in American literature. Their admirable pictures of New England scenes and characters, their generous appreciation of all excellence, even under uncouth appearances, their quiet and kindly humor, and their graceful ease of narrative, give to them a peculiar charm. This new book will not fail of a hearty welcome from Miss Jewett's many readers.

Leonard A. Jones.

A TREATISE ON LIENS. By LEONARD A. Jones, author of Treatises on "Mortgages," "Railroad Securities," etc. 1 vol. 8vo, law sheep.

Among the particular liens treated of in this work are those of Attorneys, Banks, Carriers, Corporations, Innkeepers, Laborers, Mechanics, Vendors of Real Property, Vendors of Personal Property, Stoppage in Transitu, etc., etc.

Mr. Jones is so favorably known by his works on Mortgages, Pledges, Railroad Securities, etc., that this work will be warmly welcomed by the profession. The thoroughness, care, and lucidity which characterize all of Mr. Jones's books render them peculiarly valuable and justly popular.

Malcolm Kerr.

THE FAR INTERIOR. By MALCOLM KERR. With Illustrations. In 2 volumes, 8vo.

A new book of African travel, describing a journey from Cape Town northward to the centre of Africa. The fact that this particular field has not been carefully explored lends special interest to Mr. Kerr's book, which narrates with vivacity the events of his expedition, describes the country through which he passed and the various tribes he found, and is made additionally attractive by illustrations.

Lucy Larcom.

Beckonings for Every Day. A Calendar of Thought. Arranged by Lucy Larcom, editor of "Breathings of the Better Life," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

Miss Larcom has here gathered, from a very wide range of authors, passages of special value for help, suggestion, encouragement, and consolation. They are not "elegant extracts," but brave, wise, and inspiring sentences from the world's bravest, wisest, and most inspired souls. They are arranged for every day of the year, and are excellent for all days of all years.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

THE COMPLETE POETICAL AND PROSE WORKS OF HENRY WADS-WORTH LONGFELLOW. Riverside Edition, from entirely new electrotype plates. With five Portraits. In eleven volumes, crown octavo, cloth, $1.50 each; the set, $16.50; half calf, $30.25; half levant, $44.00.

This is an entirely new and complete edition of Mr. Longfellow's writings, including his Prose Works in two volumes, his Poems in six, and his translation of Dante's Divina Commedia in three. It is intended to embrace all that Mr. Longfellow included in the latest edition of his works, together with all those pieces which have appeared since his death, with the sanction of his representatives. The text used is the last revised by the author, and is printed with scrupulous care to insure accuracy. Foot-notes to the poems show the various readings, as found in each case in the form of the poem as it appeared when first printed in a volume. Head-notes are frequently prefixed to poems, giving information respecting their suggestion and composition. It is designed to make this edition not only complete, but systematic in arrangement, and furnished with all literary, historical, biographical, and bibliographical equipment necessary to a full understanding and enjoyment of Mr. Longfellow's writings. •

The volumes contain about four hundred pages each, printed in large type, and bound in simple and tasteful style.

There are several fine Steel Portraits of Mr. Longfellow, from approved paintings and photographs, representing him at different periods of his literary career.

The publication commences in September, and will be completed before the Holidays.

THE SAME. Large-Paper Edition. Limited to five hundred copies, which are numbered. In paper, press-work, and every mechanical detail, it is as perfect as the Riverside Press can produce. The form is that of the Large-Paper Edition of Mr. Stedman's "Poets of America," and the volumes are bound in a simple but attractive style, in harmony with the other mechanical details. Price, $4.00 per volume.

N. B. The entire Large-Paper edition has been subscribed for by the Trade and by individuals, and no copies can now be sold by the publishers.

James Russell Lowell.

Democracy, and other Addresses. By James Russell Lowell. 1 vol. 16mo.

CONTENTS: — Democracy; Garfield; Stanley; Fielding; Coleridge; Books and Libraries; Wordsworth.

This volume contains the profound address delivered by Mr. Lowell at the Midland Institute, on Democracy, which is unquestionably one of the most thoughtful and cogent statements ever made of the principles and objects of republican government. To this are added several other addresses made in England, of singular learning and felicity; and the admirable address delivered at the opening of a public library in Chelsea, Mass.

Mrs. Madison's Life and Letters.

Memoirs and Letters of Mrs. Madison. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Mrs. Madison was not only the "first lady" of the country during her husband's term as President, but was one of the most engaging women who have made Washington a social as well as political centre. She is one of the charming historic women of America. Her letters, gathered in this book, and the connecting passages, are bright and contain not a little fresh material concerning the subjects and persons that attracted public attention in Mrs. Madison's time. They make more real our history for the early part of this century, and throw a new and pleasing light upon it.

T. C. Mendenhall.

A CENTURY OF ELECTRICITY. By T. C. MENDENHALL. With illustrations. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

The story of the discovery of the properties and uses of electricity seems almost to belong to the domain of romance and magic. It is one of the great marvels of the century, and, if fitly told, the story cannot fail to be extremely interesting. Professor Mendenhall is widely known as one of the most learned and experienced of living students of this subject. He knows all that has hitherto been discovered in regard to electricity, and in this book he presents its history and science, in a popular form.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell.

ROLAND BLAKE. A Novel, by S. Weir Mitchell, M. D., author of "In War Time," etc. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Dr. Mitchell's previous novel, "In War Time," won for him a high reputation as a novelist both in England and America. It evinced great skill in the development and discrimination of character, an unusual degree and quality of thoughtfulness, with the more common talent for plot and incident, and an effective style. His new story possesses all the excellences of the former, and the greater ease of narration which practice gives. Like that it is connected with the War for the Union, but not wholly. It promises to be one of the more noteworthy novels of the season.

Omar Khayyám.

THE RUBÁIYÁT OF OMAR KHAYYÁM. Translated by EDWARD FITZGERALD. Illustrated by ELIHU VEDDER. New, smaller edition, with designs reproduced in phototype. Quarto, tastefully bound, $12.50.

The remarkable series of designs made by Mr. Vedder to accompany and illustrate the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám, have won an undisputed place among the greatest productions of modern art. These designs have now been reproduced in the same manner as before, only on a smaller scale, so that they may be afforded at a price which will bring them within the reach of a much larger number of art lovers. They lose none of their marvelous excellence in this form.

Catherine Owen.

TEN DOLLARS ENOUGH. By CATHERINE OWEN. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.00.

The writer of this little book belongs to the same order of public benefactors with the man who makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before. She shows how one dollar may either be made to do the service of two, or may by skill and care be made to produce a result (in the way of food and housekeeping) not merely twice as good as is commonly realized, but infinitely more satisfactory both to the palate and to the family happiness. She tells a pleasant story, and weaves into it recipes, descriptions, directions for cooking and housekeeping, admirable for their clearness and for their salutary effect on the family life. This story appeared originally as a serial in Good Housekeeping, and it has received the unqualified commendation of many who have tested the recipes and followed the suggestions.

James Parton.

Humorous Poetry of the English Language. From Chaucer to Saxe. Edited by James Parton. With Notes and Portraits. Household Edition. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.75; full gilt, $2.25.

This book, which embraces most of the famous humorous poems in English and American literature, is now added to the popular Household Edition of poets. It has so large a variety and so comprehensive a collection of humorous poetry that it ought to have a general circulation, to promote "the gayety of nations."

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

THE MADONNA OF THE TUBS. By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, author of "The Gates Ajar," "Beyond the Gates," etc. With forty-three full-page and smaller illustrations, including figure, landscape, and marine subjects, by Ross Turner and George H. Clements. I vol. 12mo, tastefully bound.

"The Madonna of the Tubs" is one of Miss Phelps's most characteristic short stories. The scene and persons belong to the seacoast of Massachusetts, and afford ample opportunities for effective illustration. Mr. Ross Turner and Mr. George H. Clements have carefully studied both the scenery and the characters on the spot, and the result is a series of designs which not only illustrate the engaging story, but are of great artistic value and charm. The story, pictures, and mechanical execution make a very desirable, yet inexpensive, gift-book.

John Norton Pomeroy.

*An Introduction to the Constitutional Law of the United States. Especially designed for Students, General and Professional. By John Norton Pomerov, LL. D. Ninth Edition, revised and enlarged by Edmund H. Bennett, LL. D. Dean of the Boston University Law School. 1 vol. 8vo, law sheep, $5.00, net.

Pomeroy's "Constitutional Law" has for many years held the first rank as a work on the principles of Constitutional interpretation. All the purely Constitutional questions which have ever been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States are discussed and the results stated. Chief Justice Chase pronounced it "a very valuable contribution to the study of Constitutional law, and to the right understanding of the National Constitution. The Nation, of New York, commended it as "combining a judicial exposition of the text of the written Constitution with a statesmanlike investigation of the source from which it derives its authority as the primary act of public law."

This important work has just been carefully revised and considerably enlarged by Judge Bennett, Dean of the Boston University Law School.

*Lectures on International Law in Time of Peace. By John Norton Pomeroy. Edited by Theodore Salisbury Woolsey, Professor of International Law in the Yale Law School. 1 vol. 8vo, law sheep, $5.00, net.

Contents: — Definition, Nature, and Sources of International Law; Subjects of International Law: States; Objects of International Law: Rights and Duties of States flowing from Independence and Sovereignty; The Sovereignty of a State over its Inland and Coast Waters, — the State in its Relations to Commerce; Jurisdiction of a State over Persons and Things, — Extradition and Intervention; Rights flowing from the Equality of States, — the Right of its Subjects, — Protection; The Right of Recognition; State Ceremonial: the Right of a State to External Marks of Honor and Respect; Treaties: Rights and Duties which they Confer, — Varieties and Interpretation; The Right of Embassy.

A work of positive value on account of its clear statement of the leading principles of International Law, and of the various rights and duties springing from these. It will be read with great interest by students of international politics and relations as well as by students of law.

Riverside Literature Series.

*Stories, Essays, and Poems, by the best American authors, for schools and families. To be published in monthly numbers from September, 1886, to May, 1887.

Eighteen numbers of this series have already been issued, and all of them have been used in schools, with admirable results in reading and in the study of literature. The nine numbers to be issued the coming season are as follows:—

- 19, 20. The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. In two Parts. With an additional chapter narrating briefly the story of Franklin's Life from the point at which the Autobiography stops to its close, and explanatory biographical and historical Notes.
- N.B. Nos. 19 and 20 will also be bound together in boards, forming an admirable volume of the Fourth Reader grade. Price, 40 cents, net.
 - 21. Poor Richard's Almanac, and other selections from the writings of Benjamin Franklin. With Notes.
 - 22, 23. TANGLEWOOD TALES. Stories from Ancient Mythology. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. In two Parts. With Notes.
- N. B. Nos. 22 and 23 will also be bound together in boards, forming an admirable volume of the Fourth Reader grade. Price, 40 cents, net.
 - 24. Washington's Words. Containing Washington's Farewell Address to the Army, his famous Farewell Address at the expiration of his term as President, and other hardly less remarkable productions. With Notes.
 - 25, 26. THE GOLDEN LEGEND. By HENRY W. LONGFELLOW. In two Parts. With full Notes by S. Arthur Bent, A. M.
- N. B. Nos. 25 and 26 will also be bound together in boards. Price, 40 cents, net.
 - 27. SELECTIONS FROM THOREAU. Including Emerson's Biographical Sketch of Thoreau, and Essays on the Succession of Forest Trees and Wild Apples.

The price of the Riverside Literature Series, in paper covers, is 15 cents net each number. Subscriptions for the forthcoming nine monthly issues, to be forwarded postage paid, will be taken at $1.25, net.

The Riverside Pocket Series.

Ten little books which have already had great currency are here brought out in a new and cheap, yet tasteful, style, in order that they may reach the multitude of readers. The list is as follows:—

DEEPHAVEN. By SARAH ORNE JEWETT.

EXILE. From "Little Classics."

ADIRONDACK STORIES. By P. DEMING.

A GENTLEMAN OF LEISURE. By EDGAR FAWCETT.

THE SNOW-IMAGE AND OTHER TWICE-TOLD TALES. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

WATCH AND WARD. By HENRY JAMES.

In the Wilderness. By Charles Dudley Warner.

A STUDY OF HAWTHORNE. By GEORGE PARSONS LATHROP.

DETMOLD. By W. H. BISHOP.

THE STORY OF A MINE. By BRET HARTE.

These books will be bound in flexible cloth, and sold at Fifty Cents each.

Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer.

HENRY H. RICHARDSON AND HIS WORKS. By Mrs. SCHUYLER VAN RENSSELAER. Illustrated with thirty full-page views of the principal Buildings designed by Mr. Richardson, reproduced from photographs, and about fifty smaller sketches; together with a Portrait and interior View of Studio. In one volume.

Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer, whose writings on American Architecture have attracted much attention in recent numbers of "The Century Magazine," and elsewhere, is preparing an account of the life and work of the late H. H. Richardson, the architect, which will contain thirty full-page views of the principal buildings designed by him, and fifty smaller pen and ink sketches, some of them showing the detail of his architectural work. The latter illustrations will be incorporated in the text. The volume will also have a portrait of Mr. Richardson, as a frontispiece, and an interior view of his celebrated studio. But 500 copies of the volume will be printed. Its mechanical features will be of the best description.

It may be added that a sketch of the life and achievements of a man who has left such lasting impression on architecture in America will be sure of appreciation from every one interested in the progress of his art.

William Shakespeare.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. Riverside Edition. Edited by RICHARD GRANT WHITE. With Glossarial, Historical, and Explanatory Notes. A new issue in 6 volumes, octavo, on somewhat thinner paper than heretofore, tastefully bound. Price of the set, $10.00.

This will be a very desirable and inexpensive six-volume edition of Shakespeare, and can hardly fail to be very popular.

The Riverside Edition of Shakespeare, with Mr. White's concise and admirable Notes, will be published in three forms: in 3 vols. crown 8vo, gilt top, $7.50; half calf, $12.00; in 6 vols. 8vo (new edition), $10.00; half calf, $18.00; and in 6 vols. 8vo (previous edition), $12.00; half calf, $20.00.

THE BLACKFRIARS SHAKESPEARE. The Histories, Tragedies, and Comedies of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, as presented at the Globe and Blackfriars Theatres, circa 1591–1623. Being the text furnished the players, in parallel pages with the first revised text of 1623, with Critical Observations.

This edition of Shakespeare's Plays is brought out under the auspices of the Shakespeare Society of New York. The arrangement of the Players' text in parallel pages with the 1623 text of Heminge and Condell will illustrate the growth of a Shakespearean play. Critical introductions will be furnished by persons who have carefully investigated this field of Shakespeare study, and in every case will be exclusive of material within the range of the critical notices of other editions. The first play will be "The Merry Wives of Windsor," prepared under the care of Mr. Appleton Morgan, whose special study for years has been the phenomena of this building of the Shakespeare Plays.

Each Play will be issued separately, and will form a handsome octavo volume of from 180 to 280 pages, printed on laid paper, and bound in boards, uncut. The edition will be limited to five hundred copies, and the price to subscribers will be $2.00 a volume or . Play.

F. Hopkinson Smith.

Well-Worn Roads in Spain, Holland, and Italy; or, The Travels of a Painter in search of the Picturesque. Containing sixteen full-page Phototypes and many smaller pen and ink sketches of Beautiful, Curious, and Historical Objects, — Buildings, Streets, Wharves, etc. By F. Hopkinson Smith, author of "Old Lines in New Black and White," etc. With descriptive letter-press by the Artist. In a folio volume, tastefully bound and stamped.

Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith has already given ample proof of his power, fertility, and genius as an artist. In this book he appears as author also, having written fifteen chapters describing incidents of travel in Spain, Holland, and Italy. These he has illustrated with sixteen water-color drawings, which have been admirably reproduced (by the process used so successfully with Mr. Vedder's remarkable illustrations to Omar Khayyám's Rubáiyát), and printed in different tints of ink; and with head and tail pieces for each chapter, and many additional pen and ink sketches scattered through the text. Altogether it forms an unusually artistic and attractive Holiday volume.

OLD LINES IN NEW BLACK AND WHITE. Twelve Illustrations of Lines from Poems of Holmes, Lowell, and Whittier, reproduced by the phototype process from designs in charcoal by F. Hopkinson Smith. Large-Paper Edition, in portfolio (measuring about 16 × 22 inches), with the illustrations printed on Japanese paper, mounted on heavy plate paper; and forming a remarkably beautiful work. Edition limited to one hundred copies.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

THE COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON, Poet Laureate. New Riverside Edition. With fine Portrait. 6 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, $6.00. (Sold only in sets.)

This is in many important features the best edition yet produced in America of Tennyson's Works. The page, type, paper, printing, and binding are all of such character as to make the set altogether desirable for the library, and worthy of the rare excellence of the poetry it contains.

Celia Thaxter.

THE CRUISE OF THE MYSTERY, AND OTHER POEMS. By CELIA THAXTER, author of "Drift-Weed," "Among the Isles of Shoals," etc. Parchment cover. 1 vol. 16mo.

This volume is quite different from the two books of poems Mrs. Thaxter has previously published. Those celebrated the glory, majesty, beauty, and mystery of the sea. This sings of the mystery and beauty of human love, the experience of human life. The charm of the subject and the added charm of the song lend peculiar attractions to the lyrics in this little volume, which will be a peculiarly dainty piece of bookmaking.

Edith M. Thomas.

THE ROUND YEAR. By EDITH M. THOMAS, author of "A New Year's Masque," etc. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

CONTENTS: — Nature and the Native; A Spring Opening; Under the Sky; The Rain and the Fine Weather; The Sensitive Plant; Grass: A Rumination; The Fly-Trapper; Running-Water Notes; Along an Inland Beach; A Summer Holinight; In Praise of the Biackberry; Mondamin; The Solitary Bee; The Return of a Native; Autumn and the Muse; Gossamer; Thistle-Down and Silver-Rod; Where It Listeth; Ember Days; Flake White; Frost and Moonshine; Hearth-Fine.

Miss Thomas has a poet's fine sense of Nature in all its multitudinous aspects and its varied life. To this she adds the faculty and habit of close observation, and the literary skill to describe clearly and adequately. Several of the papers in "The Round Year" have delighted readers of the ATLANTIC and other periodicals, and all of them are of a character to gratify lovers of nature and of literature.

The Tile Club.

THE BOOK OF THE TILE CLUB. A Holiday Volume, containing about thirty full-page phototypes of representative paintings by members of The TILE CLUB of New York. With a Sketch of the Club and descriptions of the Pictures. In one volume, atlas quarto, beautifully bound and stamped with an artistic die designed by Mr. STANFORD WHITE.

It would be difficult to name any Holiday Book ever produced in America having more varied artistic attractions than this. Many of the most eminent artists of the country are represented in it by some of their most successful works, and each artist has selected his own pictures. The artists represented are:

Abbey, Bunce, Gifford, Chase,
Dielman, Frost, Parsons, Maynard,
Millet, Reinhart, Vedder, St. Gaudens,
Quartley, Boughton, Stanford White, F. Hopkinson Smith.
Weir, Sarony,

The text will be illustrated with more than one hundred cuts from pen and ink drawings made by the different members of the Club especially for this purpose, and also with pen and ink portraits of some of the members, and portraits from bas-reliefs of others, so that the portraits of most of the prominent members will be given

The text is written by F. Hopkinson Smith, the well-known artist, author of "Well Worn Roads," and Edward Strahan, the art critic. The cover and title page have been designed by Mr. Stanford White, and the lining paper by Mr. George H. Maynard From this statement it will be seen that The Book of The Tile Club is to be a work of unusually rich and varied attractions.

An Edition de Luxe of this work will be issued, limited to one hundred numbered copies. The illustrations will be printed on Japanese paper and the book bound in elegant style. Further details will be announced later.

Jones Very.

Essays and Poems. By Jones Very. New and complete Edition. With a fine phototype portrait, an Introduction by Rev. C. A. Bartol, D. D., and a Memoir by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D. I vol. 16mo.

Mr. Very was one of the most spiritual and poetic of poets, and also a writer of prose admirable in quality though small in amount. An edition of his works is in preparation, which will embrace all his poetical writings, including many poems not contained in the volume published two years ago, and three prose essays, on Epic Poetry, Shakespeare, and Hamlet. The Introduction by Dr. Bartol and the Memoir by Dr. Clarke will aid in calling attention to the literary productions of a man who was not only a poet and thinker, but who had a genius for saintliness.

Annie Wall.

THE STORY OF SORDELLO, told in Prose. By Annie Wall. 1 vol. 16mo, gilt top.

Sordello is generally accounted the most obscure and puzzling of Mr. Browning's poems, and any aid to understanding it will be heartily welcomed. Miss Annie Wall has studied it with great care, and in this little book she gives a historical interpretation of it. Browning Clubs and all students of Browning will find it peculiarly helpful.

E. M. Wherry.

A Comprehensive Commentary on the Quran: Comprising Sale's Translation and Preliminary Discourse, with additional Notes and Emendations. Together with a complete Index to the Text, Preliminary Discourse, and Notes. By Rev. E. M. Wherry. Volumes each 8vo, gilt top, Vol. III. $4.50; Vol. IV. $4.00.

These volumes continue the scholarly commentary on the Koran by Mr. Wherry, and like those which preceded them consist of a translation of the Koran with notes of the fullest description, upon all passages which are obscure, or upon which commentators have differed, or which refer to ancient customs, etc., which need explanation for a correct understanding of the text. The book appeals in particular to the student of Eastern religions, — a subject to which so much attention is given at present.

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney.

HOLY TIDES. By MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY, author of "Bonny-borough," "The Gayworthys," "Leslie Goldthwaite," "Pansies," etc. Square 16mo, beautifully printed and bound.

Mrs. Whitney is not only one of the most popular story-writers of America, but one of its truest poets, though she has written but 'little in verse. In "Holy Tides" she celebrates the "red-letter" days of the Church, — Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Whitsunday, Trinity and Easter, — days which commemorate events notable in the religious experience of mankind. The poems are animated by a very devout spirit, and will surely appeal both strongly and tenderly to all who share Mrs. Whitney's faith and aspiration.

SEED-DOWN. By Mrs. A. D. T. WHITNEY. I vol.

In this volume Mrs. Whitney has collected a number of her short stories and sketches, which have been published in various periodicals. It will include "Zerub Throop's Experiment," "Buttered Crusts," "My Mother put it on," "Girl Noblesse," "The Little Savages of Beetle Rock," and other pieces, some for young people, some for older, but all full of the kindly, sunshiny spirit which Mrs. Whitney puts into everything she writes. It will be an excellent book for a Christmas or birthday present.

Rev. William Burnett Wright.

Ancient Cities, from the Dawn to the Daylight. By Rev. William Burnett Wright. I vol. 16mo.

CONTENTS: — Ur, the City of Saints; Nineveh, the City of Soldiers; Babylon, the City of Sensualists; Memphis, the City of the Dead; Alexandria, the City of Creed-Makers; Petra, the City of Shams; Damascus, the City of Substance; Tyre, the City of Merchants; Athens, the City of Culture; Rome, the City of the Law-Givers; Samaria, the City of Politicians; Susa, the City of the Satraps; Jerusalem, the City of the Pharisees; New Jerusalem, the City of God.

The scope of the book is well indicated by the contents. Mr. Wright has incorporated, in a popular style, the results of wide reading and special study concerning these famous cities, the nations which they represented, and the civilizations and ideas which they embodied. It is a book of much value and interest, and should be in all public and Sunday-school libraries.

Lillie Chace Wyman.

POVERTY GRASS. Short Stories, by LILLIE CHACE WYMAN. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

CONTENTS: — Hester's Dower; Saint or Sinner; Luke Gardiner's Love; The Child of the State; "A Stranger, yet at Home"; And Joe; Bridget's Story; Valentine's Chance.

Many of these stories have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, where they have attracted marked attention by their power of narrative, and yet more by the philanthropic spirit which was manifest in a high degree. Not merely a general wish that the hard lot of the poor, especially poor mill-operatives, might be made easier; but an intense purpose to show the features and causes of their misery, and summon society to look at them, think of them, sympathize with them, and organize a better future for them. The writer's familiar knowledge of mill life in New England gives peculiar value to her descriptions, and her literary skill makes her stories eminently readable.

THE HOLIDAY BOOK OF THE SEASON.

Scott's I	the Lay	of	the	Last	Minstrel
-----------	---------	----	-----	------	----------

An entirely new edition of this famous and popular poem, from new plates, with nearly one hundred new illustrations by leading American artists. Elegantly and appro-Priately bound, with full gilt edges. In box. Cloth Padded-calf, tree-calf or antique morocco A few copies in crushed levant, with silk linings	10.00
"The Lay of the Last Minstrel" is larger than its predecessors, the Holiday volumes published under Mr. Anthony's supervision, and its broad and handsome pages offer very favorable opportunities for the display of the illustrations, which are masterpieces of modern engraving.

The immediate and permanent success of "The Lady of the Lake," "Marmion," etc, has encouraged the publishers to bring out this not less popular and famous poem. It is produced in the same style, and with the same careful and elaborate style of illustration, regardless of cost, while Mr. Anthony's skilful supervision is sufficient guaranty that the work is elegant and tasteful as well as correct. The publishers feel assured that the work in its new and beautiful shape will be the LEADING HOLIDAY BOOK OF THE YEAR.

A WONDERFUL WORK OF ART

MRS. BROWNING'S LOVE-SONNETS.

Sonnets from the Portu	iguese
------------------------	--------

This magnificent work has been a labor of love for years with the artist, who is the prince of decorators, and has lavished upon it all the resources of his imagnation and skill. The result is a magnificent monument to the poems that are enshrined therein, and a series of designs, the equals of which as a mere tr-asury of decoration and invention, apart from their significance in illustrating the immortal verse of Mrs. Browning, have never been issued in America. Each sonnet is prefaced by a richly ornamental half-title, on a full page, and is surrounded by a handsome border, emblematic in its design and composition. Mr. I psen has for many years been recognized as the foremost leader of art-decoration for books, both inside and outside, and has set more fashions for imitation than any other artist. This book is his crowning work, and will afford an inexhaustible treasury of decoration for students of art, and a life-study for all lovers of beauty and symmetry. Mrs. Browning's sonnets are among the noblest productions of ancient or modern literature; and their literary excellence and incomparable beauty of diction ensure for them certain immortality.

Recollections of Eminent Men; and Other Papers

By Edwin Percy Whipple, I vol. crown 8vo. with new steel portrait of the author, and preceded by the memorial address delivered by the Rev. Dr. C. A. Bartol . . .

A new book by Mr. Whipple is a literary event; and so many years have elapsed since his last publication, that the interest will be more intense in the present volume, which contains some of his most charming and characteristic papers, including monographs on Sumner, Motley, Agassis, Choate and George Eliot.

Stories of Art and Artists

By Clara Erskine Clement. 1 vol. 8vo. Profusely illustrated. In cloth 400
In half parchment 430

This work, historical and descriptive, gives a complete resume of the History of Art, with accounts of the various schools, sketches, and anecdotes of all the great artists, with portraits and reproductions of their works. The author is well known as a charming writer and an acknowledged authority on art criticism and history.

Persia and the Persians

The author is, perhaps, the best living authority on Persia, and this book embodies the results of his observation and experience during the years of his residence as United-States Minister, combining novel and entertaining adventures and descriptions, with political and other observations of great value. His rare skill as a landscape painter has availed to give many choice pictures of the great Asiatic realm, with its stores of poetry and legend, its strange customs, and its romantic scenery and architecture.

Steadfast

A Novel. By Rose Terry Cooke. Author of "Somebody's Neighbors." 1 vol. 12mo. 1.50

Arlo Bates writes as follows, in the Boston Courier: "A correspondent, signing herself X, writes to the Advertiser in an absurd panic, lest, 'in honoring Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke, we shall, as in Hawthorne's case, wait until Old England tells New England what a genus she is neglecting." As it has for years been generally recognized and heartily acknowledged that Mrs. Cooke has written the best stories of New-England country-life ever published, the fear of 'X' seems somewhat needless."

Confessions and Criticisms

A series of very delightful essays and papers, with reminiscences and other memorable papers, prepared by one of the most skilful and interesting of American authors, and calculated to attract and keep the attention of all readers. It includes a great variety of valuable miscellany, and several papers that have already become classic among people of cultivation and acumen.

The Rouse at Righ Bridge

The announcement of an etirely new novel from the pen of the writer of "Adventures of a Widow" etc., is sufficient to pique the curiosity of many readers, who find in this author the best traits of modern literature. "The House at High Bridge" is an entirely new work, not having been published serially.

Nora Perry's Poems
A new volume of poems by Nora Perry is now in press, and its publication will be awaited with great interest by the thousands of admirers of this brilliant and piquant writer. A new edition of "Her Lover's Friend" and "After the Ball" (two volumes in one) is now in press.
Rankell's Remains
A Novel. By Barrett Wendell's "The Duchess Emilia." I vol. 12mo. The remarkable success of Barrett Wendell's "The Duchess Emilia," a romance of the Colonna family in papal Rome, gives the best reason to hope for a similar (or even greater) triumph for his new novel, on which he has been engaged for two years. That it will be a strong and original work, no one who has read Wendell's previous story can for a moment doubt.	$1.50
H Muramasa Blade
A Story of Feudalism in Old Japan. By Louis Wertheimber. r vol. 8vo. Beautifully illustrated by Japanese artists	3.00
Mr. Wertheimber, of a scholarly Austrian family, went to Japan about the year 1870, and spent many years there, in the service of the Japanese Government. He was an extensive traveller among the inland dustricts and villages; and contributed many articles and series to the Japan Mail, and other publications. The present book is a romance of the sword, full of charming local color, true to life as it is in Japan, and full of deep and enchaining interest. Its mechanical make-up is sumptuous in every respect.
Agnes Surriage
A Novel. By Edwin Lasseter Bynner. Author of "Damen's Ghost," "Penelope's Suitors," etc.	1.50
This new novel by the author of "Tritons" and "Nimport" will have a large constituency of readers and admirers.
Self-Consciousness of Noted Persons
By Hon. J. S. Morrill	. 1.50
The well-known and erudite Senator from Vermont, has, in this work, condensed the fruits of years of curious research in a strange and unfamiliar field. The result is a rarely entertaining volume of great value to all scholars and public men, and interesting to all readers. A small edition was privately printed some time since, and met with such praise and appreciation that Senator Morrill has since carefully revised and materially augmented it for publication.
The Minister's Charge
By W. D. HOWELLS, Author of "The Rise of Silas Lapham," "Indian Summer, 'ctc.	1.50
"In this great novel of the people Henry James finds that Mr. Howells touches high-water mark; and sees an important and valuable work in this minute and subtle registering of the heavy-witted countryman's slow development under city conditions. However that may be, Howells's pure, inimitable fun is enough to carry any story he may write. Like all true fun, this has a most searching pathos all the time just at hand; and never is the real dignity of character of this actual Yankee forgotten or trifled with."— Boston Transcript.
Stories and Sketches
By JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Editor of the Pilot, Author of "Moondyne," etc. 12mo	1.50
The great popularity of the author, and the intrinsic merit and interest of his writings, will ensure a warm reception to this collection of his latest and best works.

CONFIDENCE

in the superiority of the "Oxford" editions leads the publishers to make the following announcement and simple request.

"OXFORD" INDIA PAPER.

The India Paper used for the "Oxford" Thin Editions of Bibles and Prayer Books is a specialty of the "Oxford" University Press, and is used exclusively for "Oxford" Books. Its characteristics are extreme opacity, great toughness and softness, and an agreeable tone. The strength and flexibility of the fibre are so great that the paper may be used for years without becoming injured by wear; and the material is so opaque that it can be made to a degree of thinness only limited by the possibilities of printing. In the case of some editions a ream of this paper—four hundred and eighty sheets, each sheet measuring 17½22½ inches—weighs only seven pounds, and yet this paper is beautifully soft to the touch, strong enough to bear a great strain, and of such opacity that the impression on one side does not show through when the other side is being read. The "Oxford" India Paper has been manufactured in order to meet the popular demand for thin books, and is admitted to be without a rival.

Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons ask the trade to carefully examine any so-called "India" Paper Editions from presses other than the Oxford before placing orders.

Bamboo Edition of the Red-Line

22 vols. Padded, Embossed Leather Covers. Round Corners. Rolled Gold Edges. $3.00 per vol.

The success which attended our efforts last year to introduce the Persian-Leopard Edition of our Poets has led us to bring out this season a new style of Leather Binding, which for novelty of design and beauty of effect is said to be a complete success by those who have seen the samples.

The orders already received indicate that this is to be the favorite line on our list this year; and, as these covers are imported, dealers will oblige us by placing their orders as early as possible, so that we may place our second import order in season to arrive before the Holidays.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.—Continued.

Seal Russia Edition of the Red-Line Poets.

Padded Covers. Gilt Edges. 32 vols. $2.50 per vol.

We offer this season another new style of Leather Binding, which will be adapted to the wants of those who desire a less expensive book than the Bamboo or Persian-Leopard Editions, and at the same time require something that is attractive in appearance and suitable for Holiday Gifts.

For this class of trade no handsomer line will be placed on the market than our Seal Russia Edition. It pleases the eye of the customer, being neat and attractive, even elegant, in appearance; is durably bound, and we anticipate a large demand for this style during the Fall Season.

Our Persian-Leopard and Alligator Bindings we shall continue to supply until further notice.

Aurora Leigh. Browning (Mrs.). Browning (Robert). Bryant (W. C.). Burns Byron. Eliot (George). Familiar Quotations. Favorite. Fonst.

Library Edition of the Poets.

Gilt Top. Laid Paper. Uncut Edges. 15 vols. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50 per vol. Half Calf, $3.00 per vol.

We have frequent calls for a Library Edition of the Poets from many of our customers, who desire something different from the Red-Line Poets. We have therefore prepared the above edition, which will meet this demand. Printed on laid paper, with uncut edges, gilt top, bound in ruby cloth, it will commend itself to the most fastidious taste, and prove a very desirable line to have in stock at all seasons of the year.

Browning (Mrs.). Browning (Robert). Burns. Byron. Chaucer.

CHRONICLE OF THE COACH. CHARING CROSS TO ILFRACOMBE.
By JOHN DENISON CHAMPLIN, JR. Illustrated by Edward L. Chichester. 1 vol., 12mo, $2.00.
Mr. Champlin has written a breezy story of a ride through England on a coach-and-four. He visited with is party some of the most famous and most interesting towns of Old England. He is always bright and entertaining. The illustrations by Mr. Chichester are extremely clever, and add much to the charm of the book.

STOCKTON'S STORIES.

"Frank R. Stockton's writings will outlive a thousand laughs, because fun is only their color and not their substance. Their substance is human nature thrown into relief by glass which imparts a comical hue. His humorous view is broad and not epigrammatic, though wit lurks in the felicity of his terse sentences."—The Contury.

crown yot, $2.50.

The reader who is anxious to gain a sound knowledge of the literature of classic Greece will find Mr. Jevons' book thoroughgoing and accurate. The author goes into de all with sufficient fulness to make the history complete, but he never loses sight of the commanding lines along which the Greek mind moved, and a clear understanding of which is necessary to every intelligent student of universal literature.

THE AGE OF ELECTRICITY. From Amber-soul to Telephone. By PARK BENJA min, Ph.D. Illustrated. 1 vol., 12mo, $2.00.

The wonderful advances which have been made in practically applying electric force to the service of man have made such a book as this almost a necessity. Mr. Benjamin gives a popular and comprehensive account of the service of the

THE MAKING OF NEW ENGLAND. 1580-1648. By SAMUEL ADAMS DRAKE. Illustrated. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.50.

Mr. Drake has told the story of New England in such a marvellously vivid and graphic way that his book reads like a romance. But interesting as it is, it has also a special claim upon readers, in that every statement has been verified by the light of modern research. The illustrations are admirable, and are to be found on almost every page.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY.

By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

Illustrated by R. B. Birch. 1 vol., square 8vo, $2.00.

The success of Mrs. Burnett's story is amply assured in advance of publication. No story written for many years has received such hearty and unanimous praise from readers and critics.

"The charming idealistic serial of 'Little Lord Fauntierry,' by Mrs. Burnett, is undoubtedly the most notable child's story of the year, and in each chapter develops the influence of the pure, sweet little lord among his retainers with clear beauty."—Boston Journat.

"It is very hard to have such a story dealt out to one by instalments of a chapter or two at a time. In the ilinstrations the spirit of the story has been caught and reproduced."—The Churchman.

"There is something in the way in which Mrs. Burnett writes stories of children, or rather in the way in which her children speak, that appeals irresistibly to the heart."—N. Y. Star.

CHILDREN'S STORIES OF AMERICAN PROGRESS.

CHRISTIAN WRIGHT. I vol., small 8vo, illustrated, $1.50

AMONG THE LAW-MAKERS. By EDMUND ALTON. 1 vol., small 8vo. Profusely illustrated, $2.50.

Mr. Alton was for four years a Senatorial page. In this volume, which is the first record of veritable Congressional experiences ever made by a boy for boys, he conducts his readers through the rooms and corridors of the Capitol into the Halls of Congress, to witness the memorable scenes which are enacted there. With a description of many stirring incidents and humorous episodes there is a large amount of valuable information concerning the theory of our Government and its modes of procedure.

AMERICAN LITERATURE, 1607-1885.

By Charles F. Richardson, Professor of English Literature in Dartmouth College.

The first volume, which will be complete in itself, will have for its sub-title "The Development of American Thought," and will trace the progress of American prose literature from its humble beginning to the present time, in its various departments of history, politics, theology, philosophy, the essay, criticism, science, humor, etc. It is believed that no more interesting subject can be found than the study of the growth of our national literature, resembling, yet widely different from, that of England, and having an important history and character of its own. The author feels that the time less come to try to criticise American literature, as compared with the other literatures of the world, on broad and philosophical grounds, recognizing its real merits, but without undue national pride. Beginning with "The Race Elements is American Literature," and "The New Environment of the Saxon Mind," the whole literary period of America passes in review, down to the days of living writers. Prof. Richardson, whose less ambitious "Primer of American Literature" has reached a sale of 48,000 copies, has often been asked to prepare a more extended treatise; but the present work has been written on a wholly different and much enlarged critical plan, after long preparation. The second and concluding volume, on "American Poetry and Fiction," will appear two years hence.

UNCLE SAM'S MEDAL OF HONOR.

An account of some noble deeds for which it has been conferred in the United States. By Theo. F. Rodenbough, Brevet Brigadier-General, U.S.A. The United States Medal of Honor, which was instituted by Congress at the instance of Washington, is the only authorized military decoration for valor in this country, and this volume has been planned to present some of the most stirring and dramatic incidents connected with the history of the Medal. The narratives are in many cases related by the actors. The volume will be profusely illustrated.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' LIBRARY OF AMERICAN BIOGRAPHY.

I.—Robert Fulton and Steam Navigation. By Thos. W. Knox, editor of "The Travels of Marco Polo," author of "Boy Travellers in the East," etc., etc. One large 12mo volume, profusely illustrated, $1.75.

etc. One large 12mo volume, profusely illustrated, $1.75. II.—Abraham Lincoln. By Noah Brooks. (In preparation.)

III.—George Washington. By Edward Everett Hale. (In preparation.)

THE STORY OF THE NATIONS.

A series of historical studies intended to present in graphic narratives the stories of the different nations that have attained prominence in history. In the story form the current of each national life will be distinctly indicated, and its picturesque and noteworthy periods and episodes will be presented for the young reader in their philosophical relations to each other as well as to universal history. Possessing a knowledge of and sympathy with the youthful way of looking at such subjects, the writers will not offer annals, arid and unconnected, nor bare chronological statements of events, however complete. They will not expect to include all details of minor importance; but, on the contrary, will try to present pictures adapted to leave faithful impressions of the essential facts. The subjects of the different volumes will be planned to cover connecting and, as far as possible, consecutive epochs or periods, so that the set when completed will present in a comprehensive narrative the chief events in the great "Story of the Nations;" but it will, of course, not always prove practicable to issue the several volumes in their chronological order. The "Stories" are printed in good, readable type, and in handsome 12mo form. They are adequately illustrated, and furnished with maps and indexes. They are sold separately, at a price of $1.50 each.

GLOBE DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Containing over 100,000 words. Edited and compiled by HYDE CLARKE, from the Dictionaries of Wescester, Webster, Walker, Johnson, Richardson, Murray, and Latham. Price, $1.50.

"The dictionary of Mr. Hyde Clarke is a master-key to the technical expressions peculiar to every art and branch of knowledge, besides being the most comprehensive dictionary extant of the English tongue as it is speke and written. After putting the work to very severe tests, we confidently say that no one who consults it will be disappointed. Not only is it deserving of the highest praise for its comprehensiveness, but it is worthy of study an exercise in logic. We have been surprised and delighted at the terseness, conciseness and precision of the an exercise in logic, definitions."

ECONOMICS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Being Plain Talks on Economics, especially for use in Business, in Schools, and in Women's Reading Classes.

By R. R. BOWKER.

With Chapters on the History and Literature of Economics, and a Reading List of Books.

WHAT IS IT?

A clear and concise manual, written with commendable fairness.-(N. Y. Sun.) By all odds the best primer in political economy of which our literature can boast. . . . In thirty chapters Mr. Bowker chats pleasantly upon the subject in general, popular prejudices and mistakes in regard to it, on production, prices, competition, the balance of trade, money, banking, rent, capital and interest, work and wages, co-operation, socialism, taxation, consumption, and "the end of the whole matter," in which he quotes Kant's saying that "humanity is always to be treated as an end, never as a means merely."-(Beacon, Boston.) It aims to do for economics what Nordhoff and Alexander Johnston have done for American politics, by presenting a plain, condensed, and clear statement of the simple principles.-(N. Y. Eve'g Post.) The shelves are full of ponderous treatises on economics, but we should not know where to look for so apt, pointed, and condensed a contribution to the subject as is found in Mr. Bowker's volume.-(Brooklyn Times.) It draws its inspiration and illustration from the history of this country, and to that extent differs from most, if not all other books on that subject .- (Utica Herald.) It is intelligible, thorough, and right-minded. The position is that of the best modern school. Wholesome reading, and presents the case in a nutshell.—(Independent, N. Y.) Mr. Bowker has written an admirable, one might say a perfect primer, of political economy.—(Critic.)

IS IT GOOD READING?

A man who after reading this little work will either think economics is a "dismal science" or a "barren study" is a hopeless case. It is interesting to the last degree, and replete with information upon all phases of economic questions .- (Christian Advocate, Detroit.) The reader should not be frightened by the title, for Mr. Bowker's style is crisp, and there is not a dull or wearisome page in the book .- (New Orleans Picayune.) Treats the difficult matter of business in such a simple and lucid manner that the reader wonders why economics have always been considered so abstruse and mysterious. The subject not only becomes plain and comprehensible, but interesting to read about, and boys and men of ordinary sense will follow its pages as eagerly as the average girl follows the thread of a story.—(Philadelphia Times.) The principles of the science are set forth in a very simple manner, with illustrations from every-day life, and yet with complete accuracy. The' book is as sound in substance as it is popular in form.—(Examiner, N. Y.) The style is throughout so lucid, the illustrations so abundant, and the treatment so thorough, that the beginner will find it a very satisfactory guide. It is certainly surprising that such a diversity of topics can be so adequately treated within the compass of less than three hundred duodecimo pages.-(Nation, N. Y.)

WHO SHOULD READ IT?

There is scarcely anyone, the richest or the poorest, old or young, who is not affected by economic laws, for which reason we are inclined to believe that all would be pleased, as well as profited, by reading " Economics for the People."-(Burlington Gazette, N. J., June 22.) Never before were there so many women, young people out of school, ordinary readers, and average business men, who want to know something about political economy. Mr. Bowker's little book exactly appeals to them. It is der. sensible, and thoroughly readable. It gives small space to definitions and abstract doctrines, and discusses mainly those live topics which belong to the economics of distribution. - (Chicago Dial.) As plain and attractive to business men and women as to those boys and girls who are willing and anxious to learn the serious, practical issons of life. Economics, as Mr. Bowker puts it, is simply common-sense applied to business; and common-sense Mr. Bowker applies in all instances in his explanations of political and domestic economy.—(Harper's Magazine.) The book should be read by all American wage-carnet and consumers.—(Beacon, Boston.) It is an excellent book for farmers, mechanics, clerks, students, and basness men, and should go into all the school district libraries in the country .- (Troy Daily Press.) It will fulfil the need of a concise hand-book for the use of schools and reading-classes. The little book should receive favor in every school in the land .- (N. Y. Journal.)

WHY?

It will give the boy who wants to know something about work and wages, taxation, socialism, and kindred subjects which he hears discussed at home, a clear insight into the principles which govern them; and to the working man, whom they ought to interest so much, but who might only become confused by elaborate treatists. it will certainly prove a pleasant and valuable teacher.-(Philadelphia Record.) The agitation in the labor market makes such a work highly desirable.-(Detroit Free Press.) He is a well-informed reader who will not learn something from this book that is worth his while to know. -(Brooklyn Times.) In selecting examples and illustrations Mr. Bowker has confined himself, so far as possible, to American facts, and this greatly increases the value of the book.—(Providence Journal.) A careful reader will, at the end, have a very good knowledge of the economic history and the condition of our own country.—(Commerwealth, Boston.) The book of interest and value to the business man, as well as to those who need to consuit it to learn the rudiments of what is certainly, to every American, the one science which he must master for the fature good of his country .- (N. Y. Weskly Wilness.) We wish this book could be studied by every voter in the United States, for after studying it most of them would vote much more intelligently than they do now .-- (The Critic) The man who would discharge his duties as a cities wisely can do so by following the principles of this book. -(Observer, N. Y.)

HENRY GEORGE'S NEW BOOK.

Protection or Free Trade?

AN EXAMINATION OF THE TARIFF QUESTION

WITH

Especial Regard to the Interests of Labor.

12MO, CLOTH. PRICE, $1.50.

- "The appearance of this book marks a new epoch in the world-wide struggle for free trade. For the first time this great question has been discussed by one whose whole sympathies are well known to be with the laboring classes, and who has in a special manner won their confidence. They will listen to him, and he can make himself clear to them. Henry George has a power of putting economic truths in such clear and limpid language that a child can understand him, while the most learned man can enjoy the accuracy of his statements and the suggestiveness of his thoughts. Its argument on the main question is simply unanswerable; and it is stated so clearly, so calmly, and so dispassionately, that none but those whose minds are sealed against all reason on this subject can fail to be convinced by it."—Thomas G. Shearman, in N.Y. Sun.
- "'Protection or Free Trade' takes a grip of the reader such as 'Progress and Poverty' laid upon hosts of men in all walks of life."—Rev. R. Heber Newton, in Unitarian Review.
- "It will be idle to attempt to confute Mr. George's arguments by the old cries of the Cobden Club and British gold."—Herald [Boston].
 - "We have not time to combat his theories."—Telegraph [Harrisburg, Pa.].
- "Mr. George shows the ability of an acute thinker, the information of a man of affairs, and the skill of a practised writer."—Express [Buffalo].
- "Never was such close argument, such clear deduction, put between covers."—Post [Burlington, Iowa].
- "Mr. George shows conclusively that a tariff for revenue only does not cure the evils of which the opponents of protection complain."—Traveller [Boston].
 - "Mr. George is one of the most illogical writers extant."—Tribune [N. Y.].
- "Many who are now perplexed over the difficulties of the vexed tariff question ought, by its perusal, to reach clear and firm conclusions."—Record [Philadelphia].

To Frank Leslie, The American News Company and Patrick Farrelly, their and each of their attorneys, agents, clerks, servants, workmen, and the officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, servants and workmen of said corporation and each of them,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us in our Circuit, Court of the United States for the Second Circuit and Southern District of New York that the name or word "Chatterbox," as applied to and used upon the cover of or upon the leaves of books of juvenile character by James Johnston is a good and valid trade-mark, and that the title thereto for such use in the United States of America is vested in the complainants, and that you, the said defendants, have infringed upon the exclusive rights of the complainants in and to the same:

Now, therefore, we do strictly command and enjoin you, the said 'Frank Leslie, The American News Company, a corporation, and Patrick Farrelly, and each of you, your and each of your attorneys, agents, clerks, servants, workmen, and the officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, servants, workmen of said corporation, and any and all persons claiming or holding under or through you, or either of you, under the pains and penalties which may fall upon you, and each of you, in case of disobedience, that you forthwith and forever desist from printing, stamping, marking, attaching or affixing said name or word "Chatterbox" in or upon books of a juvenile character of the general appearance, style and manner of cover and style of printing which are upon the complainants' said books referred to in the bill of complaint filed in this suit, and from simulating the appearance and style of printing of the complainants' "Chatterbox," and from selling, offering for sale, and from presenting to the public juvenile publications, printed in such style and with the use of the title "Chatterbox," in such manner as to lead the public to believe that they are the publications of the complainants.

WITNESS, the Honorable MORRISON R. WAITE, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, at the City of New York, on the 1st day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and tenth.

TIMOTHY GRIFFITH, Clerk.

NOTICE TO ALL DEALERS IN BOOKS.

We hereby caution you against buying or selling any book bearing the name "Chatterbox," either alone or in combination with other words, excepting those with our imprint, or marked as sold under our license, as the United States Courts have repeatedly confirmed our exclusive right to this word as a trade-mark, and ALL INFRINCERS WILL BE PROSECUTED.

THE LITERARY NEWS.

THE literary paper is one of the features of the day, and while directly benefiting the cause of good literature, as directly benefits the book trade by creating a demand for the books in notices. Every bookseller should, through such mediums, endeavor to keep his customers theroughly posted on the literature of the day. But without taking into account the time and laborezpended, and the painstaking discrimination necessary for the compilation of a reliable literary journal, the cost entailed by such a publication necessarily deters booksellers from, themselves, editing and issuing such a medium.

The LITERARY News, however, based on an experience of over fifteen years' continuous issue, is an acknowledged authority on current books and reading, and the plan upon which it is issued, enabling booksellers to circulate it among their customers under their own imprint, virtually makes it the recognized organ of each bookseller distributing it, and turns a direct trade in books into his own hands.

No better time than the present can be found for the adoption of the LITERARY NEWS by live booksellers as a personal medium. Especial attention is therefore invited to it, in the hope that booksellers who are not now using it will test its efficiency by ordering an imprint edition for the fall and winter months.

The book-notices of the LITERARY NEWS are always selected from leading papers, and are such as have weight with readers, while the other features of the paper make it a welcome monthly visitor in every home, and establish pleasant and direct relations between booksellers and bookbuyers.

Washington, D. C.: JAMES J. CHAPMAN.

Father Ryan's Poems.

New edition, revised and enlarged, printed from new type on fine tinted paper, illustrated with a portrait of the author, and other fine engravings.

PRESS OPINIONS.

"The author is a Catholic priest of Irish birth or descent, whose home and mission have been in the South. His own sympathies went with his section, and hence we find a good deal of his poetry warm with the glory and sad with the sorrow of the South. Here is an ardent temperament with every sign of passion tingling through it, seeking expression in verse, but also struggling to repress half that it is fain to think, to say, to do. The verse itself is facile, graceful and generally charming."—New York Herald.

"This handsome volume of 'Poems' contains the thoughts of a poetical nature thrown off at random, and without much labor. But, perhaps, it is for this reason that there is more soul and fire in many of them, and that they drop sparks, that kindle and glow, into the hearts of those who read. We may say, without fear of exaggeration, of Father Ryan, what a brilliant poet of our day says of Collins, that he has in him 'a pulse of inborn music, irresistible and indubitable.' We may venture to say that these Poems will be very acceptable on both sides of the Atlantic."—Dublin Review.

LILY CURRY'S NOVEL OF NEW YORK LIFE.

A BOHEMIAN TRAGEDY

A BOHEMIAN TRAGEDY. Scenes laid in New York. Of which the New York World says: "There is not a dull line in it. The action is brisk, the situations dramatic, the dialogue bright, and the descriptions vivid and sparkling." Boston Traveller says: "Touches that indicate perfection of grace and beauty, and a keen eye for poetic effects." One of the most talked about books of the day. An exciting chronicle of New York life. It is published this day, and is for sale by all Booksellers and News Agents, and at all News Stands everywhere.

Price, 50 cents in paper; or, $1.00 in cloth.

"Zitka; os. The Trials of Raissa," from which "Zitka," the most successful Russian play ever produced, was dramatized by the late William Carleton, is one of the best and most powerful of Henry Gréville's many fine novels. The play of "Zitka" has already made the fortnne of its author's little daughter, Marie, is one of the greatest successes the country has ever known, and will be performed at all the principal thearres in the country. All who propose seeing "Zitka" or those who have seen it, should read the great Russian romance from which it was dramatized. The novel has more fascination than "The Two Orphans," and is fully equal to Madame Gréville's "Dosia," which was crowned by the French Academy. "Zitka" the play and "Zitka" the novel are treats that should go together. Price, 75 cents in paper cover. Deper cover.

ONE YEAR'S SKETCH BOOK,

The reigning favorite of two holiday seasons, and now the most popular of "All the Year Round" books, since the large sale continues through the year. New editions in the various styles are in preparation for this season.

A GENUINE NOVELTY IN ART.

PLASTIC SKETCHES

Of J. G. and J. F. LOW,

The famous tile artists, being a series of designs making forty-seven original bas-relief prints, 10 x 12 inches, in portfolio. Price, $7.50.

The Plastic Sketches of J. G. and J. F. Low, of Chelsea, Mass., marked an epoch in the history of the working of clay. As is known, each subject was limited to fifty reproductions, price originally being fixed at $50.00 each. Many of the subjects reached that limit long ago, and they are now scattered and in the hands of private collectors, and no complete collection is in existence. This is to be exceedingly regretted, and it is here attempted to preserve, as far as possible, a record of these marvels of fictile art. The beauty and value of these Albert-types will be appreciated, when it is known that, although but five or six years have elapsed since the first Plastic Sketch came from the kiln, it has been found impossible to secure copies of several of the earlier ones for illustration.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

BY THE COMTE DE PARIS.

The Battle of Gettysburg fills three chapters in the third volume of the Comte de Paris' "History of the Civil War in America," and is acknowledged to be the fairest and most graphic account of the battle ever written; and in response to numerous demands it is now published separately.

With an appendix containing an itinerary of the Army of the Potomac and co-operating forces in the Gettysburg campaign, which has been carefully revised and enlarged from documents in the possession of the War Department, giving the most complete organization of the Army of the Potomac, and detailing the name of every general and subordinate commander on the field, with a return showing the casualities by regiment and battery in the Union and Confederate armies, July 1-3, 1863, gives to this book an official character possessed by none other relating to the battle.

The Two Spies:

NATHAN HALE AND JOHN ANDRÉ.

By Benson J. Lossing, LL.D. Illustrated with Pen-and-Ink Sketches. Containing also Anna Seward's "Monody on Major André." Square 8vo, cloth, gilt top, $2.00.

This work contains an outline sketch of the most prominent events in the lives of the two notable spies of the American Revolution—Nathan Hale and John André, illustrated by nearly thirty engravings of portraits, buildings aketches by André, etc. Among these illustrations are pictures of commemorative monuments: one in memory of Hale at Coventry, Connecticut; of André in Westminster Abbey; one to mark the spot at Tarrytown where André was captured: and the memorial-stone at Tappan set up by Mr. Field to mark the spot where André was executed. The volume also contains the full text and original notes of the famous "Monody on Major André," written by his friend Anna Seward, with a portrait and blographical sketch of Miss Seward, and letters to her by Major André.

Take warning, and order, before it is too late, the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876-1884, of which the edition is also limited, now priced at $12.50 paper parts, $15 half morocco. It is worth twice its cost each year in any library or bookstore.

We have some extra copies of the Subject-volume only of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876. This contains, classified by subjects, all but the Novels, Poems, etc., and is very useful by itself. Price, $15, half morocco.

We could complete five sets of the 1876 catalogue if we had the first paper part (p. 1-2). We will pay $10 each for these parts, and register orders to be filled if sets are completed, at $60 for the 2 vols., half morocco.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE TRADE.

706 & 708 SANSOM STREET,

GENTLEMEN:

PHILADELPHIA, October 1, 1886.

ESIRING to test practically the truth of the often-repeated assertion that the rapid growth of the subscription-book trade is due to the lack of energy displayed by booksellers in pushing sales, we have determined to put the question to proof by placing in the hands of the general trade a book well adapted to sale by either method, and at the liberal discounts customary with the subscription business.

Personally, our belief is that equal sales can be attained through the general trade, where discounts warrant as vigorous pushing as is customary with successful subscription houses.

The book selected for the trial, "Hartshorne's Household Manual of Medicine,"* is eminently suited to the purpose. The subject is one that appeals to all. The volume is but just published, is written in so clear and lucid a manner as to be readily intelligible to all, and is supplied with numerous indexes so arranged that all information is instantly available. The author is widely known among both the medical profession and the general public, and his name is a guarantee that nothing appears in the text that can be considered objectionable by the most scrupulous.

To those who will push sales the following generous discounts are offered, for cash with order:

On orders of less than 10 copies, - - - - 30 per cent.
On orders of 10 and less than 25 copies, - - 35 per cent.
On orders of 25 and less than 50 copies, - - 40 per cent.
On orders of 50 copies and over, - - - 50 per cent.

Upon request, we shall be glad to supply a reasonable quantity of descriptive circulars, bearing your imprint, and will enclose them with your first shipment.

Awaiting your favors, we remain yours truly,

LEA BROTHERS & CO.

NOTES IN SEASON.

ROBERTS BROS. have just ready "Jo's Boys, and How They Turned Out," by Louisa M. Alcott, a sequel to "Little Men."

THE PILOT PUBLISHING Co., Boston, have just published a new volume of verses by John Boyle O'Reilly, entitled "In Bohemia," which includes a selection of the best of his latest poems.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have just issued "The Terrace of Mon Désir," a bright story of Russian life, by Mme. De Meissner, wife of a Muscovite diplomat and daughter of Admiral Radford,

THE Fall Parcel Sale will be held at the rooms of Bangs & Co., November 8th and following days. Invoices for this sale, which is increasing in popularity, should reach Messrs. Bangs by the 18th inst. at the latest.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish shortly a volume entitled " Religion, a Revelation and a Rule of Life," a series of discourses and essays by Rev. W. Kirkus, of Baltimore, widely known as one of the keenest thinkers in the Episcopal Church.

P. Blakiston, Son & Co., Philadelphia, will publish at once the first volume of a "Manual of Diseases of the Nervous System," by Dr. Wm. R. Gowers, of the London University College. This volume will treat of the diseases of the spinal cord and nerves, and will be illustrated with phototype plates.

THE R. WORTHINGTON Co. publish this week the "Worthington's Annual," printed alternately in black and tint. The text and illustration on the left-hand page are printed in a brilliant black, while the full page facing it is printed in a rich chocolate tint. This, the Worthington Company claims, is a process patented by them. Besides these illustrations there is a number of richly colored plates. The reading matter is prepared specially for this volume, which is very attractively gotten up in every particular.

IRA BRADLEY & Co., Boston, have in preparation a "Commentary on the International Lessons for 1887," by Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent; "International Lessons for 1887," by Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent; "International Question Books," Nos. 1, 2, and 3, by the same author; "The Child of Barracks," by Madeleine Leslie; "Bearing One Another's Burdens," "The Crown of Silver," by J. Loring Pratt; "What One Boy Can Do," by Mrs. Mary A. Denison: "Turning Points," by L. C. Silke; and "Long Lane with a Turning," by Sarah Douders all of which will be adented for use in Suners all of which will be adented for use in Suners all ney, all of which will be adapted for use in Sunday-schools.

GINN & Co. will publish on the 11th inst. a work entitled "Courses and Methods," by John T. Prince, agent of the Massachusetts State Board of Education. This is a practical work, giving a brief plan of studies which may be pursued in elementary schools-both graded and ungradedwith a simple and direct statement of good methods of organization, teaching, and discipline. While designed primarily for untrained and inexperienced teachers, it is hoped that the hints and directions will commend themselves to all as based upon correct principles of teaching.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish this month, by arrangement with the author, the first volume of H. Morse Stephens's "History of the French Revolution," which has been received with much favor in England. It will be in three volumes, and will contain material which, for one reason or another, has not been used by former writers upon this subject. Mr. Stephens has written a special preface for the American edition, which edition will also contain a map not given in the English publication.

FUNK & WAGNALLS announce "The Buddhist Diet Book." prepared by Laura C. Holloway. It is a compilation of dishes used by Buddhists in Europe and the East, interspersed with explanations of the religious convictions of this great sect regarding foods. Mrs. Holloway writes with authority on this subject, having been for some months in Buddhists' homes in England and Prussia, where she enjoyed the advantages of an unmixed vegetarian diet. The book is a quaint brown-and-white conceit in parchment covers. They will shortly publish, in book-form, Mr. Geo. F. Parsons's striking article from the September Atlantic on "The Saloon in Politics," which has been widely copied and discussed.

Bercy, Paul. La langue Française: méthode pratique pour l'étude de cette langue. N. Y., W: R. Jenkins, 1886. 2+296 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A new work for learning French by the natural method. The author, a graduate from one of the French universities, and for several years a successful teacher, has embodied in this comprehensive treatise a system of his own, which, while based upon the principles of Heness and Sauveur, leads the student gradually forward (explaining as he goes), from the simplest forms of the language into and through its more difficult constructions and grammar. The work, with its profuse explanations and annotations. The work, with its profuse explanations and annotations, which are found on each page, will be of great assistance to the teacher using it as well as to the student, obviating the necessity, as it does, of constantly answering difficult questions.

Instead of beginning as far back as possible, and coming down, as so many have done, Dr. Blake begins at a time when the Canon was settled, and then finds his way lack, showing that its books were long in existence before the date. Thus he traces the books of the New Testamet back through the Apostolic Fathers to the Apostles theselves. Dr. J. W. Wellman says of it: "It answers questions often put to ministers respecting the origin of the Bible." Dr. Alexander McKenzue writes of it: "It was be of great value to the young and those who have a given careful attention to the character and history of the Bible."

- The story is supposed to have been given in manuscript to the man who gives it to the public and fills out the breaks to make it a connected whole. There is much detective work and all the chief characters are more or less given to making mysteries. The plot is complicated. The hero is "the slave of his atheism and his pleasures." At the last he becomes afraid of his scoffing infidelity and turns to the Christian faith on the eve of meeting his terrible fate. The two heroines and three heroes get but little peace and pleasure.

Her father brings her up in seclusion, and ignorant of the great wealth she will inherit, until she is of an age to be launched into society. Then he tells her of her expectations, and places in her hands $100,000, which she is to do with as she fancies; he gives her a great deal of good advice, but rather desires she may learn to manage her own affairs, and thus become self-reliant. Her career is full of adventure. She is pursued by many mercenary admirers, and only succeeds at last in being loved unselfishly through a clever but somewhat improbable little plan of her own conceiving. The story is quite amusing and hits off quite graphically some of the literary "cranks" of Bohemia.

An entirely new and complete edition of Mr. Longfelow's writings, including his prose works in two volumes, his poems in six, and his translation of Dante's Divina Commedia in three. It embraces all that Mr. Longfellow included in the latest edition of his works, together with all those pieces which have appeared since his death, with the sanction of his representatives. The text used is the last revised by the author, and is printed with scrupulous care to insure accuracy. Foot-notes to the poems show the various readings, as found in each case in the form of the poem as it appeared when first printed in a volume. Head-notes are frequently prefixed to poems, giving information respecting their suggestion and composition. It is designed to make this edition not only complete, but systematic in arrangement, and furnished with all literary, historical, biographical, and bibliographical equipment necessary to a full understanding and enjoyment of Mr. Longfellow's writings. There are several fine steel portraits of Longfellow from approved paintings and photographs, representing him at different periods of his literary career.

"This is a real book of new fairy tales," Mr. Morley tells us in his introduction—" gatherings and legends of the people, partly Indian, partly Chinese, have been touched by the genius of a writer, himself from the East, who brings his own wit and fancy to the telling of his tales, and is as ready to invent as to hand down tradition." Mr. Driu is an applicited Asiatic who had iver these collectes. Raju is an anglicized Asiatic, who had just been called to the bar of the Inner Temple when he left England for India, leaving the manuscript of his book in the hands of Prof. Morley. Every reader will indorse Prof. Morley's opinion that these tales are unusually fresh and delight-The book is bound in attractive style, and fully illustrated.

A pleasant novel in which a pair of lovers separate in anger, only to discover years afterwards, when chance again brings them together, that both were in the wrong, in dissevering their lives in the past.

Spurgeon, C: H. My sermon-notes: a selection from outlines of discourses delivered at the Metropolitan Taberaacle, with anecdotes and illustrations, from Matthew to Acts. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1886. 381 p. D. cl.,

"This is the third portion of 'My sermon-notes,'" says Mr. Spurgeon, "and it consists of notes of sermons preached by me on Sabbath and Thursday evenings. I trust it will be helpful to men who are greatly occupied, and are therefore sorely pressed for subjects of discourse. One more selection of outlines—upon certain texts which range from Romans to Revelations—will complete the series."

arenus. Cnic., The Interstate Pub. Co., [1886] 3-79 p. D. cl., 60 c.
Prepared to show young people something of what chemistry is, and something of how to study it. The experiments have been selected to interest the readers in tracing out some of the more simple relations between facts, rather than merely to entertain. They can be performed without the aid of costly apparatus, at home or in the school-room. Technical terms have been avoided when possible.

Wells, S:, Treat, Mary, and Sargent, F: Leroy. Through a miscrocope: something of the science together with many curious observations indoor and out, and directions for a vations indoor and out, and directions for a home-made microscope. Chic., The Interstate Pub. Co., [1886.] 3-126 p. il. S. cl., 60 c. This little hand-book begins at the beginning, and tells the young student of the microscope exactly how to proceed in his investigations, what to do, and how to do it, and the reasons therefor. Mary Treat has long been known as an interesting writer on natural history, and a valuable series published two or three years ago in Harber's Monthly was from her hand. Naturally she has had great experience with the microscope, and so, too, has Mr. Wells, who gives suggestions as to outfits, prepartion of objects, and methods of experiment. Mr. Sayont tells how home-made microscopes may be prepared and used.

White, Emerson E. The elements of pedagogy a manual for teachers, normal schools, normal institutes, teachers' reading circles, and all persons interested in school education. Cin., Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., [1886.] 336 p. D. cl.,

This treatise has its origin in a belief that the time has come for such a study of school education as will ascertain the limitations of its maxims and the coördination and harmonizing of its apparently conflicting methods. It presents: 1, An analysis of psychical processes, and especially those involved in knowing. 2, A statement of the order in which the several powers of the mind become active, and their relative activity and development at successive school periods, with a graphic illustration of the same. 3, A presentation of the fundamental principles of teaching, carefully deduced from psychical facts, and tested by the best school experience known to the author. 4. The practical embodiment and illustration of these principles in general methods of teaching. 5, The application of these methods to the teaching of reading, language, geography, and arithmetic. 6, The statement and application of psychical facts to moral training.

Dr. Jost was born at Burnburg, in the Duchy of Anhalt, Feb. 22, 1793, of Jewish parents. He studied at Göttingen and Berlin, and became a teacher in the latter place in 1816. Later he removed to Frankfort a. | m., where he died in 1860. His chief work was the "Geschichte der Israeliten," in nine volumes, written in 1820-28. His ideas as to the origin of Christianity involved him in long and bitter discussions with the leading rabbis of his day. He also translated the entire Mikhaa into German, and wrote many books relating to the history of the Jews.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

Mr. Grant Allen announces a novel entitled 44 In All Shades."

M. Georges Ohnet, author of "The Master of the Forge," has a new volume in the press, entitled "Volonté."

" J. S. OF DALE" (F. J. Stinson) intends to republish his short stories in a volume entitled "A Sentimental Calendar."

Mr. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON is engaged upon a life of Wellington for the series of English Worthies which Mr. Andrew Lang edits.

THE clever English novelist heretofore known as "Basil" bears in reality the name of Richard A. King. He is about to publish a new story entitled "Shadowed Life."

A REPORT is current that Mr. R. L. Stevenson is engaged upon a life of the late Mr. Fleeming Jenkin, Professor of Engineering at the University of Edinburgh.

M. Albert Van Wagner, the late commissioner for the Alabama claims, has a volume in the press descriptive of the humors of the American settlers in London.

THE COMTE DE PARIS is engaged on a biography of the Comte de Chambord, which will be ready about Christmas. The work opens with an appeal to Frenchmen to oppose the republic.

DR. FRANCIS BACON; of New Haven, has been appointed by the Connecticut State Board of Education to compile the text-books authorized by the Legislature for use in the public schools.

THERE is a report that Lord Rowton's "Life of Beaconsfield" is indefinitely postponed because there are in it some references to Mr. Gladstone which it would be wiser to publish after his death.

MRS. GENERAL W. S. HANCOCK is said to have been engaged this summer in writing a volume of reminiscences of her late husband. It is now about completed and will be published this winter.

COLONEL JOHN HAY'S eagerly looked for ary work, program Life of Abraham Lincoln" will be published in serial form in the pages of the Century. The the country.

first instalment will be published in the November number.

MRS. LANGTRY is credited with having written, or begun to write, a novel dealing with English life in this country and in London. She hopes to publish it simultaneously in London and America early in November.

MR. RUSKIN has started another series of volumes. It is called "Dilecta," and comprises correspondence, references, and other documents illustrative of his autobiography. The first part is already in press.

COLONEL GEORGE W. WILLIAMS, the author of the "History of the Negro Race in America," is arranging for the publication of his "Military History of Negro Troops in the War of the Rebellion." Colonel Williams is still in precarious health.

MR. PERCY M. THORNTON is said to be engaged on a work to be called "The Brunswick Accession." "His aim," says the Athenaum, "is to reproduce the matter of the unprinted part of the Hanover papers placed at his disposal by Mr. Maunde Thompson, of the British Museum, while making use of Macpherson's partial extracts published in 1775."

Augustus Moore, the playwright, writes to the London newspapers to say that he collaborated with the late Hugh Conway to produce the play upon which Conway's posthumous novel, "Living or Dead," was founded. Mr. Moore is in possession of the original manuscript of the play, and charges Conway's executors with having employed somebody to pad out the play into a novel. He defies them to produce the manuscript of the novel in Conway's handwriting.

"Boston literary circles are pleasantly anticipating," says the Traveller, "what will probably be the last work to come from the pen of Miss Elizabeth P. Peabody, the venerable philanthropist. The contemplated volume is a series of sketches which the author has named "Last Evening with Allston, and Other Papers." Although over eighty years of age, and although deprived of her eyesight, Miss Peabody still employs herself at literary work, promptly answering a large correspondence from unknown friends living in all parts of the country.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 2, 1886.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seck to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

A TEST OF THE TRADE.

Some time since a leading medical house in this city announced through, THE PUBLISHERS' WEEK-LY that they intended thereafter to do as much of their business as possible through the channels of the regular retail book trade. They were, we learn, very much disappointed at the result. They found very little response to their invitation to the trade to "take hold," and they felt forced to recur to their old methods of communicating directly with the medical profession.

Other medical houses have told us much the same thing. The same is also true of the special-ty of legal books. The regular retailers do so little in these directions that the publishers do not feel safe in looking to them for substantial support.

It is, of course, true that in any one city or town the number of doctors or lawyers is comparatively small, and the sale of any given book is limited accordingly. It may be said that the game is not worth the candle, that the risk and labor of selling the books are not met by the possibilities of profit. But the book business is not so superbly prosperous that it can afford to overlook these sources of custom, and it is also true that these classes are also natural bookbuyers whom booksellers should cultivate in the regular course of trade. Moreover, one medical or law book covers the price and the profit of a score of Seasides or Franklin Squares.

However, there is now another chance for the enterprising bookseller, thanks to a leading Philadelphia medical house. It offers a medical book of wide popular interest and very considerable possibilities of sale, which would ordinarily be marketed by the subscription method or through other special channels, on terms which should make it very profitable to retail booksellers. Let us see if they will use the chance. "Heaven belps those who help themselves."

OWING to a strike of the pressmen at the office in which THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY was printed the issue of our Fall Announcement number was delayed. We had made extra efforts to appear ahead of time and should have been able to begin mailing on Thursday, September 23d, two days in advance of date. As it was, the complications left us with three forms to print at another office, and in consequence we were not able to mail our issue until September 27th.

THE BERNE INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT CONVENTION.

TWELVE countries have acceded to the Intermational Copyright Convention, which was signed at Berne, Sept. 9th. The Union thus formed consists of Germany, France, Spain, Sweden Norway, Italy, Switzerland, and the three small States of Tunis, Honduras, and Haiti. The only authors who will benefit by it will be those whose rights of translation are worth reserving. The main object of the Convention is to assimilate the rights of native and foreign authors and artists in all the countries that have joined the Union. The difficulty arising from the varying periods for which copyright is protected in the different States has been got over by giving foreigners the same concessions as natives enjoy, provided that the period of protection is not to be greater than in their own country. Even newspaper articles, except "articles of political discussion, or news, or current topics," are protected. The exception, however, is so wide as to make the protection, in this particular case, of little value.

This scheme will not become law, however, until three months after it has been ratified by the various powers. "This is," says the Publisheri Circular, "in accordance with Article xx. of the draft-scheme printed in the 'Correspondence respecting the Formation of an International Copyright Union.' As some of the signatories are those of South American States, some little time must elapse before all the ratifications can be exchanged. In the meantime, we understand, the terms of the Convention will soon be printed for presentation to the Parliament of the United Kingdom."

IMPORTATION OF BOOKS

IMPORTATION OF BOOKS.

THE Treasury Department has issued a circular to customs officers in regard to the importation of books copyrighted in the United States, which prescribes that owners of works copyrighted in the United States and subject to forfeiture, not only to the United States, but to such owners, may avail themselves of the protection of their rights given by the law, by filing with collectors of customs duly authenticated certificates of such ownership. Decision No 7654, of July 26th last, is revoked so far as it declares importations of books in violation of American copyrights not forfeitable under the customs laws.

FALL PROSPECTS.

From the Commercial Advertiser.

In the commercial sense, books are luxuries. People can live without buying books. Economy in them is no hardship to the majority. Consequently the book trade is one of the first to feel the effects of business depression and one of the last to recover from them. It is, therefore, an encouraging sign to find, as a reporter found during a recent tour of inspection, that the large publishing houses are fairly overwhelmed with orders from retail dealers, and that the floors of their packing-rooms are almost impassable with piles of ordered books awaiting their turn for boxing and shipment. The publishers almost with one voice declare that business is better now than it has been for years, and that they fully expect an unusual demand during the coming win-They are preparing and projecting art publications and éditions de luxe, which are scarcely surpassed for beauty and cost.

A member of the firm of Harper & Brothers said to the reporter: "As far as we can judge the present condition of the book trade is most excellent, and the outlook very encouraging. could speak more definitely if our traveller had made his regular autumn round, but he has just returned from a preliminary trip, covering the country from here to San Francisco, and reports the outlook better than at any time for the last three years. His observations are general, not based entirely on the reports of retail dealers in the trade, but on the condition of the crops and the state of general business throughout the country. The feeling everywhere is one of confidence, except in certain sections of Kansas and Iowa, where local accidents, such as long droughts, have induced temporary depression. In our own trade he finds indications of a very strong market, especially for the better bound and more expensive sort of books. Cheap books are no longer in such strong demand. This is an encouraging sign, partly due, however, to the fact that the cheap book business has been much overdone. You can report us strongly on the optimistic side."

D. Appleton & Co. express themselves as thoroughly satisfied that this will be an exceptionally good year for the book business. This house deals largely in school and text books, and their current sales of these are the largest they have ever made. They are not attempting much in general literature, and, as has been their practice for some years, will issue no special books for the holiday trade.

Macmillan & Co. find themselves unusually busy filling orders, work in the packing-room being continued until late at night. Their schoolbooks are selling in unusually large numbers, and they are doing equally well with books on general subjects. They describe the outlook as "splendid."

The manager of Cassell & Co. said that never in his experience had the firm been so pressed by orders; for more than a month they had been obliged to keep their men working overtime three or four nights in every week. Retailers were buying freely, and there was a most cheerful feeling all over the country. "I fully expect to do an unexampled business this winter," he went on. "I must own that we have been fortunate in being able to present an unusually attractive list, but that does not account for it all. However, you had better come with me and look for yourself. That will be more convincing than any amount of talk." He took the reporter into the packing-room, the appearance of which fully bore out all his assertions. The counters and floors were piled high with books, which as many meas could find room to work were busily packing, without making any very sensible diminution in the number of volumes.

"All the books you see here are ordered and charged," the reporter was told. "Our bindery is hard pressed to keep us supplied."

Charles Scribner's Sons considered the outlook excellent. Trade had been unusually brisk, and there seemed to be no doubt it would continue so. Their sales for this year would exceed those of any year of their business existence. Trade had begun very early. Even during the summer, usually a very dull time in the book trade, they had done a large business. As an evidence of their faith in the future, they called attention to their costly "Cyclopædia of Art and Artists," one of the greatest enterprises in the way of an art book ever undertaken. In reference to their new magazine, they said that they already felt compelled to issue an edition for the first number of not less than 100,000 copies.

Scribner, Welford & Co. talked in the same cheerful and confident way.

Dodd, Mead & Co. said that they did a pretty steady business, not subject to much fluctuation one way or the other. Their business would be quite as good as it was last year, and probably better. They could not help noticing an unusual feeling of cheerfulness in the trade. They would venture three or four unusually handsome books for the holiday trade, and felt confident of a large sale for them.

A. C. Armstrong & Son report their business as very good, far better than that of last year, and the outlook most encouraging.

A representative of the R. Worthington Company reported that they were well satisfied with the present condition and future outlook of the trade, judging from their own experience. They have six men on the road whose reports and large orders are extremely encouraging. Their business for this year is already double that of last. As for their retail trade, they say the revival is astonishing. One of their special publications consists of very handsomely bound editions of standard authors, and of late these have sold freely. "They read just as well in plain bindings," the reporter's informant laughingly said, " and unless business was good purchasers would not pay for these handsome editions, as they are now doing."

Mr. Stokes, of White, Stokes & Allen, said:
"Our business is greatly ahead of that of last year. We are sure of an increase of at least 30 per cent., and will probably exceed that.
The feeling among the retail dealers, our customers, is exceedingly cheerful. All the book men I meet, and I meet a good many, talk in the most encouraging way. Things were very different last year. Then every one was growling."
G. P. Putnam's Sons said there were strong

G. P. Putnam's Sons said there were strong reasons for thinking that retail booksellers throughout the country were feeling greatly encouraged. The outlook was in every way most satisfactory.

E. P. Dutton & Co. also report good business, which they said was perceptibly increasing even from day to day. Other firms, both in this and other cities, are showing the same spirit of confidence.

RESTORING LEATHER BINDINGS.

From Book Lore.

MILDEW, which shows itself in the form of roundish or irregular brown spots, cannot be cured, but its development may be effectually checked by thoroughly drying the volume and afterward keeping it away from damp.

In many cases the leather bindings of old books will be found to be dilapidated. Should they be broken, rubbed, or decayed, plaster the part with paste to fill up the crevices; then take the yolk of an egg, beat it up with a fork, and apply it to the leather with a sponge, having first cleansed it with a dry cloth. To produce a polished surface a hot iron must be passed over

If it should be found advisable to remove stains of any kind from the interior or exterior of a book, observe that in the case of common writing ink, the best purifier is a mixture of spirits of salts and water in the proportion of one to six. A solution of chloride of lime is also good, and in both cases the part should subsequently be well washed with clean water. Grease or wax spots are easily removed, either by direct evaporation, which is accomplished by holding a hot iron close to the place affected, or by washing it with ether or benzine. To complete the latter process it is advisable to use the iron as in the former instance.

The remedy against oil stains is sulphuric ether. If the stains are extensive, roll up the leaf to be operated on and insert it in a flat-mouthed bottle, half full of the ether, and shake it quietly up and down for a brief period. On removal the stains will have vanished; the ether rapidly evaporates from the paper, and a little clear water is then all that is required.

FALL TRADE SALE.

THE Fall Trade Sale just ended was remarkable for its attendance, and for the good prices realized. It is estimated that there were more persons present—especially from out of town—than at any previous sale for the last four years. The bidding was sharp, and but few invoices were slaughtered. Quite a number of lots were duplicated, and on the whole both buyers and sellers seemed thoroughly satisfied with the result.

Though there was quite a large list of plates offered for sale the only ones that found purchasers were "Great Success," by Rev. Z. A. Mudge, published by H. A. Sumner & Co., which was bought by Hurst & Co.; and "Confucius and the Chinese Classics," edited by Rev. A. W. Loomis, and "There She Blows; or, The Log of the Arethusa," by Capt. W. H. Macy, of Nantucket, both of which were offered by a Boston house. The "Confucius" was bought by W. J. Powell, Bals, Mo., and "There She Blows" by C. T. Dillingham & Co.

HOW TO "PUSH" A BOOK.

A SUBSCRIBER sends us the following specimen of a new way of pushing books:

Sir: Pardon my sending you a copy of —, a stanch Protestant work written by a member of the Church Association, and published (at a great loss) at my expense, the author being unable to incur the outlay. It would be contributing to the scriptural command to "bear one another's burdens" if you would kindly take this copy (price 28. 6d., including postage), as I have a great number on my hands. With every apology, believe me yours truly,

-The Athenaum.

A NONAGENARIAN BOOKSELLER

MONDAY, the 20th of September, was the ninetieth birthday of Uriel Crocker, of the old firm of Crocker & Brewster, and it was most pleaantly observed at his summer residence in Colasset, Mass., by his neighbors and friends.

The old firm of Crocker & Brewster, which will hardly be remembered by the younger generation of booksellers, succeeded Samuel Armstrong, of Boston, over sixty years ago. They were cautious business men, and discriminating. Their object being, as one of their contemporaries said of them, "to keep store and merchandise, not for the purposes of business and benevolence simply, but to secure just and proper gains." They were men who learned in the old school of merchants that the only way in which money may be made in the ordinary book business is by had work, careful publishing and buying, strict attention to business, close economy and saving. It was in this way that they survived panics and definitions, and temptations to sell at cost, and many other evils that afflict our present business life.

In this connection it is pleasant to learn that Mr. Crocker's former partner, Mr. Brewster, has also just turned his eighty-ninth year. May both be spared to celebrate their centennials!

THE GAINS OF AUTHORSHIP.

From the Spectator.

As for the gains of authorship, they vary so greatly that no trustworthy estimate concerning them can be attempted. Very few amateurs, we imagine, have any idea of writing on history, philosophy, or science. These are subjects whose successful cultivation requires special training, years of study and research, and, it may be, years of waiting for any pecuniary result.

To the aspiring amateur, fiction is by far the most attractive department of literature, and the one to which his efforts are generally directed. But even here the blanks are many and the prizes Think of the multitude of novels which are published every year, whose authors are never heard of again, and which must needs have landed somebody in heavy loss. A sale of 400 copies in the three-volume form is by no means bad, and decidedly above the average; yet the outcome for the author would be only about £75, and he is a clever man who can produce two novels a year worth reading. Unless a writer even of fair repute is able to dispose of the serial right of his novels to advantage, he had better, so far as money-making is concerned, give his attention to something else. He would probably earn more as a curate, a cab-driver, or a compositor.

There is, of course, always the off-chance of his making a hit, like the late Hugh Conway. But the extraordinary success of "Called Back" and the host of imitations it called into being show how very remote that chance is. Success is more generally won slowly, and by dint of pegging away, after the manner of Anthony Trollope, who before he "struck oil" wrote several novels and a good many articles for nothing, and ten years of hard work brought him no more than £55.

PERSONAL NOTES.

S. G. WILKINSON, of the Oxford University Press Warehouse, London, after a pleasant stay in this country of nearly two months, sails for England to-day on the Aurania.

OBITUARY. JOHN ESTEN COOKE.

JOHN ESTEN COOKE, the novelist, died suddenly of typhoid fever at his home, "The Briars," near Boyce, Va., on Sept. 27th.

Mr. Cooke was born at Winchester, Va., Nov. 3, 1830. He left school when sixteen years old, studied law with his father, John R. Cooke, a lawyer of distinction, practised that profession about four years, and then abandoned it for literature, to which he has since been devoted. When the war broke out he entered the Confederate ranks, serving successfully in the artillery and cavalry, and being present at nearly all the Virginia battles. He was on the staff of General J. E. B. Stuart from the autumn of 1861 until the spring of 1864, when the latter died.

Mr. Cooke married Miss Page, of Clarke County, Va., in 1867, but she died some years ago leaving three children.

Mr. Cooke's writings relate almost exclusively to Virginia and describe the life, manners, and history of the people he knew so well. His war books put on record his observations and opinions of the war in Virginia, and are written in a spirit whose generosity and candor have been matters

His works in book-form are: "Leather Stockings and Silk" (1854), "The Virginia Comedians" (1854), "The Youth of Jefferson" (1854), "Ellie" (1855), "The Last Foresters" (1856), "Henry St. John, Gentleman" (1859), "A Life of Stonewall Jackson" (1863), "Survey of Eagle's Nest" (1866), "Mohun" (1868), "Wearing of the Gray" (1867), "Hilt to Hilt" (1869), "Fairfax" (1869), "Out of the Foam," "Hammer and Rapier" (1870), "The Heir of Gaymount" (1870), "A Life of General R. E. Lee" (1871), "Dr. Vandyke" (1872), "Her Majesty, the Queen" (1873), "Pretty Mrs. Gaston and Other Stories" (1873), "Pretty Mrs. Gaston and Other Stories" (1874), "Justin Harley" (1874), "Canolles" (1877), "Professor Pressensée, Materialist and Inventor" (1878), "Mr. Grantley's Idea" (1879), "Stories of the Old Dominion" (1879), "Virginia Bohemians" (1879), My Lady Pokahontas, (1885), Maurice Mystery (1885), and a history of Virginia in Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s series of American Commonwealths, which has been adopted as a text-book in the schools of his State. His works were published by G. W. Carleton & Co., Harper & Bros., D. Appleton & Co., the Judd Co., Claxton & Co., E. B. Treat, F. J. Huntington & Co., and Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Mr. Cooke's works of volume length, but not in book-form, are: "Estcourt" (1858), published in Russell's Magazine, South Carolina; "Monksden" (1867), a sensational romance of the eastern shore of Maryland, printed in The Baltimore Home Journal; "Paul the Hunter" (1872), a story of the old French war, printed in St. Louis Home Journal, and "Cary of Hunsden" (1876), a story of 1776, printed in Frank Leslie's News-

OTIS CLAPP.

Mr. Otis Clapp, an old publisher and bookseller, and senior member of the firm of Otis Clapp & Son, the well-known homoeopathic pharmacists, died at his son's residence in Brookline, Mass., September 19th. Mr. Clapp had been in failing health for the past year, but was at his store every day until July 3d, when he had to give up his daily visits. Since then he has been growing steadily weaker.

Otis Clapp was born in Westhampton, Mass.,

March 3, 1806, his father being Elisha Bascom Clapp and his mother Sally Hale Clapp, sister of Hon. Nathan Hale, formerly editor of the Daily Advertiser. When seventeen years of age he went to Boston and entered the counting-room of the Advertiser, living in the family of his uncle, Nathan Hale. After leaving that place he published for awhile the New England Galaxy, which had then just been relinquished by James T. Buckingham. A partnership was subsequently entered into with Charles Stimpson, under the firm name of Stimpson & Clapp, booksellers and publishers, Mr. Hale being a silent partner. They published a series of volumes under the name of "The American Library of Useful Knowledge," the first of which contained a preface by Nathan Hale and lectures by Judge Story, Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, and Lord Brougham. They also published annually the Boston Directory. "This partnership," says the Boston fournal," was dissolved in 1832, and Mr. Clapp became the publisher of New Church works, including those of Swedenborg; also of the New Jerusalem Magazine from 1832 to 1858, and the Children's New Church Magasine from 1843 to 1858. He had served the city as Ward Inspector of Elections, Warden, member of the Common Council in 1844, '45, and '46 from ward 6, member of the Board of Aldermen in 1859 and '60, and for eight years one of the board of visitors of the Boston Lunatic Asy-In 1851 and '54 he was a Representative in the State Legislature. He had been connected with several associations for charitable objects. At the time of his death he was President of the Washingtonian Home, a charitable inebriate asylum of Boston, having held that position since 1862. From 1862 to 1875 he was Collector of the United States internal revenue for the Fourth District in On his retirement from that Massachusetts. office, on account of the reduction of the number of districts in the State, the presentation of a goldheaded cane from his assistants testified to their regard. He married first, August 29, 1833, Ann Withington Emery Porter, daughter of Sylvanus Porter, of Boston. She died October 27, 1843, and he married, second, October 2, 1844, Mary Hadley, daughter of Deacon Moses Hadley, of She died December 10, 1871. Boston. Clapp's son, Wilkinson Clapp, has been associated with him in the pharmaceutical business."

COL. CHARLES GORDON GREENE, the founder and for 44 years the editor of the Boston Post, died in that city September 27th. His health had been bad for a long time, and two weeks ago his condition was complicated by heart troubles. He was 82 years old. Col. Greene was a native of Boscawen, N. H., where he was born on July 1, 1804. He was brought up to the printing and publishing business, which he followed until his retirement with a fortune due to his own industry.

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Book Record is the proposed title of a new trade journal, to be issued October 1st and monthly thereafter, by Wilbur B. Ketcham, New York.

FANNY DAVENPORT'S first literary effort will be printed in the Brooklyn Magazine for October. The actress's article is a vigorous reply to the question, "Is the Stage Immoral?"

THE business management of the Church Press has come into the hands of Mr. Matthew Low, son of the late Mr. Sampson Low. Mr. Lowis well known to the publishing and printing trades as a practical man of wide experience, and we heartily wish success to the Church Press in his hands.

GEN. ADAM BADEAU is to write a series of "War Stories for Boys and Girls" for the coming year of St. Nicholas. They will be panoramic descriptions of single contests or short campaigns, each one treated separately, as a subject complete in itself, and the youthful reader can overlook the two armies and view the battlefield from the beginning to the end of the struggle, but with the advantage of having every movement and charge, every attack and manœuvre, carefully explained

THE AMERICAN ART PUBLISHING Co., Studio Building, Boston, will publish at once the initial number of American Art, a monthly magazine to be devoted to the interests of the fine arts, graphic and applied. Its projectors intend to cover as comprehensively and as completely as may be the whole field of American art, making their publication an exponent of that which is highest and best in every branch of art endeavor or achievement, and a promoter of the interests of all artists and artisans engaged in art pursuits or in industries of which artistic handicraft is in any way the basis of production. The editor, Mr. Lyman H. Weeks, art critic of the Boston Post, will have the assistance of Mr. Wm. M. Thayer, a well-known journalist of the same city. The business manager, Mr. Frank T. Robinson, will also be a writer for the magazine. The magazine will be a quarto and will be illustrated with etchings, photogravures, wood-engravings, and other examples of pictorial art.

BUSINESS NOTES.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. announce that their edition of Shakespeare, brought out under the auspices of the Shakespeare Society of New York, will be entitled The Bankside Shakespeare, instead of the "Blackfriars Shakespeare," as announced in our last issue.

GEORGE J. COOMBES will publish shortly Alfred Stevens's "Impressions of Painting," translated by Miss Charlotte Adams with the author's permission. Miss Adams will provide a sketch of the painter's life and work, and Mr. Stevens has written a special introduction for this American edition.

"A DOZEN years ago," says the N. Y. Evening Post, "Mr. Wm. C. Bryant engaged to pass upon the labors of Mr. Evart A. Duyckinck in forming a new text of Shakespeare, based on the Folio of 1623. This was done, and Mr. Bryant's preface written, when, by a singular coincidence, the joint editors both died in the same year (1878). The enterprise was not abandoned, and is now about to be put on the subscription market by H. J. Johnson and J. M. Stodart. There will be twenty-five 'sections' in the issue, and each will contain four photogravures from designs in oil by F. O. C. Darley and A. Chappel. The form selected is quarto."

FRANK S. THAYER, No. 313 Sixteenth Street, Denver, Col., has published a dainty little eight-leaved souvenir, "In Memoriam Helen Hunt leaved souvenir, "In Memoriam Helen Hunt Jackson (H. H.)." The text describes the grave of this philanthropic poetess, and there are delicate heliotype views of Cheyenne Mountain, Pine Hill Forest, and Mrs. Jackson's residence at Colorado Springs, besides a pleasing portrait of herself.

CHARLES MAYER, Milwaukee, Wis., will publish on the 10th a useful work, entitled "Institutions of Law and Forms, with a Compendium of Political Economy and Commercial Correspondence," analytically compiled and arranged by Charles Mayer. The author claims that "care has been taken to give due relative prominence to each topic, and to mould the broad subject of the Institutions of Law and Forms' into a complete and homogeneous system, adapted to the needs of each intelligent citizen, the commercial colleges, the academies, and the high schools of the United States of America." Also that it has been his aim to "arrange the various subjects discussed in the 'Institutions' in such orderly consecutiveness as to meet the requirements of the student, and thus to make the knowledge of jurisprudence a natural and symmetrical growth. The book brings within the reach of the individual information much of which it is of vital importance one should possess, and some of which one might find it exceedingly difficult to procure elsewhere.

THE LITERARY NEWS.

THE literary paper is one of the features of the day, and while directly benefiting the cause of good literature, as directly benefits the book trade by creating a demand for the books is notices. Every bookseller should, through such mediums, endeavor to keep his customers thoroughly posted on the literature of the day. But without taking into account the time and laborer-pended, and the painstaking discrimination necessary for the compilation of a reliable literary journal, the cost entailed by such a publication necessarily deters booksellers from, themselves, editing and issuing such a medium.

The LITERARY News, however, based on an experience of over fifteen years' continuous issue, is an acknowledged authority on current books and reading, and the plan upon which it is issued, enabling booksellers to circulate it among their customers under their own imprint, virtually makes it the recognized organ of each bookseller distributing it, and turns a direct trade in books into his own hands.

No better time than the present can be found for the adoption of the LITERARY NEWS by live booksellers as a personal medium. Especial attention is therefore invited to it, in the hope that booksellers who are not now using it will test its efficiency by ordering an imprint edition for the fall and winter months.

The book-notices of the LITERARY NEWS are always selected from leading papers, and are such as have weight with readers, while the other features of the paper make it a welcome monthly visitor in every home, and establish pleasant and direct relations between booksellers and bookbuyers.

Terms for editions, with sole imprint of subscribing firms.

Publishers' Trade-List Annual

A large 8vo, over 2500 pages. With Duplex Index. Cloth, $2.

The improvements of recent years in the Trade-List Annual have given such general satisfaction that there will be no change in the forthcoming volume (fourteenth year) as to the essential features, which are:

- 1. The latest Catalogues of American Publishers and Manufacturers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm names.
- 2. A complete reprint of the "Publishers' Weekly" full title RECORD OF BOOKS published (inclusive of all the descriptive notes) from July 4, 1885, to June 26, 1886. In order to facilitate reference, it will be accompanied by a full INDEX, by which every book on record can be found, whether it is looked for under author, title, or subject.
- 3. The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1886, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase and sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we have decided to apply it in the future to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut. The price of the book will be raised to Two Dollars net after day of publication.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 70 cents per copy extra.

Office of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY,"

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We have pleasure in announcing to the Trade the opening of a

where we shall keep a full supply of all of our various publications. This step has been taken in response to the many urgent requests from our customers in the East for a more convenient and prompt delivery than was possible from Chicago.

Orders with which we may be favored will receive the same attention, and be supplied upon the same terms from either Chicago or New York.

We trust this effort to accommodate our growing trade may prove a mutual benefit.

Respectfully,

FLEMING H. REVELL.

AN IRON CROWN.

A Great Literary Success!

This great novel is one of the most important in scope and execution ever issued in this country. Dealing with a vital question, that of monopolies—a question yet unsetled—it never allows the reader to forget that he is perusing a masterpiece of literature. It has a fascinating plot, vivid characterization, thrilling incidents, and a most dramatic denouement. An Iron Crown had a large sale from the first and having now passed through the critical dramatic denouement. An Iron Crown had a large sale from the first, and having now passed through the critical first year the sale still continues.

Every Bookseller Should Order a Stock.

"Our reading of 'The Chamber Over the Gate' has discovered in it more of the elements of that long-expected product, 'the great American novel,' than we have found in any recent work of fiction. . . It has large stature, reserve force, abundant play of power; its intellectual endowment is. marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, ab-. . . Its commanding proportions, sorbing. its excellent paper and print, its salmon-colored edges and cover of old gold, mark it out among the mass of books with a certain distinctness well befitting its uncommon character." - Literary World, Boston.

HAVE JUST READY:

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY,

By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

1 vol., 8vo, illustrated by R. B. BIROH. Price, $2.00.

No book for children has appeared for years which has attracted immeniately and to the same degree the admiration and praise of readers, young and old. One of the chiefly interesting things about the story is that the little American boy numbers among his friends almost as many grown people as children, and who will be certain to welcome the story most heartily in this handsome book form.

"There never was a sweeter, more beautiful story than 'Little Lord Fauntleroy."-Brooklyn Union.

"The charming idealistic serial of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' by Mrs. Burnett, is undoubtedly the most notable child's story of the year, and in each chapter develops the influence of the pure, sweet little lord among his retainers with clear beauty."—Boston Journal.

"It is very hard to have such a story dealt out to one by instalments of a chapter or two at a time. In the illustrations the spirit of the story has been caught and reproduced."—The Churchman.

"There is something in the way in which Mrs. Burnett writes of children, or rather in the way in which her children speak, that appeals irresistibly to the heart."—N. Y. Star.

CHRONICLE OF THE COACH.

Charing Cross to Ilfracombe. By John Dennison Champlin, Jr. Illustrated by Edward L. Chichester. 1 vol., 12mo, $2.00.

Mr. Champlin has written a breezy story of a ride through England on a coach-and-four. He visited, with his party, some of the most famous and most interesting towns and literary landmarks in Devonshire and old England. The narrative of this unique journey, it goes without saying, is always bright and entertaining. The illustrations by Mr. Chichester are extremely clever, and add much to the charm of the book.

THE IVORY KING.

A Popular History of the Elephant and its Allies. By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER, Fellow of the New York Academy of Science, etc., author of "Marvels of Animal Life," etc. I vol., small Svo, illustrated, $2.00.

Prof. Holder's new book is a companion volume to his "Marvels of Animal Life," published last year. The elephant certainly stands pre-emment in the animal kingdom as the most interesting in his character and habits, and Prof. Holder has made the most of an especially fascinating subject.

HANS BRINKER; or, The Silver Skates.

A Story of Life in Holland. By MARY MAPES DODGE. Beautifully illustrated. I vol., square 12mo, $1.50.

A new edition of Mrs. Dodge's ever popular book, published with all the illustrations of the fine holiday edition, at one-half the former price.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN AND COMPANY

Will Publish Saturday, Oct. 16:

THE MADONNA OF THE TUBS.

By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, author of "The Gates Ajar," "Beyond the Gates," etc. With forty-three full-page and smaller illustrations, including figure, landscape, and marine subjects, by Ross Turner and George H. Clements. I vol., 12mo, tastefully bound, $1.50.

"The Madonna of the Tubs" is one of Miss Phelps's most characteristic short stories. The scene and persons belong to the sea-coast of Massachusetts, and afford ample opportunities for effective illustration. Mr. Ross Turser and Mr. George H. Clements have carefully studied both the scenery and the characters on the spot, and the result is a series of designs which not only illustrate the engaging story, but are of great artistic value and charm. The story, pictures, and mechanical execution make a very attractive, yet inexpensive, gift-book.

HOLY TIDES.

By Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, author of "Bonnyborough," "The Gayworthys," "Leslie Goldthwaite," "Pansies," etc. Square 16mo, beautifully printed and bound, 75 cents.

Mrs. Whitney is not only one of the most popular story-writers of America, but one of its truest poets. In "Holy Tides" she celebrates the "red-letter" days of the Church—Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Whitsunday, Trinity, and Easter—days which commemorate events notable in the religious experience of mankind. The poems are animated by a very devout spirit, and the book is one of rare beauty without and within.

TEN DOLLARS ENOUGH.

By CATHERINE OWEN. I vol., 16mo, $1.00.

The writer of this book shows how one dollar may either be made to do the service of two, or may by skill and care be made to produce a result (in the way of food and housekeeping) not merely twice as good as is commonly realized, but infinitely more satisfactory both to the palate and to the family happiness. She tells a pleasant story, and weaves into it recipes, descriptions, directions for cooking and housekeeping, admirable for their clearness. The story appeared originally as a serial in Good Housekeeping, and it has received the unqualified commendation of many who have tested the recipes and followed the suggestions.

ORIENT.

Being the Tenth Volume of Boston Monday Lectures. By JOSEPH COOK. With a fine steel portrait of Mr. Cook. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This book comprises six of the lectures given by Mr. Cook in 1883. They treat Palestine, Egypt, and the Future of Islam; Advanced Thought in India; Keshub Chunder Sen and Hindu Theism; Woman's Work for Woman in Asia; Japan, the Self-Reformed Hermit Nation; and Australia, the Pacific Ocean, and International Reform. The Preludes to the lectures discuss National Aid to Education; Revivals, True and False; Limited Municipal Suffrage for Women; Religion in Colleges, at Home and Abroad; Foreign Criticism of America; International Duties of Christendom. In five appendices Mr. Cook speaks of the Taj Mahal, In the Himalayas, The Death of Keshub Chunder Sen, The Classical Associations of Kioto, and Twenty-four Questions on New Japan. It is altogether unnecessary to speak of the variety, the vigor, the logical and rhetorical power of the book.

THE SILVER BRIDGE, AND OTHER POEMS.

BY ELIZABETH AKERS. 1 vol., 16mo.

It is several years since Mrs. Akers has published a volume of poetry. During this time she has continued to write, and now she gathers into a book the lyrics, ballads, and narrative poems which she has thus produced. Those who have read her poetry previously published will understand how attractive a volume is here promised.

ESSAYS AND POEMS.

By Jones Very. New and complete edition. With a fine phototype portrait, an Introduction by Rev. C. A. Bartol, D.D., and a Memoir by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D. 1 vol., 16mo, $2.50.

Mr. Very is one of the most spiritual and poetic of poets, and also a writer of prose admirable in quality though small in amount. An edition of his works is in preparation, which will embrace all his poetical writings, including many poems not contained in the volume published two years ago, and three prose essays, on Epic Poetry, Shabespeare, and Hamlet. The Introduction by Dr. Bartol and the Memoir by Dr. Clarke will aid in calling attention to the literary productions of a man who was not only a poet and a thinker, but who had a genius for saintliness.

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish next week "The Silence of Dean Maitland," a novel by Maxwell Grey, a new English author, which is published here from advance sheets, by arrangement with the author; two new volumes in the English Worthies series, "Ben Jonson," by John Addington Symonds, and "Richard Steele," by Austin Dobson; a volume of "Sermons, New and Old," by the late Archbishop Richard Chenevix Trench; and "The Philosophy of Education," translated from the German of Prof. Johann Karl Friedrich Rosenkranz, of the University of Königsberg, the latest of the International Education series.

CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS issue this week "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Mrs. Burnett's charming story, which has been running as a serial in St. Nicholas; "Chronicle of the Coach," the story of a ride from Charing Cross to Ilfracombe, by John Dennison Champlin, illustrated by Edward L. Chichester; "The Ivory King," a popular history of the elephant and its allies, by Charles Frederick Holder; a new revised edition in two volumes of Woolsey's "Political Science," and a new edition of Mrs. Dodge's "Hans Brinker; or, The Silver Skates," with all the illustrations, at one-half the former price. They have also just ready "Isaiah" and Edgar Fawcett.

"Ezekiel." making volumes five and six of the "Speaker's Commentary."

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish next week Miss Phelps's Christmas story, "The Madonna of the Tubs," illustrated with forty-three full-page and text designs by Rose Turner and Geo. H. Clements, forming a tasteful holiday book; "Holy Tides," poems by Mrs. A. D. J. Whitney on Christmas, Easter, Lent, and other church holidays, beautifully printed and bound; Catherine Owens's excellent and practical story, "Ten Dollars Enough," which had great popularity while appearing serially in Good Housekeeping and can hardly fail to have a very wide circulation in book form; Joseph Cook's tenth volume of lectures entitled "Orient;" a new volume entitled "The Silver Bridge and Other Poems," by Elizabeth Akers; and Jones Very's Essays and Poems, complete, with an Introduction by Rev. Dr. Bartol and a Memoir of Mr. Very by Rev. James Freeman Clarke.

CASSELL & Co. will publish at once a work on the "Professional Criminals of the United States," by Thomas Byrnes, Inspector of Police and Chief of Detectives of New York City. It will contain portraits, pedigrees, and records of a large number of celebrated professional criminals who are now plying their vocation in all parts of the country. Inspector Byrnes's experience of twenty-three years has been particularly fruitful, and he may be said to have an intimate acquaintance with the "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." The book is filled with stories of famous bank burglars, murderers, sneak-thieves, confidence-men and others, so that the general reader will find much entertainment in its pages. It will be illustrated with heliotype copies of original photographs borrowed for this purpose from the Rogue's Gallery of New York City. They will also publish soon a story for children, by G. P. Lathrop, entitled "Behind Time." The story is told somewhat in the vein of "Through the Looking-Glass," that is, with that strange mixture of the probable and the improbable. The book is dedicated to the author's nieces, the children of Julian Hawthorne-- "Hildegarde and Baby Imogen."

TICKNOR & Co. will publish on the 13th inst. Scott's "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," printed from new plates, and embellished with nearly one hundred superb illustrations by our leading American artists. The work has been under the supervision of A. V. S. Anthony, and excels his previous efforts in this line of work, of which "The Lady of the Lake" and "Lucile" are specimens. The volume is larger than its predecessors, the broad and handsome pages offering abundant scope for the display of the illustrations, which are masterpieces of modern engraving. The work is elegantly and appropriately bound, in cloth, full gilt, padded calf, tree calf, antique morocco, and crushed levant with silk linings. They will also issue on the same day "Self-Consciousness of Noted Persons," by Hon. J. S. Morrill, the well-known Vermont Senator, a singular work in which is condensed the fruits of years of curious research in a strange and unfamiliar field; "The Virginia Campaign of General Pope in 1862," being volume II. of papers read before the Military Historical Society of Massachusetts, with maps and plans, giving, it is claimed, a careful and dispassionate. account of the Virginia campaign, the Fitz-John Porter affair, and other interesting matters; and "The House at High Bridge," a new novel by the year with the poets) cl., 75 c.

One hundred and eight English and American writers, many celebrated, some almost unknown to fame, are represented by one hundred and forty-eight poems on the first Fall month. Mr. Oscar Fay Adams proves himself a most industrious and discriminating editor. The gem of this volume is Keat's perfect ode "To Autumn." The opening poem is by Robert Kelly Weeks, who died in 1876, generally esteemed the best of our younger poets. Most of the poems strike the tone of the "melancholy days have come."

loott, Louisa M. Jo's boys, and how they turned out; a sequel to "Little men." Bost., Alcott, Louisa M. turned out; a sequel to "Little men." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1886. 365 p. por. S. cl., $1.50. For seven years Miss Alcott has worked at intervals upon this sequel to "Little Men." The story opens ten years after the close of that book. Dan, Nat, Emil, Demi, Stuffy, and Teddy all reappear. The scene is laid at Plumfield, where the boys all come to visit Mrs. Jo Bhaer. Mrs. March has died before the story opens, and Meg's husband also. Mrs. Meg, Mrs. Amy, and Mrs. Joe all live near together and the many scenes of fun and frolic described take place in one or the other of their homes. There is a great deal of love-making which will delight older girls and almost all the marriages turn out well. Miss Alcott says she has endeavored to suit everyone by many weddings, few deaths, and as much prosperity as the eternal dings, few deaths, and as much prosperity as the eternal fitness of things will permit. She also says the curtain has now fallen forever on the March family.

The author of "Edge-tools of speech" embodies in a succession of charmingly written chapters, a peculiarly interesting collection of anecdotes concerning the inner lives of the world's heroes and notables. In the first chapter facts concerning the obscure origin of many famous men are given; the second is devoted to details of characteristic traits; the third shows the various methods of composition familiar with great writers. The other chapters cover kindred topics and are rich in fresh illustrations and facts of a literary character. Index.

Appleton, 1886. 159 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Little Tripolema Yellowleaf Redfern grows up within twenty miles of London. She is nicknamed "little Tu-penny," and petted and spoiled by her mother, who had formerly been lady's maid at the great place of the town. She is an original child, full of weird fancies, but thoroughly spoiled. She is married to a housebreaker, who palms himself off as a lord. After many troubles she returns to her native village and is taken care of by the town miller, who has loved her from her infancy.

Marie. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1886.] 6+34I p. D. cl., $1.50.

The main action of this story belongs to a critical and interesting period in the last years of the Roman Republic. In 72 B. C. when the young hero, Lucius Marius, is represented as starting to take up an official position in Sicily, Italy was slowly recovering from the effects of the internal struggles which had distracted the state for many years, and abounded in ruined and desperate men. From these, Spartacus, a gladiator, had recuited his army, and was at the height of his power. For many years after this the pirates held almost undisputed possession of the Mediterranean Sea. The story ends with the passing away of the Republic and the division of the empire between Antony and Augustus. Boys will enjoy the book, as it is full of action, and not too learned.

Church, Alfred J., and Gilman, Arthur. The story of Carthage. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1886. 14+309 p. il. D. (The story of the nations ser.) cl., $1.50.

Mr. Church says "it is difficult to tell the story of Carthage because need to be a call it without supports."

thage, because one has to tell it without sympathy, and from the standpoint of her enemies." He treats the nation trom the standpoint of her enemies." He treats the nation from its obscure legendary origin to its culminating splendor as a rival of Rome, and then to its absolute extinction. The story is a solemn one, but Mr. Church makes it real, and his collaborateur, Mr. Gilman, has also done good work. It is divided into three parts, 1st, Legend and Early History; 2d, Carthage and Greece; 3d, Carthage and Rome. There are nearly fifty illustrations.

- Bros., [1886.] 3-518 p. D. cl., $1.50. Marion Hosmer was a thoroughly selfish woman when she was bereft of husband and fortune; having no resources within herself, she turned to her girlhood's friend, whom time had developed into the unselfish mother of a large family, whose varied characteristics had the power of teaching the widow self-forgeftulness, and she was wont to declare her better days, began in "That Quissett House," the queer, rambling old Home of the Wilders. In the character of Marion Hosmer Mrs. Conklin illustrates extreme selfishness.

Describes the Southern Pacific Ocean and the islands lying almost directly under the equator. After mentioning the peculiarities of several islands, the author gives many details of mission work: then a series of sermons by native preachers, and following that many interesting facts about the zoölogy and botany of that portion of the earth. Many anecdotes of native customs and a collection of South Sea Island riddles wind up the volume. There is a good index and there are fifteen illustrations.

The continued popularity of these amusing papers has led to a new holiday edition, uniform with "Davy and the goblin." It is handsomely printed in delightfully readable type, well leaded out. Several of the capital full-page illustrations made by Attwood for the earlier editions have been redrawn for this work; and there are also two hundred entirely new pictures, drawn by F. Myrick, and scattered through the text. It is enriched by a hitherto unpublished paper, "The Peterkins at the farm," one of the most mirthful of the entire series. The cover is adorned with vivid representations of Mrs. Peterkin and her coffee, the struggle of the Peterkin family with their summer-resort trunk, and the memorable rubber boots.

He has aimed at higher flights than he has taken in this little volume, but he has not written anything that is more genuine poetry than are some of the shorter poems he has here sent forth. There are manly protests against wrong and sympathy with suffering uttered in vigorous tones and in language of which every word tells. . . Upon all, however, the poet has set the seal of his strong individuality, and he is always picturesque, suggestive, and imaginative. $1.50. James Holcroft is a lonely, reserved, middle-aged man, who had recently lost his wife. He is a farmer, and endeavors after his grief is somewhat allayed to go on wih his house and dairy with the aid of hired help. His experience is most disheartening—he is robbed, deceived, and the object of matrimonial schemes from women of all kinds, and all ages. In a desperate moment he tils his troubles to an old friend, Tom Watterly, the keeper of the poor-house. Tom's advice is similar to that given him by other friends—to marry again, following up his advice by recommending a person to Holcroft he thinks will make him a suitable wife; the woman is then an inmate of the poor-house, and the heroine of a most pitful story. The marriage takes place under peculiar circumstances, the romance of the book beginning with Holcroft's wawkning to the attractions of Mrs. Holcroft, who grows into a beautiful woman under the softening influence of peace and contentment.

 The Abbé Roux was born at Tulle, France, in 1834, in very humble circumstances. He was early destined for the priesthood. He preferred teaching, but in order to pursue his studies abandoned it, and accepted the vicarship of the village Varetz, doubly poetical through its site and its legends. But he lived in great seclusion and wrote and studied incessantly. In 1874 the Centenary of Petrarch called Roux into notice. The festival was celebrated in Southern France by the Felibres, a society for the promotion and revival of Provençal poetry. Mr. Paul Mariéton as poet in French and Provençal, made the acquaintance of the Abbé and struck with his work in dialect brought him into public notice. The present translation of the Pensées " is very well done. The volume abounds in terse, epigrammatic sentences, grouped under subjects showing the simplicity of a child and the brain and classical culture of a philosopher. cal culture of a philosopher.

 A series of charming essays, several of which have delighted the readers of the Ailantic Monthly and other periodicals. Miss Thomas, who will be remembered as the author of "A New Year's Masque," has a poet's fine sense of nature in all its multitudinous aspects and its varied life, and the literary skill to describe clearly and adequately. The names of the papers show their range. They are: Nature and the native; A spring opening; Under the sky; The rain and the fine weather: The sensitive plant; Grass; A rumination; The fly-trapper; Runningwater notes; Along an inland beach; A summer holinight; In praise of the blackberry; Mondamin; The solitary bee; The return of a native; Autumn and the muse; Gossamer; Thistle-down and silver-rod; Where it listeth; Ember days; Flake white; Frost and moonshine; Hearth-Ember days; Flake white; Frost and moonshine; Hearth-

Stokes & Allen, 1886. 3-247 p. S. cl., $1. Marion Wilcox is Counselor at Law, was formerly associate editor of the New Englander and instructor in Yale University. Six stories of decided originality make up the book for which he has chosen the title "Real Folks;" "A Spanish-American engagement;" "Bertram Born;" "Keepsake;" "Pasifal, Paul, and Pauline" which gives a vivid description of the rendering of "Parsifal at Beyreuth in 1882; "Good-by to Common Sense" and "Concha Casablanca." The author shows scholarship, travel and a keen sense of the ridiculous. Very dainthy gotten up.

In the words of the Preface: "This reprint has been called 'Shakespeare's England' for the reason that the book relates so largely to Warwickshire, and because it depicts not so much the England of fact as the England created and hallowed by the spirit of her poetry, of which Shakespeare is the soul." The subject-matter is largely the same (but not including all) that appeared in the author's "Trip to England" and "English Rambles."

Wright, Julia McNair. The making of a man: the story of Rasmus. N. Y., The National Temp. Soc. and Pub. House, 1886. 326 p. il.,

D. cl., $1.25.

"Rasmus" belonged to the "rough diamond" type of humanity; he first saw light in the alums of N. Y. City; his father was a stone-mason who fell a victim to intemperance, and his mother died of grief, leaving "Rasmus" a little brother to care for; the boy fulfilled this type that it is not considered sand him to the heavital and be trust until an accident sent him to the hospital and be lost all trace of Robin; he then determined to tramp all over the country until he found his brother; after Herculean efforts he succeeds and is happily reunited with Robin. As usual the author has aimed to show up the wrongs brought about by intemperance.

Wright, W: Burnet. Ancient cities: from the dawn to the daylight. Bost., Houghton, Mil-dawn to the daylight. Bost., Houghton, Miffilm & Co., 1886. 9+201 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is pastor of the Berkeley Street Church, Boston. He dedicates his book to his wife, "at whose request these stories of the past were told." Bach of the thirteen cities has been selected, either because its history appears to illustrate pointedly some utterance of Christ, or, because the manner in which it aided in preparing for the "New Jerusalem" is obvious. The cities chosen are "Ur, the city of saints;" "Nineveh, the city of soldiers." "Babylon, the city of sensualists: ""Wemphis, the city of the dead;" "Alexandria, the city of the creed-makers." "Petra, the city of shams;" "Damascus, the city of substance;" "Tyre, the city of merchants;" "Athens, the city of culture;" "Rome, the city of law-givers; "bernaria, the city of politicians; "Susa, the city of sairaps." "Jerusalem, the city of the Pharisees; "New Jerusalem, I. The city of God;" "New Jerusalem, II. The King."

BUSINESS NOTES.

LEXINGTON, KY.—T. J. Danahy, bookseller and stationer, is closing out his business.

NECEDAH, WIS.—E. S. Miner, bookseller and stationer, has been burned out.

PENDLETON, ORE.—Livermore & Bickers, booksellers, are closing out their business.

PORTLAND, ORE.—W. B. Ayer & Co., stationers, have consolidated with J. K. Gill & Co., under latter style.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Seymour & Gage, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

W. L. GREENE, one of the proprietors of The Congregationalist, is soon to retire from that paper, and is to be succeeded by W. F. Whittemore, formerly connected with Scribner's Magazine.

The Golden Rule has removed from 3 Somerset St. to 50 Bromfield St., Boston. The paper has been entirely reorganized, with Rev. F. E. Clark as editor-in-chief, Rev. M. Kasson as office editor, and three other prominent clergymen as assistants. It is designed to make the paper the official organ of the Society for Christian Endeavor, which originated with Mr. Clark.

The Fortnightly Review for September (Leonard Scott Publishing Co.) contains interesting articles on "The Belfast Riots;" "Russia and England;" "The Wagner Festival at Bayreuth;" "Liszt's Life and Works," and a timely essay for both sides of the ocean by Cardinal Manning, entitled "Our National Vice," dealing with the question of drink and the results of all hitherto tried methods for its suppression or control.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

MACMILLAN & Co., 112 Fourth Ave., N. Y., have issued a fine catalogue of their books, and of the works issued by the Oxford Clarendon Press and the Cambridge University Press. The books are grouped under subject headings, and to this is added an author index in one alphabet. The titles are given full, and are liberally annotated. The body of the catalogue is that given in the Trade List Annual for 1886, but there is included also the series-list and the index which could not be completed in time for the Annual. This catalogue is a most useful one, and reflects great credit on the compiler. It will be sent, together with the quarterly supplement to it for one year, for 10 cents. (125 p., 8°.)

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have issued another Select List of Standard and Miscellaneous Works on Music and Musical Literature," together with a collection of rare and curious works upon musical subjects. (30 p., 16°.)

ANDREW GEYER has published an "Illustrated Catalogue" for the use of the stationery trace. It comprises a collection of advertisements neatly printed. An index to advertisers and specialties is added.

GEO. W. CRANE & Co., Topeka, Kansas, have issued a handy "Brief Law Catalogue" which contains a list of standard books on all leading subjects. (13 p., 32°.)

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

The Publishers' Aleekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 9, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be infimediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. All matter, whether for the reading matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

ABUSE OF DISCOUNTS.

In considering the many abuses under which the book trade has suffered, there is certainly none which has been more harmful than the abuse of the discount system. It was this principally that called into existence the A. B. T. A., which, for argument's sake, we will say was ahead of its time; and it is this which has largely placed the book business in the hands of linen-drapers, dry goods stores and others who use books as bait. It is this abuse which has driven the old-time bookseller out of the field, and which has reduced the book trade to the level of the trade in bricks or in herrings. The time has long past by when the bookseller was the friend and companion, the entertainer, in fact, of the scholar who sought the bookstore as a resort for amusement and satisfaction, for an exchange of ideas, fully as much as for the purchase of literary treasures. The bookstore of to-day, in the majority of cases, has become a shop where books are "handed down" pretty much as boots in a Chatham Street cheap John's-the bigger the better, for the price. And this has come about, we maintain, largely on account of the pernicious system of inflated retail prices, with an abnormal discount. Every schoolboy has come to learn that the retail price is one that no one pays, and that if you only know how to go to work you can get a discount ranging everywhere from twenty to forty and ten off. Everybody knows this-the trade is going to ruin under it—yet everybody is waiting for everybody else to take the initiative to do away with the abuse.

And for this reason it is encouraging to notice that a few houses, tired of waiting for the giants to move in the matter, have concluded to make a beginning. Only a beginning, it is true, but nevertheless a step in the right direction, and one which we hope may be emulated more and more every year, until the whole trade is in line. The houses in question are making net prices only on certain lines, with a discount of 20 and 25 per cent, and all are satisfied that good is resulting. Of course, even now, there are some dealers who cannot overcome the force of habit, and who, to some of their favored customers, give five or ten per cent. of their 20 or 25. But this will work its own correction when once it becomes generally known that the price asked is the one that must be paid, whether you buy of Jones or of Smith. The one thing to be desired is that publishers generally fall in line in the adoption of a close scale of trade discounts. In regard to dealing with those who break prices, there is at least one house in the United States (not in the book trade, however), and we have heard of others, which grants a discount of twentyfive per cent. to their customers, ten of which is allowed at the time of purchase, and fifteen payable semi-annually, provided their goods have been sold at the price (which, of course, is a reasonable one) put upon it by them. Where a dealer has been remiss he forfeits the extra ffteen per cent, and has only had ten for his trouble. Besides this he can never again, under his own name, obtain goods from this house at less than retail prices.

Again, the discount must be allowed only to bona fide dealers. Clerks and students, or who ever they may be, ought to have no more right to a discount on books than they have to a free ride in the cars or a free dinner at the hotel. Give away a book outright, if you wish, to one of your clerks if he wants one for his own use, but let him pay the full retail price if he wants it for a friend. It is this, we imagine, which was the entering wedge that helped to break down prices. We know a large house in this city and one in Philadelphia, in both of which even the senior partner pays full price for whatever he may take from the stock.

In short, what is needed after an honestly made book is a fair price and a close discount. Will the trade at last see its own interest and take the right step in the right direction now?

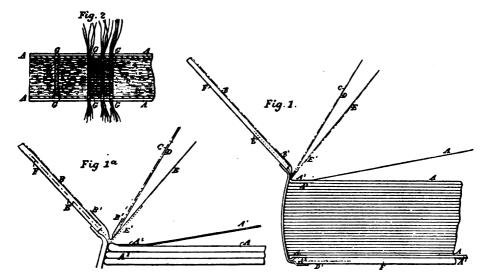

AT a meeting of the trustees of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, held on September 16th, the following were elected to membership: Frank E. Brooks, 328 West 47th St., N. Y. City; Augustus H. Clapp, 50 Philp St., Albany, N. Y.; Henry C. Appleton, 3 Madison Ave., N. Y. City; Borre Bruun Falkenburg, 663 Seymour Ave., Chicago, Ill.; A. H. Wood, 392 Classon Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

DURO-FLEXIBLE BOOK-BINDING.

From the British and Colonial Printer and Stationer.

SOLIDITY, elasticity, and elegance are the three main features of good bookbinding, and to attain these characteristics, much care, great neatness, and correct taste must be imparted to the work. The trade of a bookbinder has been ranked among the most difficult of the Arts, and it is one that, in the hands of a few masters of their trade, has made rapid advances in our day, especially in the finishing department, which has attained a remarkable degree of magnificence and beauty. This result to a great extent can be credited to the general rise in the level of art education, equally affecting the workman, his employer, and their clients, giving the first more pleasure in the work of his hand, the second a wholesome pride in the production of his shop, and the last a more abiding satisfaction for the expenditure of his money. A glance at the booksellers' shop windows will convince any one of the change which has taken ty should be studied. To these points Mr. Cedric Chivers, of 39 Gay Street, Bath, has given considerable attention, and recently he patented an invention with the object of strengthening the binding of books subject to rough wear. The improvements are applied principally to the end papers and sheets or sections at the beginning and ending of the book in which parts the connection with the binding is usually the weakest. The specification shows that in carrying the invention into practice the sheets or sections of the book are sewed together around string, tape, or webbing in the usual manner, but the first one or two sheets are bound at the back with cloth or other equivalent strengthening material before sewing, and after sewing they are overcasted or whipped in the customary manner; the last sheets or sections being similarly treated. There is also applied to each side of the book double-jointed end papers, the joints consisting of two strips of cloth or similar material, blank leaves being pasted on to the first and last sections, and bound with linen place in the public taste in the matter of book-binding. Generally, books are covered according to the fancy of the binder or customer, but in binding a book, let the workman-if the cost is restricted, and it is left to his judgment-dispense with the embellishments that characterize many books of the present day, and produce such work as will bear the test of examination in every part, opening with freeness, and presenting an appearance, firm, square, and compact. The great fault hitherto in binding seems to have been that the hinges of the covers pulling on the first and last few sheets of the book tend to break them away and very much hasten the severance of the book from its cover. This weakness is brought very prominently to notice in our large public libraries where books are subject to rougher usage than they have had hitherto to bear. Indeed, from observation and inquiry among librarians one discovers this weakness in bookbinding is univer-sally felt and deplored. Often is it the case that books, with fine embellished covers, perhaps of rare design, from constant use, after a time show a lack of strength in the binding, and consequently, to a great extent, are spoiled. Therefore, it is obvious in bookbinding, strength and durabiliand overcasted with the book. One of the strips of linen which connect the end papers is inserted between the boards which form the cover of the book, and one of the end papers is pasted inside the cover so that there exists an uninterrupted and firmly stitched connection of two thicknesses of cloth between the cover and the book. In order that our readers may fully understand the structure of the invention we can all illustrations.

nature of the invention, we annex illustrations:

As both ends of the book are finished alike, description of one will suffice. Figure 1 represents an end elevation of book partially open, and Figure 2 a back view thereof with cover removed. Figure 1a is an enlarged view of the opening part of Figure 1. A represents the first sheet or section of printed matter upon which is pasted a blank leaf or "signature," A¹, and this section is bound at the folding edge by a strip of cloth, which is represented by a heavy line, A². As will be seen from the drawing, Figure 2, it is overcasted or whipped in the usual manner. The lines B, C, D, and E represent the end papers, the sheets B and C, indicated by "dot and dash" lines, being joined together by a strip of cloth, B¹, represented by a heavy line. The end paper, B, is pasted to the inside of the cover, F, and the leaves C and D are pasted together and to the strip of cloth, B¹. The leaves, C and D, consist of a single sheet folded double, and to the underside of the leaf, E, is attached a strip of cloth, E¹, indicated by dotted line, which strip is secured between the two boards (or single split board), which forms the cover of the book. It will thus be seen that through the medium of the two thicknesses of cloth thus provided the end papers can be firmly stitched to the body of the book, as shown in Figure 2, in which the stitches are indicated by dark lines, G, instead of being merely secured by paper and adhesive matter as heretofore.

Mr. Chivers says that where cloth or linen is mentioned he does not limit himself to such materials only, as other fabrics, leather, or other strong substance may be used for the purpose. In short, it is a process of binding books by means of double-jointed end papers, each joint being linen backed and sewn to the book, the first and last sections of which are also linen backed and "overcasted;" the method of strengthening the bindings of books by means of double-jointed end papers, and the complete binding substantially as described.

The binding Mr. Chivers calls Duro-Flexible; but improvements in the joints and cover attachment are by no means the only peculiar advantages attached to the binding so designated. sewing of old books, or books which have frequently been rebound, so that the sheets are broken into single leaves, is effected in the following novel and vastly improved fashion: The first few leaves-about as much as an ordinary section -are overcasted round strings in the ordinary way in such cases, and the second sheet sewed through itself and the first, the third through itself and the previous one, and so on through the book, making it one continuous connection from beginning to end. The advantages of this mode of sewing single leaves are immediately apparent, the stitches need not be taken so far into the book and it consequently opens better and there is no danger of breaking into the back between the sections.

Duro-Flexible opens, and lies open, with really remarkable freedom, and it is explained to us that the ease of opening and the firmness of the back is in a great measure the result of his method of glueing up the book after sewing. The best obtainable glue is used and driven into the back by a jet of superheated steam, the back is in this manner warmed, and the hot glue penetrates the saw marks and the interstices of the leaves strongly holding all together, while every atom of superfluous glue is blown off, leaving the back clean, supple, and even for the leather. Duro-Flexile is clearly a distinct step forward in the art of bookbinding, equally applicable to the roughest and the highest class of work, and since the increase of cost is but trifling, it will be especially welcome in all cases where books are much used.

PERSONAL NOTES.

E. L. Shuey, of the United Brethren Publishing House, Dayton, O., has been in town.

We are pleased to note that Mr. A. C. Armstrong, Jr., son of the well-known publisher of that name, was elected as assistant professor to Dr. Mossat, in the chair of ecclesiastical history a Princeton Theological Seminary. Mr. Armstrong has recently returned from a year in Berlin University.

EARLY DAYS OF HENRY HOLT & CO. From the Mail and Express.

THE publishing house of Henry Holt & Company has been in existence under that name about thirteen years. Its predecessors were Leypoldt & Holt and Leypoldt, Holt & Williams. Henry Holt had had a brief experience in the publishing business before his connection with these firms. In 1863 he was interested with Mr. G. P. Putnam in publishing the Artists' edition of "Irving's Sketch Book," and later on in publishing the "Rebellion Record," afterward completed by In 1866 Mr. Holt Mr. David Van Nostrand. formed a copartnership with Mr. Frederick Leypoldt under the style of Leypoldt & Holt. The origin of his connection with Mr. Leypoldt was somewhat peculiar. It is not often that a publisher soothes the disappointment that naturally follows the rejection of a manuscript by accepting the unsuccessful author as a partner. But such was the result in the present case. After Mr. Holt's graduation at Yale, and at Columbia College Law School, he had made a translation of About's "L'Homme a l'Oreille Cassée." This he offered to Mr. Leypoldt, then a bookseller in Philadelphia, who had published a few choice works in connection with his agency for the Tauchnitz reprints, and had taken a room at No. 646 Broadway for a branch office. The transla-646 Broadway for a branch office. tion was respectfully declined in the courteous and regretful terms with which a publisher usually tempers his negative answer, but an acquaintance ensued which resulted in the business connection that proved so satisfactory to both parties. new firm relinquished the general book business which had been carried on by Mr. Leypoldt, and after removing to No. 451 Broome Street, began the publication of miscellaneous works. The policy of confining its business to the sale at wholesale of its own publications, with the exception of the Tauchnitz reprints, was strictly adhered to by the firm and has been continued by its successors. In fact, of all the publishing houses now in existence in New York, that of Henry Holt & Company is the only one that began, not as manufacturers or as retailers, but simply as publish-

The first book published by the new house was a translation, by Charles G. Leland, of Joseph Von Eichendorf's "Aus dem Leben eines Taugenichts," under the title of "Memoirs of a Good-for-Nothing." Among those that followed were translations of Beethoven's, Mozart's and Mendelssohn's Letters; of "Liszt's Life of Chopin," and of Heine's and Schiller's works. Another was Mr. Holt's translation, "The Man with the Broken Ear," that had been so politely declined by Mr. Leypoldt. It had a good sale. Then came a translation of Taine's "Philosophy of Art," and also of his "Rome and Naples," which John Duran, then in Paris, had made for an English publisher, and which Leypoldt & Holt undertook to issue more as a labor of love than as a profitable venture. This led to arrangements by which they became the publishers of the translation of Taine's "History of English Literature" which Mr. Eugene Schuyler and Mr. J. Safford Fisk had begun in connec-tion with Mr. Henry Van Laun, and which was completed by the last-named writer. No British publisher had the courage to run the risk of its publication alone, and it was in 1871 that Mr. Holt, with some misgivings, agreed to take the American market. But it proved to be one of the most successful books pecuniarily. as well as one of the most meritorious that has borne the imprint of the house. M. Taine has reason to be satisfied, for though the American publishers' liabilities were covered by contract with the English house, they made M. Taine several voluntary remittances, and he has said that the amount thus received from America is four times greater than his profits on the edition in England. These remittances were stopped long ago, however, by the appearance of a cheap, unauthorized edition. In 1870 Leypoldt & Holt removed to No. 25 Bond Street, and during the next year, Mr. R. O. Williams having been admitted to the firm, it became Leypoldt, Holt & Williams. A year later Mr. Leypoldt had become so interested in the Literary Bulletin and Trade Circular, which the house began to publish in 1869, that he decided to retire from the firm and devote his energies to that work. The new firm of Holt & Williams soon began an enterprise which had long been meditated by Mr. Holt. This was a series of works which should represent the best modern fiction, and which should be issued in a novel and attractive style. A design of Mr. Holt's, now familiar to the reading public, was selected for the cover, and the firm began the 44 Leisure Hour Series," which is now in its fifteenth year, and has nearly reached its 200th volume. The first three books of the series were

"My Little Lady," by E. T. Poynter; "Smoke," by Ivan Turgénieff, and "Fathers and Sons," by the same author. This was the first introduction of the now famous Russian writer to the American public. Then came "Fly-Leaves," C. S. Calverley's clever book of humorous verses, mostly parodies of the manner of well known English poets. The list of books which followed shows an admirable selection of works, which are not only attractive, but are of permanent value as literature.

In 1873 Mr. Williams retired from the firm and Mr. Holt, associating with himself a friend as a silent partner, continued the business as Henry Holt & Company. In 1878 Mr. Charles Holt, a brother of Mr. Henry Holt, and a graduate of the Yale Scientific School, was admitted as a partner, the firm retaining the name which has become so familiar to the reading public.

At the beginning of its career the house found that as most of the authors of established reputation were already in close business relations with the publishers, it was desirable to seek for material outside of English literature. A specialty was therefore made of translations and of educational works in French and German, and of the latter the house has now published more than any other concern in America. The connection of the house with foreign and American authors gradually increased, and new enterprises were begun. In 1873 it undertook the publication of John Stuart Mill's "Autobiography." Mr. Holt was in close sympathy with Mill as a writer, and had regretted that there was no uniform edition of his works. Some of these were soon added to the list, and the edition in eleven volumes of Mill's miscellaneous works, now published by the house, is the only uniform one at all approaching completeness. Of late years especial attention has been given to educational works of the highest character. The catalogue devoted to this department comprises some of the most valuable publications that have been issued by any house in the country. The "American Science Series," for instance, is the only great collection of educational works in science by American authors of the very first rank, and supplies the lack of authoritative books whose principles are, so far as practicable, illustrated by familiar facts, and also the other lack that the advance of science constantly creates, of text-books which at least do not contradict the latest generalizations.

Mr. Henry Holt has been a constant and active advocate of an international copyright law. He was treasurer of the league formed by Bryant, Prime, Bristed, Putnam and others nearly twenty years ago. Last winter, at the request of the American Copyright League, he appeared before the Congressional Committee to give his experience as a publisher regarding the disastrous effect of the present state of affairs upon the American author, to whom it is fatal. He has repeatedly stated that his firm is satisfied with his recommendation, made while a member of the International Copyright Association, that the word "person" be substituted for "citizen of the United States" in the present law.

REWARD OF AUTHORSHIP IN AMERICA.

G. P. Lathrop in Lippincott's Magazine.

The rewards of authorship pure and simple in this country are generally small, and had I relied on the proceeds of my books alone I should have starved. Our magazines, which pay better than foreign periodicals do, and our newspapers, together with the hack-work supplied by publishing houses, must form the chief dependence of American writers who have no private fortune, professorship, or public office to sustain them. "Verssorship, or public office to sustain them. "Versing" and "noveling," as verse-writing and novelwriting have been called, are not, as a rule, profitable. There are a few exceptions, such as "Howellsing," "Mark-Twaining," and "E. P. Roeing." But if books are a luxury to the public at large, they are commonly a much more expensive luxury to the American who produces them. It is an evil thing for American literature, for our reading public, and for our authors, that the native writer should be forced by unjust provisions of law to shred his powers (such as they may be) and peddle his work in fragments here and there so as to eke out a decent income. When a man is obliged to be journalist, editor, clerk, tutor, banker, speculator, hack, or what not, as well as an author, the chances are against his producing the best work and doing the most good in literature. Few authors have the versatility for such a combination, yet few can escape the necessity for trying to effect it under existing conditions. Seeing this, I tried to better the conditions and secure an act of justice by founding (in April, 1883) and organizing the American Copyright League—an association which grew to a membership of over seven hundred men and women engaged in literary work during the two years while I was secretary. The object of this league was to pass a law giving foreigners copyright in this country, so that not only they should profit by the sale of their works in the United States, but that native authors-being relieved from competition with books whose producers had not been paid-might enjoy, like the humblest of workingmen, "a fair field and no favor." A large part of my time and energy for two years was spent in establishing the league, carrying on an agitation, and raising a fund for it. The labor agitation, and raising a fund for it. being for a principle and for the good of my fellow-craftsman, I performed it gratuitously, until near the end, when I received two hundred dollars for my services. Having brought the league into a position where it could accomplish its aim by judicious action, and finding that a number of the committee which I had formed refused either to collect the real opinion of league members or to take a practical course by conciliating opposition, I resigned the secretaryship. Thereupon the committee elected a new secretary who had done nothing for the league, gave him a comfortable salary, and has gone on making a plaything of the organization which I formed for a serious and useful purpose. I was called "the father of the Copyright League," but my corpulent child, at its first annual meeting after we parted com-pany, neglected to give the author of its being even so little as a vote of thanks. I mention this because it shows that any author who feels surprised at not being appreciated by the public, to whom he offers his services for pay, ought to console himself by reflecting how much worse he would fare at the hands of his brother authors if he gave his service to their good disinterestedly and without pay. For the rest, my experience has been that authors, when you do not try to do anything for them, are often agreeable company and make very good friends.

POSTAL MATTERS.

RULINGS IN REGARD TO COPY BOOKS, CAN-VASSING OR PROSPECTUS BOOKS.

RULING 319, January, 1886, Official Postal Guide, is amended by omitting therefrom the words "blank checks and drafts" and "copy books." Blank checks and drafts, and copy books with printed copy, and instructions thereon, issued for instruction in penmanship or drawing, will be hereafter accepted at the third-rate class of postage.

Canvassing, or prospectus, books containing sample chapters of, or other printed matter in relation to the publication for which the books are used, are subject to the third-class rate.

SPECIAL DELIVERY FOR BOOKS. From the N. Y. Times.

THE extension of the special delivery system so as to include all kinds of mailable matter, books, paper, and such merchandise as the postal regulations admit of being mailed, went into operation on the 1st of this month. As the knowledge of the extension of the service is at the present time almost entirely limited to Post-Office officials there has been no marked increase in this particular service here, and it is not expected that there will be. The increase will come at the minor offices of the country in the quantity of matter mailed from here, and may prove of considerable convenience to merchants or to people visiting the city, and desirous of mailing goods to friends at home at a saving over express rates. The local service may possibly be increased to the disadvantage of the district messenger companies of the city, as goods mailed with full postage prepaid and the special delivery stamp attached will be delivered at once. A more rapid delivery than by messenger boy is probable, as the delivery will be by the supplementary carriers, who are older and more energetic than the average messenger boy. They are also too old to play marbles.

THE RAND-AVERY COMPANY.

THE old-established and well-known printing house of Rand, Avery & Co., says the Boston Advertiser, has lately been reorganized. Under the name of "Rand-Avery Company" it becomes a joint-stock company, organizing under Massachusetts laws, with a capital of $200,000, enrolling upon its subscription-list more than 100 of the representative business men of Boston. A few of these are such men as Alexander H. Rice, of Rice, Kendall & Co.; Mr. Charles W. Parker, of Macullar, Parker & Co.; William B. Wood, of Brown, Wood & Kingman; John Hogg, of Smith, Hogg & Gardner; Nathaniel J. Bradke, Edward A. Talt, John C. Paige, Charles Fairchild, Charles M. Clapp, W. H. Forbes, of the Forbes Lithographing Company; Tilly Haynes, of the United States Hotel; Potter, Lovell & Co., Roberts Bros., Estes & Lauriat, Charles F. Clark, President of Bradstreet's Mercantile Agency, New York. The officers of the new company are: John C. Rand, President; Moses King, Vice-President; Avery L. Rand, Treasurer; Lora F. Deland, Secretary.

WANAMAKER'S ANSWER TO THE SUIT OF C. L. WEBSTER & CO.

From the N. Y. Times, Oct. 3d.

THE answer of John Wanamaker, Thomas B. Wanamaker, and Robert C. Ogden to the suit brought by the publishing firm of Charles L Webster & Co., growing out of the sale at Waramaker's of the personal memoirs of Gen. Gram, was filed on the 2d inst. in the United States Circuit Court. A motion was argued before the court a short time ago to have the defendants restrained from selling the book over their counter upon the ground that it was only to be sold by subscription, but Judge Butler refused to grant the plaintiffs a preliminary injunction. The mater will again come up upon final hearing and the answer now filed appertains to that part of the The defendants claim that since the litigation was begun they have ascertained that the books purchased by them were sold by the plaintiff to their general agents, who sold them to Hill & Harvey, their sub-agents, from whom Joshus Barney, the party who sold them to the defendants, purchased them, and that the books were forwarded to the agents without regard to the number of subscriptions which had been taken. It is also stated that the books were not obtained by the defendants by wrongful collusion with any agent, but that they were bought from Mr. Barney with the assurance that he had a right to dis-The defendants also claim to pose of them. have information by which they expect to prove that the plaintiffs have been selling the book otherwise than by subscription, and ask that the proceedings instituted against them may be dismissed. The matter will be heard upon argument

OBITUARY.

DAVID ADAMS, of the publishing firm of Beadle & Adams, of New York City, died on October 1st, at his home, No. 124 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn. He was born in Buffalo, August 21, 1846, and was educated in the schools of Buffalo and Brooklyn, his family moving to Brooklyn in 1860. His elder brother, Robert Adams, was, with Mr. Beadle, the founder of the firm. Robert died in the year 1866, when both the brothers, William and David, became partners in the business, which had then assumed large proportions.

Since that date both brothers have been associates, and, along with the senior partner, have ceaselessly labored to build up and make permanent the publishing entreprise with which they were associated. David became identified with the literary department, and, though not an author in that sense, yet had all the instincts of authorship, which, with a taste schooled by much reading, admirably qualified him for his special work.

To the varied publishing and periodical enterprises which the firm has inaugurated, he brought that discriminating business judgment which largely contributed to popularity and success; indeed to him was due many of the ventures in new fields which the firm has made, and which greatly widened the scope of its publishing enterprises.

Mr. Adams's death was due to heart disease. He left a wife and two children.

JOHN C. PROCTOR.

JOHN C. PROCTOR, well known in the book and stationery trade, died at Roxbury, Mass., September 20th. He commenced business in Boston in 1849, entering the store of John P. Jewett & Co. In 1851 he went to Cleveland, O., organizing the firm of Jewett, Proctor & Worthington. Several years afterward he returned to Boston. In 1859 he became connected with the firm of Shepard, Clark & Brown, and in 1860 organized the firm of Proctor & Clark, and somewhat later Proctor & Moody. For the last five years he was in the employ of Lee & Shepard. The deceased was of a kind and amiable disposition, and a true friend. He composed and published several poems, and an "Easter Anthem."

COMMUNICATIONS.

"A TEST OF THE TRADE"—A BOOKSELLER'S GRIEVANCE.

New London, Conn., Oct. 4, 1886.
To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: In your editorial on "A Test of the Trade" you allude to the complaint of publishers of legal specialties. Possibly other retailers have had the same experience as myself, viz.:

Some time since I had an inquiry from a law student and customer for figures on a two-volume work. I wrote the publisher, got my cost, added a very small margin (a heavy cut on advertised retail), and then found the publisher had given a net cost to my customer, a hanger-on in the office of an old lawyer, and to me as bookseller, each price different and mine the highest of the three, which caused me to lose interest in law-books.

I am used to working hard for very small returns, but do not care to have thrown in with the trade the name of overcharging my customer. CHARLES ALLYN.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MR. GEORGE BANCROFT, the historian, celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday on the 3d inst.

MRS. GENERAL CUSTER is busily engaged in preparing a volume on "Life in Kansas and the Frontier," just after the war.

HENRY BACON, the author of "A Parisian Year," says the Literary World, will soon issue through a Boston house a story, the scene of which is laid at Etretat, on the Normandie coast, where Mr. Bacon spends his summers.

MR. WILL MONTGOMERY CLEMENS, says the Literary World, is engaged upon a biography of Mark Twain; he has three books ready for the press—viz.: "The Life and Times of John Brown," "The Nemesis of Passion," a novel, and "Literary Secrets," all to appear soon.

WILLIAM T. ADAMS ("Oliver Optic"), says the Tribune, will soon leave his almost life-long home at Dorchester, Mass., and remove permanently to Minneapolis, where he will engage in business with his son-in-law, Sol. Smith Russell, who at the same time will retire from the dramatic stage. Mr. Adams will be sorely missed at Dorchester and Boston, where he has for many years been identified intimately with the best interests of the public schools. He has quite regained his sight, which a few years ago was seriously impaired. "One book a year is all I care to write now," he is reported to have said. "My life-work is nearly at an end. I was just figuring this morning to see how many volumes I had published, and I find the total number to be 113. My first book appeared tn 1853, and began the series known as The Boat Club.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Brentano Bros. will issue a book of coats-ofarms used by American families, entitled "America Heraldica."

J. E. MOORE & Co., Cincinnati, will publish at once the 214th edition of Gunn and Jordan's "Newest Revised Physician."

HENRY HOLT & Co. will shortly issue "Klaus Bewer's Wife," a story by Paul Lindau, translated by Clara C. Fleishman.

In giving the list of books written by the late John Esten Cooke we omitted "Fanchette," one of his latest and best novels, published anonymously in the Round Robin series, by James R. Osgood & Co., in 1882.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will soon publish a "Handbook of Biblical Difficulties; or, reasonable solutions of perplexing things in sacred scriptures," edited by the Rev. Robert Tuck. The title suggests a splendid field for a much-needed book.

GEORGE J. COOMBES will shortly publish a volume called "The Lorgnette," a series of illustrated society sketches, by S. W. Van Schaick and J. K. Bangs; also, "Impressions on Painting." by Alfred Stevens, translated, with the author's permission, by Charlotte Adams.

A COMBINATION of firms will issue shortly by subscription a reprint of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," at probably $2 or $2.50 per volume in cloth bindings. The format will be slightly smaller, but each volume will contain word for word the same matter on each page as the original.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS Co. will publish early in December a volume to be entitled, "Words Correctly Spoken." It will be similar to Richard Grant White's "Words and Their Uses," and is said to be wittily written. It will be set in large type and printed on fine paper with a red-line border.

LEE & SHEPARD have in preparation "The Nation in a Nutshell," by G. M. Towle, which gives the country's history in an attractive and condensed form. It will be issued in their popular series of Handbooks, making the thirty-eighth volume issued in this series, which has a strong and permanent hold on the public.

"THE INTERSTATE PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 Franklin Street, Boston, have in preparation

"School-Room Games and Amusements," by Elizabeth G. Bainbridge; "The Interstate Primer," by Ellen M. Cyr; "School Song Primary No. 3;" "Skeleton Lessons in Physiology and Hygiene," by Alice M. Guernsey; and a teachers' edition of Richards's "The National

ESTES & LAURIAT announce that they have sold to the C. F. Jewett Publishing Co., 299 Washington St., Boston (in which corporation they hold a large interest), the following of their publica-tions: Duruy's "History of Rome;" Guizot's "History of England" and "History of France;" Martin's "History of France," and Rambaud's "History of Russia." The Jewett Co. assumes the responsibility of fulfilling all outstanding contracts with agents and subscribers on the terms made by Estes & Lauriat.

Bradlee Whidden (late S. E. Cassino & Co.), Boston, calls our attention to the fact that in the Classified list of Fall Announcements, on page 314 of our issue of September 25, we inadvertently credited the publication of S. M. Burnham's work on "Precious Stones" to S. E. Cassino, and that on page 316 of the same issue, under the heading "Arts and Sciences," S. E. Cassino & Co., now Bradlee Whidden, should have been credited only with the work on "American Wild Flowers The other three books will be published by S. E. Cassino. In addition to "Precious Stones," and "American Wild Flowers," Mr. Whidden announces a work on "The Butterflies of New England," by C. J. Maynard, containing full descriptions of all the species, and having 232 life-sized colored plates.

"MR. CHAS. L. WEBSTER, of Charles L. Webster & Co., N. Y.," says the London Athenaum, "has just returned from a visit to the Pope, with whom he has completed an arrangement for the publication of a life of his Holiness which is now being written by Dr. Bernard O'Reilly, based on an authentic memoir furnished by the Pope himself. The work will be published simultaneously in London by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., and in New York by Messrs. C. L. Webster & Co. Translations will be issued by the houses of Firmin Didot & Co., Paris; J. P. Bachem, Cologne; Espasa & Co., Barcelona; L'Union Tipografo Editrice, Turin; and De Maatschappij de Katholicke Illustratie, Holland. All continental arrangements pass through the hands of Messrs. Sampson Low & Co."

D. C. HEATH & Co. have now ready the "Bibliography of Pedigogical Literature," by Dr. G. Stanley Hall, an important work containing the names of the best books in every department of education, some 2500 titles being recorded, and in such a way as to be of real service to the teacher desiring to secure the very best in his department; "Studies in Greek and Roman History, or Studies in General History, from 1000 B.C. to 476 A.D.," by Mary D. Sheldon; "Modern Petrography," an account of the application of the microscope to the study of geology, by George Huntington Williams, of Johns Hopkins University; "Illustrations of Geology and Geography, by N. S. Shaler, W. M. Davis, and T. W. Harris, for the use of schools and families; "Hauff's Märchen: Das Kalte Herz," edited by W. H. Van der Smissen, with notes, Glossary and Grammatical Appendix; "Elementary Course in Practical Zoölby B. P. Colton; and "How to Teach Reading and What to Read in the Schools," by G. Stanley Hall.

[ALL ENTERPRISING BOOKSELLERS.]

The subscription edition of the Illustrated Christmas Number of The Publishers' Weekly will be issued as early in November as possible, to give time for the imprint editions to reach all dealers three weeks before Christmas at the latest.

The Number will as usual present the finest specimen illustrations from the New Holi-DAY BOOKS, with special articles on the leading works, a full descriptive summary of books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the Illustrated Works, Books for THE YOUNG, and other Choice Books published during 1886, etc., etc. Every endeavor will be made to surpass the issues of previous years.

The imprint edition (intended for distribution by dealers with their sole imprint) will be printed immediately after the issue of the Trade edition, under the title of "Christmas Catalogue," as given above.

The local bookseller can add half as much again to his holiday trade by properly calling the attention of the public to his goods. For this purpose, the best means is the circulation of this handsome, interesting, and comprehensive Christmas Catalogue, which is received with pleasure by those to whom it is given or sent, as itself a picture-book of no little value; and its descriptions of and illustrations from books, at once arouse the desire to purchase the books themselves.

No better investment can be made by the bookseller who wants to make the most of his holiday trade.

Orders filled in the order of size of edition, largest first, and then of receipt. As the paper is specially made for this issue, orders should be received at once, as the filling of later demands cannot be guaranteed.

These prices are all lower than the actual cost to us, and are made to insure wide circulation of the publishers' advertising.

Orders should be sent in at once, and in order to avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the remittance All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

DIVINE ORIGIN of CHRISTIANITY.

INDICATED BY ITS

HISTORICAL EFFECTS.

By RICHARD S. STORRS, D.D., LL.D.

Orown 8vo, 674 pp. Cloth, $2; by mail, $2.15.

This great work of Dr. Storrs, immediately on its first publication, commanded a wide attention. Three editions in its original and more expensive form have been sold in this country. Three others, printed from the American stereotype plates, have been sold in England, and a publisher there has also reprinted it. The present cheaper edition, complete in every respect, has been issued in response to many inquiries, and at a price which places it within the reach of all classes of intelligent readers.

Crime and Punishment.

By Frodor M. Dostovevsky. 12mo, $1.50.

"The readers of Turgenieff and of Tolstol must now all Dostoyevsky to their list if they wish to understand reasons for the supremacy of the Russians in modern tion."—W. D. Howells, in Harper's Monthly for Suprember.

"There are three Russian novelists who, thought one exception little known out of their own country, head and shoulders above most of their contemporal to the opinion of some not indifferent critics, they superior to all other novelists of this generation. The them, Dostoyevsky and Turgénieff, died not long the third, Lyof Tolstol, still lives. The one with the marked individuality of character, probably the highly gifted, was unquestionably Feodor Dostoyers—The Spectator.

- " A story with merit."-Detroit News.
- "Beautifully printed and bound."-Indiana polis
- "Our reading of 'The Chamber Over the Gate' has discovered in it more of the elements of that long-expected product, 'the great American novel,' than we have found in any recent work of fiction. It has large stature, reserve force, abundant play of power; its intellectual endowment is marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, ab-. Its commanding proportions, its excellent paper and print, its salmon-colored edges and cover of old gold, mark it out among the mass of books with a certain distinctness well befitting its uncommon character." - Literary World, Boston.

OF THE

Literary News. 1886.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS.

THE LITERARY News for Christmas, 1886, will embrace thirty-two pages of reading matter and illustrations, and we intend to make it of a higher interest and artistic attractiveness than last year, and to issue it promptly.

Its sole aim and object is to increase the sale of books; and every book-seller who distributes it may be sure of being benefited thereby.

A chief attraction of the forthcoming issue will be the numerous specimen illustrations from the most prominent and popular new holiday books.

The most valuable feature, besides the Literary Notes, will be a special price-list of the Books of the Season, in all the departments of Holiday Literature.

To those who desire to reach a wider public than they feel they can afford to seek through the more expensive Christmas Number of the Publishers' Weekly, the Christmas Number of the Literary News is recommended as the best possible medium to cultivate a holiday trade.

PUBLICATIONS. NEW

JUST READY.

MY LODGER'S LEGACY; or, The History of a Recluse. Written by himself. Compiled and arranged by ROBERT W. HUME. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Mr. Hume in this story treats of some of the practical difficulties in solving the labor and other social problem. It is a most interesting and suggestive story.

THE TRIAL OF GIDEON and THE COUNTESS ALMARA'S MURDER. Two novels in one volume. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE. 12mo, cloth, 75 cents.

"Of Archibald Malmaison," a previous book, The Independent, New York, says: "Julian Hawthorne can choose no better compliment upon his new romance than the assurance that he has at last put forth a story which reads as the manuscript written in his father's indecipherable handwriting, and signed 'Nathaniel Hawthorne,' had haid shut into a desk for 25 years, to be only just now pulled out and printed. It is a masterful romance; short, compressed, and terribly dramatic."

- THE BOOK OF REVELATION. An Exposition Based on the Principles of Prof. Stuart's Commentary. By ISRAEL P. WARREN, D.D., of the Portland (Me.) Mirror. 12ma cloth. $1.00.
- MY SERMON NOTES. Vol. III. Matt.-Acts. By Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. 12mo, cloth. $1.00. Previous volumes, each, $1.00. Vol. IV. (final vol.), in press.
- HOW TO WIN. By Miss Frances E. Willard. With an Introduction by Miss Rose E Cleveland. Square 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

A BOOK FOR GIRLS.

CONTENTS:—Why I Wrote of Winning—"I Am Little, But I Am I"—Aimless Reverie vs. A Resolute Aim—The New Profession—The New Ideal of Womanhood—The New Ideal of Manhood—The Beautiful—The Decalogue of Natural Law—The Law of Habit—How Do You Treat Your Laundress?—Novel-Reading—Woman's Opportunity in Journalism—At What Age Shall Girls Marry?—To the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Unions—Unity of Purpose—"Finally, Sisters."

This is a capital book to place in the hands of girls.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION JUST READY.

THE MENTOR. A Book for the Guidance of such Men and Boys as would Appear to Advantage in the Society of Persons of the Better Sort. By ALFRED AYERS. 32mo, cloth, 50 cents; stouter cover, with title in gilt, $1.00.

This is a book of manners for Men and Boys.

"In every respect one of the most admirable books on manners and manner,"-Evening Journal, Chicago.

18th THOUSAND JUST READY.

SWEET CICELY; or, Josiah Allen as a Politician. By Josiah Allen's Wife Square 12mo, cloth, illustrated, $2.00.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS AND REVIEWS.

- "The heroine is saintly and winning."

 "Just captivated my wife and children."

 "It comes from the depths of her heart."

 "By far the best of Miss Holly's books."
- "Only a cast-iron man can resist laughing."
 "I want it alongside of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'"
- "Sweet Cicely is as lovely as Thackeray's 'Ethel."

 "Paul is more quaint than Dickens' Little Dombey."

 "Her wit is as keen as George Elliot's Mrs. Poyser."

 "One is reminded of Dickens in his finer, deeper strain, all through this charming story."
- THE SIMPLICITY THAT IS IN CHRIST. Sermons by LEONARD W. BACON. D.D. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Prof. George P. Fisher, of Yale Theological Seminary, says:

- "Its contents are full of life and vigor. There is not a commonplace sentence in its pages. The style is an example of pure, idiomatic, racy English. It is a thoroughly frank and honest book. The topics are handled with extraordinary acuteness and penetration."
- DADDY DAVE. By MARY FRANCIS. Paper, 50 cents. A thrilling story, which portrays the better side of slavery, as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did the worst side.

ist edition of 3000 copies exhausted; 2d edition now in press.

ENGLISH HYMNS: Their Authors and History. By the Rev. Samuel W. DUFFIELD. 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., says:

"For twenty years I have made a special study of Hymnology. This is by far the most complete, accurate thorough work of its kind on either side of the Atlantic."

THE CENTURY Co. will publish on the 20th inst. Frank R. Stockton's latest story, "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine," which has been running through recent numbers of The Century and has been most enthusiastically received.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. publish to-day the long-awaited "Harvard University in the War of 1861-1865." by Francis H. Brown. Dr. Brown was selected as editor, it will be remembered, by the "Committee of Five," consisting of President Eliot, Dr. R. W. Hooper, Mr. Waldo Higginson, Professor Childs, and Mr. C. E. Guild.

HARPER & Bros. publish this week in the Handy series "Joan Wentworth," a new story by K. S. Macquoid; and in the Franklin Square Library "The Touchstone of Peril," by R. E.

Forrest. They are preparing a popular edition of Dr. W. M. Thomson's work, "The Land and the Book," which was completed last year with the publication of the third volume, "Leba-non, Damascus, and Beyond Jordan." The pop-ular edition has been printed from the original plates, but will be sold at half the price.

D. LOTHROP & Co have just ready "Hester, and other New England stories," by Margaret Sidney, a collection of bright and interesting short stories of New England life, in which the character-touches are strong and well defined; "Souvenirs of My Time," by Jessie Benton Frémont, a work filled with personal reminiscences of famous people, celebrated places, and notable scenes and events; "Grafenburg People," fiction, but fact, by Rev. Ruen Thomas, the well-known pastor at Brookline, Mass.; and "Last Evening with Allston, and other papers," a very pleasant and readable series of essays by Elizabeth P. Peabody.

G. P. Putnam's Sons publish this week "The Old Order Changes," a story of to-day, by W. H. Mallock; "Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature," edited by Edward T. Mason; "Chivalric Days and Youthful Deeds," by E. S. Brooks, with sixty illustrations; and a limited letter-press edition of "Romances of Chivalry," by John Ashton, with fifty illustrations in facsimile. They have nearly ready in the Story of the Nations series "The Story of the Saracens," by Arthur Gilman. A specially valuable feature of this work will be a list of books on the subject of the life of the Arabian prophet, the religion he preached, and kindred topics, drawn from the writings of some two hundred authors. This list will be a catalogue raisonné, in which the reader will find some account of the relative value of the books mentioned as well as a specification of their contents. The author believes that no such bibliography of works on Islam and kindred topics has ever been made in English.

ROBERTS Bros. publish to-day "One Day in a Baby's Life," by M. Arnaud, translated from the French by Susan Coolidge. The volume chronicles the adventures of a boy and girl for a single day, from sunrise to sunset, and contains thirtytwo full-page illustrations by F. Bouisset, printed in colors. The work on this book was all done in Paris. They have also just ready: "What Katy Did Next," by Susan Coolidge, a sequel to her "What Katy Did" and "What Katy Did at School," illustrated by Jessie McDermott; "Key-Hole Country," by Gertrude Jerson, an interesting account of what you would certainly see if you were to go through a key-hole; "The Last of the Peterkins, with others of their kin," by Lucretia P. Hale, another volume of the adventures of this wonderful family, with numerous illustrations; "Uncle, Peep, and I," by Mary Cowden-Clarke, a bright and entertaining piece of fiction for children, unique in its way; "Le Cousin Pons," by Balzac, the fifth issue in their translations of this author's works; "Familiar Talks on Some of Shakespeare's Comedies," by Mrs. E. W. Latimer, a series of talks to parlor audiences of ladies in Baltimore; "John Jerome: his thoughts and ways," a new story by Jean Ingelow; "Rhoda Fleming," by George Meredith, the fifth volume of their issue of this author's novels; and a new and cheaper issue of "Madame Mohl: her salon and friends," by Kathleen O'Meara.

"Lady Valworth's diamonds" are stolen under peculiar circumstances. A young girl is found wearing them at a party; she reports having received them from a lover. Investigation proves the lover to be Lady Valworth's son under an assumed name. There are two heroines, to both of whom this young nobleman is engaged. The "agony" is rather "piled on," but all ends well for the young ladies, the lover ending his life in despair. "The haunted chamber," the second story, has already appeared in other editions in this country. other editions in this coun ry.

Mr. Bishop of the large hardware firm of Millecramp & Co., N. Y. City, is ordered to rest by his employers and goes to a quiet place on the shores of Lake Champlain. Here he meets Jorman the "psychologist," who becomes a factor for good in his life, influencing him to give up his insane desire for wealth and speculation, and to devote himself to the cultivation of the higher capacities of his nature. The volume is composed chiefly of conversations between these men, embracing all subjects, and treating love, marriage, fraud, religion, politics, business, and many other topics wholly from a psychological standpoint. The author shows an analytical mind and keeps the individuality of his characters clearly defined. A pretty lovestory is a subordinate element of the book.

Captain Englishman and the youngest son of an earl. Captain Errol, Cedric's father, dies when he is a mere baby, and his mother is left alone in very straitened circumstance. Cedric, however, is charmingly brought up, and grows a brave, beautiful, aristocratic-looking boy, with an unfatering belief in all things American. Though the accidental death of his father's two brothers he becomes Lord Fauntleroy, and is sent for from England by his old grandfather, the earl, who acknowledges him as his heir. The boy is delightfully described, his quaint, odd sayings permeating the whole story.

This book is appropriately dedicated to Andrew Carnegie, a name identified with coaching throughout the Engglish reading world. The tour chronicled began at Charing Cross, on Monday June 9th, and ended at Ilfracombe Saturday, June 21st. It describes a charming variety of landscape, and recalls some of the most romantic and striking historical episodes in English history. It is not a bare recital of facts, but gains a kind of dramatic interest from the varied and attractive personalities who appear under pseudonyms, some of which are easily guessed. The book is delightfully illustrated by Edward L. Chichester, who enters into the author's spirit, but subordinates his excellent work to the narrative. The cover design is original and appropriate. original and appropriate.

pap., 25 c. The The problem in dispute is this: How could John, who was the companion of Jesus, give a view of his character and of his life differing in many essentials from that presented by the other three evangelists? On the other hand sented by the other three evangelists? On the other hand, if it was not written by John, how came it to be accepted without protest or objection by the early Christian writers and worshippers? Dr. Clarke fairly states the arguments on both sides, but confesses he has not reached the final solution himself.

Gogol, Nikolai Vasilievitch. St. John's eve and other stories; from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1886.] 383 p. D. cl., $1.25.

There are six stories in this volume, which takes its title from the first. They are a selection from "Evenings at the farm" and "St. Petersburg stories." "Old-fashioned farmers" will probably appeal most to English readers. Gogol is realistic in method like his followers, but he is poetic in style. The translation is as well done as "Taras Bulba," and the stories are full of Cossack life, love, and fighting, pictured in vivid and sometimes barlove, and fighting, pictured in vivid and sometimes barbaric colors.

Gosse, Edmund. Raleigh. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 5+248 p. S. (English worthies.) cl.,

Mr. Gosse has carefully sought his materials for this short, spirited biography of Queen Elizabeth's popular favorite. The treatment shows the weak as well as strong sides of Raleigh's character, and faithfully describes him as a domestic man, a courtier, a navigator, a man of letters, and a devoted patriot. The account of the outrageous treatment he received at the hands of King James, his long imprisonment, and his unwarranted execution is dramatic, and although the events in the life of this royal favorite, who had more to do with America than any public man of the time, have been so often told, Mr. Gosse has succeeded in making them read like a new romance. It is one of the most interesting volumes of the series.

Eight hundred of zoölogy" and "Marvels of animal life." Eight hundred tons of ivory are used annually, and to obtain this nearly seventy-five thousand elephants are destroyed. The introduction of railways and the improvements which mark the progress of civilization in India make the extermination of the king of beasts a question of time only. The present volume treats the animal in all its relations to man, and the economic questions involved: in war, pageantry, sports and games, in its ancestral forms, structure and anatomy. A carefully selected bibliography of all the most important works, papers, and monographs relating to the elephant occupies eight pages. All the celebrated elephants are described and an interesting correspondence with Barnum about "Jumbo" occupies ten pages of the book. ten pages of the book.

Mitchell, Mrs. Murray. Scenes in Southern India. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1886.] 372 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The writer started from Bengal on a missionary trip through the Presidency of Madras, visiting all the principal stations and meeting with warm welcome everywhere. The book gives a good picture of the momentous changes which are at present going on in the social, religious, and political life of England's vast dependency. Family life in the East and the peculiar position of Indian women receive special attention. There is a good map, and about twenty illustrations make the interesting text still clearer.

Molesworth, Mrs. Mary. A charge fulfilled; il. by R. C. Woodville, N. Y., E. & J. B.

Young & Co., [1886.] 256 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.
The story of a faithful nurse; tells how she loyally carried out a trust confided to her. Death carries off all the members of the family she is serving but one little girl. This child, if it lives, will one day inherit a great fortune. It stands between the fortune and a wicked relationship to the life of the control of the life tortune. It stands between the fortune and a wicked relative who is its guardian, and who plots to end its life. The way in which Avice Bligh frustrates this man's purpose, saves her nursling, and obtains for her at last her money and true position in the world, is both sad and thrilling.

possessions to an American millionaire and at the beginning of the shooting-season feels completely lost in his English castle. His wife fills the house with "a house-party" she thinks will enjoy themselves together, regardless of society rules generally observed when inviting guests. There are many peculiar conversations between Lord and Lady Usk, in which Ouida once more voices her ideas about society as it is and as it might, could, and should be. "Don Gesualdo" is the story of a devoted priest who sacrifices himself to save a young girl from being sentenced for murder, as he cannot clear her without betraying the secrets of the confessional. "A rainy June" is a most disheartening picture of a honeymoon spent in England by a Roman bon-vivant and his correct English wife. It is told in letters.

The little master is a young undersized country boy of eighteen, full of natural talent and imbued with great force of character, who is almost self-educated. The book relates his experience as a teacher—first telling his adventures in getting a situation, his size and youth both being against him. He has charge the first winter of a country school and carries out with great success his theories of education; he especially objects to corporal punishment, and really obtains great influence over the boys by appealing to their intelligence and sense of honor.

THE INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT UNION.

We print this week a translation, made for our columns, of the Convention establishing international copyright on a uniform basis, which was signed last month at Berne by the representatives of most of the great powers, the United States excepted. This document does not so far seem to have been published in full in any of the English or American periodicals, but its importance merits its presentation at length, even in the one country which is at the moment that which is least concerned directly in the matter. It is scarcely possible, however, but that this movement, which has been very wisely and conservatively directed, will emphasize the isolation of this country and do something towards bringing us in this as in other respects into the family of nations. It seems indeed strange that a country which can boast progress in so many directions should look to the "effete despotisms of Europe" to lead in this direction.

The coming "short" session of Congress, which opens in December and lasts only till March 4th, gives opportunity for not a little good work, if our legislators will take warning of the waste of time last session, and attempt to do some real and useful work. The Chace bill holds its place on the calendar in the Senate, and we understand that Senator Chace will endeavor at the earliest moment to bring it up for consideration, and to express his views at length in its favor. It is to be hoped also that an arrangement will be made to have the same bill introduced into the House early in the session, so that, should the measure pass the Senate, it may have an advanced place on the calendar of the House by substitution. We do not favor this bill in itself, because we have looked forward to a less restrictive measure as more in line with the spirit of American civilization, but we do favor it as a measure of progress which can probably be passed where a more liberal measure could not be. It will lead to a great betterment of the present condition of things, will give at least some legal basis for the book-trade which it has so long lacked, and if it does not enable us to join the International Copyright Union, it will at least remove from us the disgrace that we have done nothing whatever in that direction.

The American Copyright League has been somewhat somnolent since its hearing before the Patents Committee last winter, when its official attitude toward the Hawley and Chace bills was curiously tempered by the attitude of Mr. Lowell and Mr. Clemens in favor of a modified bill. The opinion of these gentlemen, we take it, is essentially that so often expressed by THE PUB-LISHERS' WEEKLY, that it is better to recognize vested interests and obtain a bill which will be satisfactory to most of the classes interested, rather than to risk defeat by pushing for an ideal bill. It is to be hoped that the Copyright League will again bestir itself in support of the general movement, and that its endeavors may be more wisely directed by those who have taken its interests in charge.

Our readers have already observed that the gradually diminishing numbers signifying the lessening stock of the original American Catalogue have at last given place to the words "NO sets remain." The close of that long and eventful history is rather a moral than a financial satisfaction, for we believe that even at the increased rate obtained for the remainder copies, the enterprise has not paid for the actual outlay, aside from the gratuitous service which has been given to it from so many quarters. We are having a careful summary made of the expenses and returns of the Catalogue since the enterprise was first started, a period of much more than ten years, and we hope later on to present to our readers a statement which will, westrust, be of some interest to them. In the meantime we remind them that history will repeat itself in the case of the American Catalogue 1876-1884, and of the Subject-volume of the original Catalogue, of which we have an extra supply, and trust that, as this fall shows promise of better trade than for a good many years, those who have not yet ordered either volume will take advantage of the opportunity to come to the front with their orders for these two volumes.

THE BERNE INTERNATIONAL COPY-RIGHT CONFERENCE.

WE give herewith a translation of the Convention of agreement and protocols of the third International Conference for the Protection of Literary and Art Works, held at Berne, Switzerland, from the 6th to the 9th of September. There were present at the conference Otto von Bülow, for Germany; Maurice Delfosse, for Belgium; Melchior Sangro y Rueda and José Villa-Amil y Castro, for Spain; Boyd Winchester, for the United States; Emanuel Arago, for France; Sir Francis O. Adams and J. H. G. Bergne, for Great Britain; L. J. Janvier, for Hayti; C. E. Beccaria, for Italy; Kurokava, for Japan; Koentzer, for Liberia; and Numa Droz, Louis Ruchonnet and A. d'Orelli, for Switzerland, and Louis Renault, for Tunis.

ARTICLE I.

The contracting countries are constituted a Union for the protection of the rights of authors in their literary and artistic works.

ARTICLE II.

Authors within the jurisdiction of one of the countries of the Union, or their heirs, shall enjoy, in the other countries, for their works, whether they are or are not published in one of these countries, the rights which the respective laws of those countries now accord or shall subsequently accord to their own countrymen.

The enjoyment of these rights is dependent upon the fulfilment of the conditions and formalities prescribed by the laws of the country origin, and may not exceed in other countries the term of protection accorded in the said country of publication.

The country of origin of a work is defined to be that of first publication; or if publication is simultaneous in several countries of the Union, the one in which the law accords the shortest term of protection.

For unpublished works the country to which the author belongs is considered the country of origin.

ARTICLE III.

The stipulations of the present Convention hold good for the publishers of literary or artistic works published in any country of the Union, although the author may belong to a country not a party.

ARTICLE IV.

The expression "literary and artistic works" includes books, pamphlets, or any other writings; dramatic and dramatico-musical works, musical compositions with or without words; works of design, of painting, of sculpture, of engraving; lithographs, illustrations, geographical maps; plans, sketches, and plastic works relating to geography, topography, architecture, or the sciences in general; in fact, every production in the domain of literature, science; or art which may be published by whatever process of printing or reproduction.

Authors belonging to one of the countries of the Union, or their heirs, enjoy the exclusive right to translate or authorize the translation of their works up to the expiration of ten years from the date of publication in one of the countries of the Union.

For works published in parts, the ten years date from the last instalment of the original work.

For works composed of several volumes published at intervals, as also in case of bulletins and pamphlets published by literary or scientific societies or by private individuals, each volume, bulletin, or pamphlet shall be considered a separate work in respect to the period of ten years.

The date of publication shall be considered the 31st of December of the year in which the work is published.

ARTICLE VI.

Lawful translations are protected as original works. They enjoy, consequently, the protection stipulated in Articles 2 and 3 in all that concerns their unauthorized reproduction in one of the countries of the Union.

It is understood that in case of a work where the right of translation is public property, the translator cannot interfere with its translation by other writers.

ARTICLE VII.

Articles in newspapers or periodicals published in any country of the Union may be reproduced, in the original or in translation, in the other countries of the Union, unless the author or publisher has expressly interdicted it. For magazines it is sufficient that the interdiction be made in a general manner at the head of each number of the magazine.

In any event, this interdiction does not apply to political articles, or the news of the day, or current notes.

ARTICLE VIII.

The right to make selections from literary or artistic works to be used in education or having a scientific character, or for chrestomathies, * is left to the legislation of the countries of the Union and to special arrangements existing or to be concluded between them.

ARTICLE IX.

The stipulations of Article 2 apply to the public representation of dramatic or dramatico-musical works, whether such works are published or not.

Authors of dramatic or dramatico-musical works, or their heirs, are protected against unauthorized public representation of a translation of their works during the term of their exclusive right of translation.

The stipulations of Article 2 apply also to the public performance of musical works, unpublished, or which have been published, but of which the author has expressly mentioned on the title or at the beginning of the work that public performance is interdicted.

ARTICLE X.

Among unlawful reproductions are specially included unauthorized indirect appropriations of a literary or artistic work known as adaptations, arrangements of music, etc., when these are but the reproduction of such work in the same form or in another form, with only non-essential changes, additions, or abridgments, without in any wise presenting the character of a new original work.

It is understood that in the application of the present article, the tribunals of the various countries of the Union shall take account, in each case, of the provisions of their respective laws.

ARTICLE XI.

That authors of works protected by the present Convention may enjoy the rights conceded to them, it suffices that their names be placed on their works in the usual manner.

For anonymous or pseudonymous works the publisher whose name appears on the work has the right to protect the rights appertaining to the anthor. He is without other proof considered the representative of the anonymous or pseudonymous author.

^{*}A selection of passages, with notes, etc., to be used is acquiring a language.—Webster.

It is understood that the tribunals of the different countries may exact a certificate furnished by the proper authorities that all the conditions and formalities required by Article 2 have been complied with in the country of origin.

ARTICLE XII.

Any reprint may be seized at importation in any country of the Union where the original work has a right to legal protection.

The confiscation shall be made conformably to the domestic legislation of each country.

ARTICLE XIII.

It is understood that the provisions of the present Convention shall not prejudice in any way the rights of the government of each country of the Union to permit, oversee, or forbid the circulation, representation, and exhibition of any work in regard to which the proper authorities might exercise their authority.

ARTICLE XIV.

The provisions of the present Convention apply to all works which have not become public property in the country of origin at the time of its going into effect.

ARTICLE XV.

The governments of the countries of the Union reserve the right to agree separately as to special arrangements allowing authors and their representatives more extended rights than are accorded by the Union, or to make stipulations of any kind not contrary to the present Convention.

ARTICLE XVI.

An international office is instituted, under the name of "The Bureau of the International Union for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works."

The expenses of this Bureau are paid by the administrations of all the countries. The Bureau will be under the general authority of the Swiss Confederation, and its functions will be determined by the common consent of the countries of the Union.

ARTICLE XVII.

The present Convention may be revised with a view to perfecting the system of the Union.

Questions of this nature will be decided in the conferences which will be held successively in the various countries of the Union which shall be represented by delegates.

No changes shall be considered valid unless they receive the unanimous vote of all the countries.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Countries which have not taken part in the present Convention and which assure legal protection to authors at home, will be admitted upon their request.

This accession will be sent in writing to the Swiss Confederation and by it to all the countries.

Such accession carries with it all the rights of the Convention, will bind a country to adhere to all the clauses, and will admit to all the advantages stipulated by the present Convention.

ARTICLE XIX.

The countries acceding to the present Convention have also the right to accede at any time for their colonies and foreign possessions. They can make a general declaration by which all their colonies and possessions are included, or they can specially name those that are included or excluded.

ARTICLE XX.

The present Convention will go into effect three months after ratification and will stay in force an indefinite time, or until the expiration of a year from the day notice of withdrawal is given.

This notice shall be addressed to the government charged to receive the accessions. It will only hold good for the country that makes it, the Convention remaining in effect for the other countries of the Union.

ARTICLE XXI.

The present Convention will be ratified and the ratifications put on record at Berne, within one year from date [of the 9th of September, 1886.]

The delegates of Germany, Belgium, Spain, France, Great Britain, Hayti, Italy, Liberia, Switzerland, and Tunis, signed the foregoing compact. They also signed the following additional agreement:

The Convention concluded to-day in no way affects other already existing Conventions between the contracting countries, which confer on authors wider rights than those given by the Union, or make special stipulations not contrary to this Convention.

At the time of signing it was further provided:

I. Relating to Article 4, it is agreed that in those countries of the Union recognizing photographic works as artistic productions, they shall be admitted to all the privileges of the Convention. The legislatures shall not be held responsible for the protection of said works except so far as the international laws existing, or to be formulated, hold them responsible.

It is understood that an authorized photograph of a work of art is protected in all the countries of the Union as long as the work itself, subject of course to private arrangements between authors and their representatives.

II. Relating to Article 9 it is agreed that in those countries of the Union admitting choregraphic works as dramatico-musical productions, such works shall enjoy all the privileges granted by the Convention.

It is agreed beforehand that all disputes arising from this clause shall be referred to special arbitration by the respective tribunals.

III. It is understood that the manufacture and sale of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the airs borrowed from protected musical works shall not be considered an infringement of musical copyright.

IV. The agreement provided by Article 14 is thus interpreted: The workings of the rules of the Convention in regard to books which have not become public property will be according to the stipulations contained in special agreements concluded or still to be concluded. If such stipulations are missing between countries of the Union, such countries shall decide, each one for itself, how the rules of Article 14 shall be interpreted.

V. The organization of the International Bureau provided by Article 16 shall be planned by the Government of the Swiss Confederation.

The official language of the International Bureau shall be French.

The International Bureau shall gather and collate all information relating to the rights of authors and shall publish such information. It shall issue a periodical in the French language concerning the objects and interests of the Union. The various governments of the countries of the Union reserve the right to publish such reports in other languages should experience prove this necessary. The International Bureau shall be ready at any time to furnish members of the Union all information regarding the protection of literary and artistic works of which they may stand in need.

The administration of the country in which a Conference is to be held will prepare with the International Bureau the plan and workings of said Conference.

The Director of the International Bureau shall be present at the meetings of the Conferences and shall take part in the discussion without having a vote. He must also make an annual report, which shall be communicated to all the members of the Union.

The expenses of the International Bureau shall be defrayed in common by all the countries interested. Until otherwise provided for, they shall not exceed the sum of 60,000 francs (12,000 dollars) a year. This sum may be increased by a simple vote at one of the Conferences provided for by Article 17.

To determine the relative proportion of expense to be paid by any country, the countries shall be divided into six classes, and the sum total divided among them.

[Germany, France, Great Britain, and Italy have been declared in the first class, Spain in the second, Belgium and Switzerland in the third, Hayti in the fifth, and Tunis in the sixth.]

Every country shall declare, the moment it joins, in which class it asks to be registered.

The Swiss administration prepares the budget of the Bureau and oversees the expenses, advances the necessary funds and makes out the annual accounts, which are communicated to all the other administrations.

The next conference shall be held at Paris about four or six years after the rules of the Convention go into force.

The French Government shall fix the date, after consulting with the International Bureau.

It is decided that for exchanges of ratifications, as provided in Article 21, each contracting party shall furnish a document which shall be placed in the archives of the government of the Swiss Confederation. Each party shall receive a copy of the proceedings, signed by the plenipotentiaries, who have taken part in the Convention. The present protocols of closing session shall be ratified at the same time as the Convention, and shall be considered an integral part of the same, and have the same value and duration. In view of which the plenipotentiaries have furnished it with their signature.

Additional Provisions.

It is further provided in what concerns the accession of colonies or foreign possessions as provided in Article 19 of the Convention:

The plenipotentiaries of his Catholic Majesty, the King of Spain, reserve the right to withhold his decision until the moment of exchanging ratifications.

The plenipotentiary of the French Republic declares that the accession of his country carries with it the accession of all the colonies of France.

The plenipotentiaries of her Britannic Majesty declare that the accession of Great Britain includes the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and all the colonies and foreign possessions of her Majesty. They reserve for the English Government the right to give notice at any time of one or more of the following colonies or possessions, as provided in Article 20, to wit: the Indies, the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, The Cape, New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, Tasmania, New Zealand, and Central and Western Australia.

THE CHATTERBOX INJUNCTIONS.

THE following is the text of the temporary injunction in the Chicago "Chatterbox" case:

Circuit Court of the United States, Northern District of Illinois. In Equity.—Dana Estes & al. vs. Belford, Clarke & Co. et al.—Temporary Restraining Order.

Now come the complainants by their solicitors, and upon submitting their bill of complaint, and the affidavits of Dana Estes, Walter F. Reeder, and J. I. Veeder, and the copies of documents, decisions, decrees, and exhibits thereto attached, it appearing to me that there is danger of irreparable injury to the complainants from delay and that sufficient cause exists therefor, and complainants upon said affidavits and exhibits, and upon said bill of complaint praying for a temporary restraining order, etc.

It is ordered that the said defendants, and each of them, and their attorneys, agents, employes, and workmen, be enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly selling or shipping out of the jurisdiction of this court any juvenile publications bearing in or upon the same the word "Chatterbox," and further, that the said defendants, the said Belford, Clarke & Co., its directors, officers. managers, agents, servants, and workmen, and said Alexander Belford, James Clarke, and M. A. Donohue, and the attorneys, agents, workmen. and servants of them and each of them, be enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly making, printing, publishing, selling, offering, or keeping for sale any books of the general class. style, and character in said bill of complaint mentioned, upon which are printed, marked, stamped, or attached said word "Chatterbox," or any word essentially identical therewith, or which is subtantially the same as that adopted and used by said James Johnston and the said complainants. as his assignees, in connection with the manufacture, publication, and sale of said books, and also from advertising, or printing, or circulating, any catalogue, or publications, or circulars, or notices, of any kind whatsoever, announcing that they have ever sold, or are making, or offering for sale juvenile books bearing said word "Chatter-box," all, as in said bill of complaint, is prayed until the further order of this court.

And this temporary restraining order is made also and specially to apply to publications of the defendants referred to in said bill of complaint and affidavits and known or marked as "Chatterbox, 1883," "Belford's Chatterbox, 1884" (there being two exhibits of this title, one bound in cloth and one in paper, and both of which are included); "Belford's Chatterbox, 1885;" Belford's Chatterbox, 1886-87;" "Our Boys' Chatterbox;" "Our Girls' Chatterbox;" "Our Baby's Chatterbox;" and "Little Pet's Chatterbox."

And the said defendants and each of them are hereby ordered and directed to use due diligence and all ordinary and available business methods from and after the service of this order promptly to suppress the advertisement, display, offering distribution, and sale of each and every the books herein generally and specifically referred to, so far as the same may be either within their direct or their indirect possession or control, including all books in transit and all delivered on consignment, and so to restrain and prevent the further advertisement, display, offering, distribution and sale thereof until the further order of this court.

And it is further ordered that the said delendants appear and show cause why a preliminary injunction as prayed for in said bill of complaint shall not be granted and that said motion shall be heard on Monday, October 25, 1886, at 10 A.M. or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, before me in chambers at the city of Chicago; and that copies of said bill of complaint and affidavits be served upon one of said defendants on or before the 7th October, 1886, and that the defendants shall serve upon complainants' solicitors at Chicago on or before Thursday, October 21, 1886, any and all answers, affidavits, exhibits, and motion papers upon which said defendants may rely at the hearing of said motion, and the said complainants shall file their affidavits and exhibits in rebuttal on or before the day of the hearing of said motion; but further time may be granted the defendants for filing said affidavits and exhibits in reply, and the hearing of said motion may be accordingly postponed upon application made to the Court under due notice to complainants' solicitors, but said application for an extension of time shall be made on or before Monday, October

This order to be operative from and after service of motion herein and of this order upon defendants. W. Q. GRESHAM, Circuit Judge.

PAPER BACKS FOR BOOK-COVERS.

A new method of making paper backs for bookcovers, says the American Bookmaker, consists in first preparing a flat blank of moist paper, formed by placing a number of thin sheets of paper together, the length, width, and thickness depending upon the size and style of the book for which the back is to be used. This blank is separated into two parts, which are placed in a die consisting of two parts—a lower or intaglio mould, and an upper part or follower fitting into the former, and having raised bands or projections corresponding to depressions in the intaglio mould. In order to prevent the two parts from adhering and becoming united after the blank has been placed into the mould, finely powdered talc is sprinkled between the two surfaces. After the moist blank has been pressed in a suitable press, it is, with the mould containing it, dried gradually in a kiln. In order to allow the moisture in the blank to escape, the upper or male part of the die is made hollow and provided with a number of small apertures to permit the escape of the moisture. After the blank has become dry and hard, the form is removed from the kiln, and the entire blank is trimmed by cutting off the rough and uneven ends and edges, giving it straight and smooth sides and heads. A band of leather or other suitable flexible material is then placed between the two parts, with overlapping ends and sides, to form the hinges and headbands or endbands in binding the book. In order to prevent this flexible band from drawing and crimping or wrinkling at the depressed sections, portions of the band are cut out, registering with the transverse bands, so that the flexible band will lie perfectly straight and smooth between the two parts or sections. The several parts are then firmly united by glueing, cementing, or riveting them together, after which the back is ready for the finisher. Before the flexible band is inserted and fastened the blank is waterproofed by immersing it into a waterproofing band, and then baking it in a dry-kiln. The back is finished by trimming the projecting edges of the flexible hinge-band, painting or varnishing the body of the back, embossing and tooling the raised bands and panels, and affixing suitable labels, if desired.

MEMORIES OF A VETERAN PRINTER.

IN RE URIEL CROCKER.

By J. S. Redfield in the N. Y. Tribune.

THE Mr. Uriel Crocker, of Cohasset, Mass., spoken of in a recent "Personal" in The Tribune, is an old typo. Sixty odd years ago when I first knew him he was foreman of the printing-office of the late S. T. Armstrong, of Boston, with whom he had also served an apprenticeship. In those days a boy had to serve seven years to learn the printers' trade, but he learned something more than merely "sticking" type. Presswork was than merely sticking syptements of their done on hand-presses. Machine presses or inking machines were unknown. The forms were inked with balls by one man, when another pulled the impression. Eight tokens a day, 1000 impressions on one side, was considered a day's At that rate, how many men and presses would Mr. De Vinne want to print the monthly edition of The Century i

Mr. Armstrong was the publisher of "Scott's Commentary on the Bible," a large octavo in six volumes. It was being stereotyped at the Boston type and stereotype foundry in 1824, when I was at the time copyholder, as they call it. After reading the proofs twice, the revise was sent to Mr. Crocker for his supervision. It was my business to take these revises to him, and sometimes I had to stop and read the copy to him; so I used to see him very often, and I remember being struck with his kind and genial manners, he being a man of probably twenty-eight, and I a boy of fourteen.

Mr. Armstrong was a successful printer and publisher, he retired from business some fifty years ago with what was then regarded as a fortune and established Mr. Crocker and Mr. Brewster, a clerk in his book-store, as his successors, under the firm name of Crocker & Brewster. With such advantages the new firm prospered famously, and in course of time accumulated fortunes, and they, too, retired from active business. Mr. Crocker has the reputation of being a shrewd financier and of having used his capital since his retirement from the book trade to very great advantage. Where is the typo of to-day who is going to live to be a nono-genarian, and in the enjoyment of a fortune accumulated by himself? I hope there is at least one in every printing-office.

TROUBLES OF LITERARY PIRATES.

New York Correspondence of the Albany Journal.

THE literary pirates of New York have so savagely cut one another's throats that the loss of blood seems likely to kill most of them. Alarming weakness is exhibited in several instances. Each concern has been eager to slash into its competitors, and has done so in a manner to inflict selfinjury. Every foreign novel, no matter whether there was a reasonable chance or not that it would have any sale, has been grabbed at the earliest possible moment by three to six of the "Library publishing firms, and hastily thrown upon the overstocked market on terms that allowed the retailers to return unsold copies. So complete have the mechanical resources of the pirates become that in three establishments the entire work, including typesetting, printing, and binding, is done by machines.

The stolen matter can be rushed through the great mills in ten hours when driven at the quickest. The celerity of the process has tempted the publishers to a vast over-production. A member of one firm declares that not more than one book in twenty in the cheap libraries repays the cost of issue; and that, even with the most popular novelists' stories, duplicate piracy divides the profit into small portions. Heavy capital is required, because all the stock in the hands of the retailers throughout the country is owned by the publishers during the six months that it is left on sale. Within a month the returns of copies have been enormously increased. While the aggregate sales have lessened, the stock issued has been multiplied through hot rivalry. Ineffectual efforts have been made to bring about a compact under which the foreign novels should be apportioned among the libraries, in the way that the regular publishers used to do, but nothing has come of it. Now rumors are afloat of insolvencies and impending bankruptcies.

NOTHING SO CHEAP AS BOOKS.

C. D. Warner in Harper's Monthly.

WE have heard a great deal, since Lord Brougham's time and the societies for the diffusion of knowledge, of the desirability of cheap literature for the masses. The Congressmen place cheapness above honesty in their sincere desire to raise the tone of the American people. There is no product that men use which is now so cheap as newspapers, periodicals, and books. For the price of a box of strawberries or a banana you can buy the immortal work of the greatest genius of all time in fiction, poetry, philosophy, or science. But we doubt if the class that were to be specially benefited by this reduction in price of intellectual food are much profited. Of course some avail themselves of things placed within their reach which they could not own formerly, but it remains true that people value and profit only by that which it costs some effort to obtain. We very much doubt if the mass of the people have as good habits of reading as they had when publications were dearer. Who is it who buy the five, ten, and twenty cent editions? Generally those who could afford to buy, and did buy, books at a fair price, to the remuneration of author and publisher. And their serious reading habit has gone down with the price.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A GOOD WORD FOR THE AMERICAN EDUCA-TIONAL CATALOGUE.

Boston, October 7, 1886.

To the Editor of The Publisher's Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Did we thank you at the time for your note of correction in re the price of Sheldon's General History? We write now to call your attention to rather an amusing experience we have just had, when it is looked at in the proper light. A customer in Chicago writes that when he ordered the book he did so "on the basis of the price found in the Educational Catalogue, and also in one or two other catalogues." It seems that somebody who hadn't the backbone to get up an original catalogue has been copying yours, and taking it, errors and all; and, by the way, we want to say right here that we think THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY Educational Catalogue is remarkably free from errors, and it is one of the most usable books we have in the office. It must be invaluable to all who do a miscellaneous school-book business.

D. C. HEATH & CO.

THE CHATTERBOX CASE. NEW YORK, Oct. 13, 1886.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Will you allow me, through the medium of your valuable paper, to assure the trade that the advertisements of caution against books which may have the word "Chatterbox" as part of their title, have no reference whatever to my books, and that I shall maintain my rights against all comers? Nine years after "Chatterbox Junior" was published (consecutively every year) Estes & Lauriat applied to the United States Circuit Court for an injunction against me, and Judge Wallace refused to grant any injunction. See 22 Federal Rep., p. 823, January 5, 1885.)

We are not afraid to meet fair, open, and hours dealing, either in business or through the courts. but we don't like misrepresentation.

Yours truly,
R. WORTHINGTON.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE edition of the November Century, containing the first chapters of the authorized Life of Lincoln and the opening of Frank R. Stockton's new novel, "The Hundredth Man," will be a quarter of a million copies.

Work and Wages is the title of a new monthly journal for promoting better relations between labor and capital, to be published by Clark W. Bryan & Co., Holyoke, Mass. The journal will have contributions from the most prominent thinkers, writers, and workers in the field of labor, and the editorial management will be without bias, as it will have no party, class, or dogm

ONE of the most interesting and useful pages that has ever appeared in the Decorator and Furnisher is that in the October issue, giving a number of designs for small pieces of furniture, such as brackets, sconces, book-racks, and the like. Every article shown in the page is novel and practical. Among its supplements this month is a colored plate of the famous America Cup, worthy of preservation.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE long-promised history of Oxford by Mr. H. C. Maxwell Lyte, author of the "History of Eton," will be entitled "Mediæval Oxford," from the earliest times to the revival of learning.

PAUL DU CHAILLU, who for several years has been living in the north, chiefly Copenhagen, has just finished a work on the wanderings, religion, culture, and conquests of the earliest Scandinavians, entitled "The Viking Age."

MR. EDWARD FULLER, dramatic editor and editorial writer of the Boston Post, is said to be engaged on his third novel, which will probably appear early next year. It will bear the title, "Theodore Trent," and will be issued simultaneously in England and this country.

"IT is believed," says the Literary World, that Miss Hannah L. Talbot, daughter of George F. Talbot, of Portland, Me., the lawyer who wrote the interesting study, 'Jesus, His Opinions and His Character,' is the author of the story, 'Not in the Prospectus, issued over the name of Parke Danforth.' Both the story and the nom de plume afford proof of this belief. Miss Talbot has done some of the best (short) juvenile-story work ever produced, her 'Tom's Menagerie,' in the Pontant Transcript several years ago, equalling Mark Twain's most successful efforts in representing boy-life and character. 'Parke' and 'Danforth' are understood to be the names of the two streets on the corner of which this author lives."

MISS MARIE A. BROWN has nearly finished a book which is to be called "Honor to Whom Honor is Due: the Norse discoverers of America." The idea has occurred to her that it would be desirable to commemorate the Norse discovery at the American exhibition to be held in London next year. This exhibit, she writes, "would consist of all the works, ancient and modern, that confirm the fact of the Norse discovery—a hundred or more volumes; reproductions in miniature of the dwellings the Vikings lived in, their ships, burial-places, etc., and of the weapons, ornaments, household utensils, etc., used by them; a Norse warrior in armor could also be reproduced to the life," and she has applied to the Executive Committee to grant space for an exhibit.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BELLEFONT, PA.—W. B. Schaeffer, bookseller and stationer, has removed from Bellefonte, Pa., to Milton, Pa.

BOSTON.—Charles C. Soule, law publisher and bookseller, has removed from 17 Pemberton Square to Freeman Place Chapel, 15½ Beacon Street, Boston.

RICHMOND, VA.—Beckwith, Parham & Anderson, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

SHELBYVILLE, IND.—Robbins & Powell, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Mr. Chas. G. Collins, who has been for many years connected with the American News Company, will henceforth represent, on the road, the New York branch of Belford, Clarke &

WE presume that most of the trade will recognize in Howard W. Preston, the author, or, rather, compiler of "Documents Illustrative of American History," just published by the Putnams, the junior member of the firm of Tibbitts & Preston, of Providence, R. I. The work is a creditable one in every respect, and we congratulate Mr. Preston on the success of his enterprise.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have reduced the price of Tolstol's "My Religion" from $1.25 to $1.

"THROUGH THE LONG DAY" is the title of Dr. Charles Mackay's autobiography now in process of construction.

"A QUESTION OF IDENTITY" is the title of a new novel to be issued in the No Name series. It will be ready in January.

In the Famous Women series will be issued a sketch of Mrs. Siddons, by Mrs. Kennard, and a biography of Mme. de Staël, by Miss Bella Hardy.

BRYAN, TAYLOR & Co., N. Y., have in press a comprehensive history of the Baptists, from the time of John the Baptist to the present, by the Rev. Dr. Armitage. The work will be sold by subscription only.

WM. PAUL GERHARD, 6 Astor Place, N. Y., has just issued a pamphlet written by himself on "The Prevention of Fire," chiefly with reference to hospitals, asylums, and other public institutions.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. say that Dr. Ely's book on the labor movement is having a good sale. The third thousand is now in press, and the work is being called for from various parts of the country.

CASSELL & COMPANY have in press a collection of stories by Mrs. Mary D. Brine, entitled "The Stories Grandma Told." They are said to be in Mrs. Brine's happiest vein, which has proved so attractive to young people.

THE next novel selected for translation in the excellent Balzac series published by Roberts Brothers is "Le Médecin de Campagne," which will be brought out during the winter. "Eugénie Graudet" is in its fifth edition.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY Co. will publish a new edition of "The Life of the Ven. Gerard Mary Majella," Professed Lay-Brother of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer, translated from the German of the Rev. Charles Dilgskron by Rev. Eugene Grimm.

CHARLES BOWERS, 72 years old, who claims to live in Somerville, Mass., was charged with larceny in one of the municipal courts of Boston. During the examination he confessed having stolen a number of books, in the past two years, from Cupples, Upham & Co., Estes & Lauriat, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and Little, Brown & Co. The police have recovered about 75 volumes.

WE learn from the Rev. Dr. Stockbridge, of Providence, R. I., that the annotated catalogue of the "Harris Collection of American Poetry" is in the hands of the printer, the titles, with accompanying biographical and bibliographical notes, having already been carried through the letter "S." It is hoped that the volume will be ready for delivery in October.

IRA BRADLEY & Co., Boston, have become the publishers of Dr. Edward C. Mitchell's well-known series of Hebrew and Greek text-books formerly issued by W. F. Draper. They comprise Dr. Mitchell's "Elementary Hebrew Grammar and Reading-Book," his "Critical Handbook—a guide to the study of the authenticity, canon, and text of the Greek New Testament," and his editions of "Davies' Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon to the Old Testament," and Davies' "Gesenius' Hebrew Grammar."

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have issued a desirable and useful holiday gift for ladies in their new edition of the "Elite Engagement Calendar." They are put up in sets of twelve cards with a frame, to show the current month. The cards are handsomely printed in red and black with blank space for engagements, and an appropriate quotation for each month. The frames can be had in light calf, russia, and red and blue plush; they are made with easel backs and can be placed in such a position as to be always in sight as a reminder.

A. J. HOLMAN & Co. have added a large number of new styles and designs to their line of Parallel Bibles, as well as to their edition of the authorized revision. In their Parallel Bible they claim to use a type double the size of the largest type used in any of the English and American editions of the Revised Bible. The bindings on all their books are artistic and of the very best kind. They have also added many new and attractive styles to their already large assortment of photograph albums. They report that their fall trade is exceedingly good, and shows a handsome increase over last year.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER, senior member of the firm that is publishing Gen. Grant's book, said to a Sun reporter on the 11th inst., that he had just handed to Mrs. Grant the firm's check for $150,000, the second instalment due her under the General's contract. Her 70 per cent. of the profits on the sale of the book will continue during the twenty-eight years of copyright protection secured to the work, so that she will doubtless receive anywhere from $600,000 to $700,000. Mr. Webster also said that his firm contemplated publishing an edition de luxe of the book, each copy containing portions of Gen. Grant's original manuscript. The edition will probably be limited to 500 copies.

Anderson & Krum, New York, will publish this fall the "Chautauqua Gem Calendar for 1887," complied by Miss M. A. Barney. It will contain a leaf for every day in the year, each leaf containing choice selections from the best of American and English poets and prose writers. This is the third year of the C. L. S. C. Calendar, and is a great improvement over former issues. The leading feature in the new calendar is that the Scripture promise is given for each day of the week, and that the quotations are on the same line of thought. This Calendar is not only adapted to readers of the C. L. S. C. course of reading, but to members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, also to Sundayschool teachers and Christian workers generally.

A QUEER controversy has started up respecting the "loyalty" of a school-book published by the house of A. S. Barnes & Co., entitled a "Brief History of the United States," by the late Prof. J. Dorman Steele, of Elmira, N. Y. The question was raised a few weeks ago in the Grand Army Post at Saratoga whether this work was suitable to be put in the hands of youth as a textbook, and it was decided in a qualified way in the negative. The question is now agitating the Board of Education of Newark. The facts have been brought out that the book has been in use fourteen years without a word of disapproval until now on the score of loyalty, that it was prepared by a Union soldier who was desperately wounded at the battle of Fair Oaks while leading his men (Company K, Eighty-first New York Volunteers) in action, that it received the approval of the official organ of the Grand Army of the Republic (the National Tribune), and that the principal charge brought against it-that of underrating the numbers of Lee's army at the final surrender at Appomattox, and thus belittling the achievements of Gen. Grant-is untrue, since the author in a foot-note gave the official returns of both sides. Such a controversy, says the Evening Post, has more of the marks of a fight among book agents for the command of the market, than of a competitive examination for loyalty.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish this week "The Huguenots and Henry of Navarre," by Prof. H. M. Baird, author of "The History of the Rise of the Huguenots in France," which gives an account of the persistent struggle of the Huguenots of France to secure a fair degree of religious liberty, such as they finally attained in the Edict of Nantes; fifteen years of the struggle (1574-1589) falling in the reign of their deadly enemy, Henry III., and nine more (1589-1598) in the reign of the friendly Henry of Navarre, now known in history as Henry IV. of France. The work, while distinct in itself, is supplementary to the author's previous work on the Huguenots. They have in preparation "The History of the Roman Provinces," by Prof. T. Mommsen, which picks up the thread of the author's history of Rome dropped in 1855. The present work treats the subject from the time of Cæsar to that of Diodetian, is translated by Dr. W. P. Dickson, and will be issued in two octavo volumes. Gen. Francis A. Walker has prepared an historical and personal account of the famous "Second Army Corps," which will contain thirty-two portraits, made especially for this book. An interesting volume will be "Our Arctic Province Alaska, and the Seal Islands," by H. W. Elliott, who has for many years been connected with the Smithsonian Institution, and who spent six or seven years in studying Alaska and its people. The book will contain about 100 engravings from the author's original drawings. In "Down the Islands," A. Paton describes a journey through the British Guiana Islands, Barbadoes, St. Kitts, Antigua, and other of the Windward Islands, with numerous illustrations; and in "The Age of Electricity," Park Benjamin will describe the wonderful advances which have been made in practically applying electric force to the service of man.

SWAN, SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will publish at once Dr. R. Hassencamp's "Geschichte Irland's," translated by Miss Robinson.

"DRAT THE BOYS! or, recollections of an ex-Frenchmaster in England," by M. Max O'Rell, is to be published shortly in the Leadenhall Press new Sixpenny series of books.

A LIFE of Ivan Tourguénief, extending to three large volumes, has been written in German by Dr. R. Lewenfeldt, of the University of Breslau, editor of the periodical Nord und Süd.

ÉMILE ZOLA's new book is to be a study of the life of railway employés in France. Like his recent works it will appear in the Gil Blas in feuilleton form before being published as a volume.

THE copyright of the heirs of the Russian poet, Pushkin, expires with the present year, and in view of this no fewer than ten new editions of the works of the poet are already being prepared by Russian publishers.

MR. FREDERICK BARNARD's annual portfolio of character sketches will be devoted to Thackeray this year. The sketches will depict "Becky Sharp," the "Little Sister," "Col. Newcome," "Major Pendennis," "Captain Costigan," and "Major Dobbin." Messrs. Cassell & Co. are again the publishers of this delightful art annual.

MR. TUER, in the introduction to his new book, "Follies and Fashions of our Grandfathers," the dedication of which, by the way, has been accepted by the Queen, thus explains his reason for printing but three copies of the best edition of the work: "It seems," he says, "that the British Museum has the legal right—a right always rigorously enforced—of demanding one of the most expensive copies of any book published. The writer has suffered before, and he takes this opportunity of getting even. He had intended to print only one copy on brown paper; but before going to press elected to have an edition of three—the first copy for the British Museum, the second for himself to take home and chuckle over when out of sorts, and the third for any one who likes to pay for it."

Blue Jackets of '61.

A History of the Navy in the War of Secession, for young people. By Willis J. Abbot. Large 4to, with many Illustrations, principally by W. C. Jackson. $3.00.

"In external appearance, in subject matter, and in method of treatment, this is as attractive a volume as one often sees. The eye is caught at the first glance by the original material and design of the cover, as appropriate as it is unconventional, and in admirable taste. Turning the leaves, one finds a profusion of spirited illustrations of all manner of stirring incidents in the great naval contests of our latest war. Coming to the direct work of the author, the reader becomes inevitably interested in the graphic and vivid narration of sea fights, naval expeditions, the daring of blockade-runners, the thrilling passages of personal courage, and the many deeds of heroism. In such events as these the naval history of the war of 'or abounds, and they lose nothing in the nervous, vigorous, and often brilliant style of the narrator."—Christian Union.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE TRADE.

706 & 708 SANSOM STREET,

GENTLEMEN:

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 1, 1886.

ESIRING to test practically the truth of the often-repeated assertion that the rapid growth of the subscription-book trade is due to the lack of energy displayed by booksellers in pushing ales, we have determined to put the question to proof by placing in the ands of the general trade a book well adapted to sale by either method, nd at the liberal discounts customary with the subscription business.

Personally, our belief is that equal sales can be attained through he general trade, where discounts warrant as vigorous pushing as is ustomary with successful subscription houses.

The book selected for the trial, "Hartshorne's Household Manual of Medicine,"* is eminently suited to the purpose. The subject is one that appeals to all. The volume is but just published, is written in so clear and lucid a manner as to be readily intelligible to all, and is supplied with numerous indexes so arranged that all information is instantly available. The author is widely known among both the medical profession and the general public, and his name is a guarantee that nothing appears in the text that can be considered objectionable by the most scrupulous.

To those who will push sales the following generous discounts are offered, for cash with order:

| On orders of less than 10 copies, | | - | - | - | 30 per | cent. |
|-------------------------------------|---------|---|---|---|--------|-------|
| On orders of 10 and less than 25 of | copies, | - | - | - | 35 per | cent. |
| On orders of 25 and less than 50 | copies, | - | - | - | 40 per | cent. |
| On orders of 50 copies and over, | | - | - | - | 50 per | cent. |

Upon request, we shall be glad to supply a reasonable quantity of descriptive circulars, bearing your imprint, and will enclose them with your first shipment.

Awaiting your favors, we remain yours truly,

Sets are left of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE of 1876, the last having been sold at $60, over double the original price.

Take warning, and order, before it is too late, the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876–1884, of which the edition is also limited, now priced at $12.50 paper parts, $15 half morocco. It is worth twice its cost each year in any library or bookstore.

We have some extra copies of the Subject-volume only of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876. This contains, classified by subjects, all but the Novels, Poems, etc., and is very useful by itself. Price, $15, half morocco.

We could complete five sets of the 1876 catalogue if we had the first paper part (p. 1-224. A-Edwards). We will pay $10 each for copies of this part, and register orders to be filled if sets are completed, at $60 for the 2 vols., half morocco.

THE

For 1886 (Fourteenth Year).

A large 8vo, over 2500 pages. With Duplex Index. Cloth, $2.

The improvements of recent years in the Trade-List Annual have given such general satisfaction that there will be no change in the forthcoming volume (fourteenth year) as to the essential features, which are:

- I. The latest Catalogues of American Publishers and Manufacturers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm names.
- 2. A complete reprint of the "Publishers' Weekly" full title RECORD OF BOOKS published (inclusive of all the descriptive notes) from July 4, 1885, to June 26, 1886. In order to facilitate reference, it will be accompanied by a full INDEX, by which every book on record can be found, whether it is looked for under author, title, or subject.
- 3. The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1886, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase and sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we have decided to apply it in the future to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 70 cents per copy extra.

Office of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY,"

THE LITERARY NEWS.

THE literary paper is one of the features of the day, and while directly benefiting the case of good literature, as directly benefits the book trade by creating a demand for the books it notices. Every bookseller should, through such mediums, endeavor to keep his customers thoroughly posted on the literature of the day. But without taking into account the time and laborespended, and the painstaking discrimination necessary for the compilation of a reliable literary journal, the cost entailed by such a publication necessarily deters booksellers from, themselves, editing and issuing such a medium.

The LITERARY NEWS, however, based on an experience of over fifteen years' continuous issue, is an acknowledged authority on current books and reading, and the plan upon which it is issued, enabling booksellers to circulate it among their customers under their own imprint, virtually makes it the recognized organ of each bookseller distributing it, and turns a direct trade in books into his own hands.

No better time than the present can be found for the adoption of the LITERARY News by live booksellers as a personal medium. Especial attention is therefore invited to it, in the hope that booksellers who are not now using it will test its efficiency by ordering an imprint edition for the fall and winter months.

The book-notices of the LITERARY NEWS are always selected from leading papers, and are such as have weight with readers, while the other features of the paper make it a welcome monthly visitor in every home, and establish pleasant and direct relations between booksellers and bookbuyers.

ISSUED BY

[ALL ENTERPRISING BOOKSELLERS.]

The subscription edition of the ILLUSTRATED CHRISTMAS NUMBER of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be issued as early in November as possible, to give time for the imprint editions to reach all dealers three weeks before Christmas at the latest.

The Number will as usual present the finest specimen illustrations from the New Hollday Books, with special articles on the leading works, a full descriptive summary of books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the Illustrated Works, Books for the Young, and other Choice Books published during 1886, etc., etc. Every endeavor will be made to surpass the issues of previous years.

The imprint edition (intended for distribution by dealers with their sole imprint) will be printed immediately after the issue of the Trade edition, under the title of "Christmas Catalogue," as given above.

The local bookseller can add half as much again to his holiday trade by properly calling the attention of the public to his goods. For this purpose, the best means is the circulation of this handsome, interesting, and comprehensive Christmas Catalogue, which is received with pleasure by those to whom it is given or sent, as itself a picture-book of no little value; and its descriptions of and illustrations from books, at once arouse the desire to purchase the books themselves.

No better investment can be made by the bookseller who wants to make the most of his holiday trade.

Orders filled in the order of size of edition, largest first, and then of receipt. As the paper is specially made for this issue, orders should be received at once, as the filling of later demands cannot be guaranteed.

These prices are all lower than the actual cost to us, and are made to insure wide circulation of the publishers' advertising.

Orders should be sent in at once, and in order to avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the remittance All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

Literary News. 1886.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS.

THE LITERARY NEWS for Christmas, 1886, will embrace thirty-two pages of reading matter and illustrations, and we intend to make it of a higher interest and artistic attractiveness than last year, and to issue it promptly.

Its sole aim and object is to increase the sale of books; and every bookseller who distributes it may be sure of being benefited thereby.

A chief attraction of the forthcoming issue will be the numerous specimen illustrations from the most prominent and popular new holiday books.

The most valuable feature, besides the Literary Notes, will be a special price-list of the Books of the Season, in all the departments of Holiday Literature.

To those who desire to reach a wider public than they feel they can afford to seek through the more expensive Christmas Number of the Publishers' Weekly, the Christmas Number of the Literary News is recommended as the best possible medium to cultivate a holiday trade.

THE HUGUENOTS AND HENRY OF NAVARRE.

HENRY M. BAIRD, Professor in the University of New York. Uniform with the Author's "The History of the Rise of the Huguenots of France." 2 vols., 8vo, with maps, $5.00.

Professor Baird gives an account of the struggles of the Huguenots of France to secure a fair degree of religious iberty. The work narrates the story of the heroic and unfinching determination which finally secured the Edict of Santes, the last chapter giving a sketch of the halcyon days of Protestantism in France under the Edict, and down to be death of Henry IV. The work, while distinct in itself, is supplementary to the author's "The Rise of the Huguetots of France.

Miss Wright has the rare faculty of writing history in so entertaining a way that young people are led to read it with quite the same interest that they would devote to a romance. In this book the author touches upon the imporant events in our history in so graphic a way as to firmly impress them upon the minds of young readers. The book is a companion volume to Miss Wright's "Children's Stories in American History," published last year.

The Chamber Over the Gate.

By MARGRET HOLMES.

12mo., pp. 560, vellum cloth, colored edges, $2.00.

- "A story with merit."—Detroit News.
- "Beautifully printed and bound."—Indiana polis News.

"Our reading of 'The Chamber Over the Gate' has discovered in it more of the elements of that long-expected product, 'the great American novel,' than we have found in any recent work of fiction.

. . . It has large stature, reserve force, abundant play of power; its intellectual endowment is marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, absorbing. . . Its commanding proportions, its excellent paper and print, its salmon-colored edges and cover of old gold, mark it out among the mass of books with a certain distinctness well befitting its uncommon character." — Literary World, Boston.

"A well-written story of life, with no straining after dramatic effect, but possessing a quiet attractiveness that holds the attention to the end."—Sunday Morning Herald, Rochester, N. Y.

Chatterbox Injunction.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK. In Equity.

Dana Estes & Charles E. Lauriat 115.

Frank Leslie, The American News Company, and Patrick Farrelly.

Upon reading the hereto annexed affidavits, copy of Bill of Complaint herein, and on motion of G. G. Frelinghuysen, Esq., counsel for complainants, it is hereby ordered that the defendants, Frank Leslie, The American News Company, and Patrick Farrelly, or their solicitors, show cause before me or one of the Judges of this Court at chambers thereof in the Post-Office Building, in the City of New York, or Friday, the 15th day of October, 1886, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day or a soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, why an injunction should not be issued commanding and enjoining the said Frank Leslie, The American News Company, a corporation and Patrick Farrelly, and each of them, their and each of their attorneys, agents, clerks servants, workmen, and the officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, servants, workmen of said corporation, and any and all persons claiming or holding under or through them, or either of them, to desist from printing, stamping, marking, attaching, or affixing said name or word "CHATTERBOOK" in or upon books of a juvenile character of the general appearance, style, and manner of cover and styles of printing which are upon complainants' said books, referred to in the Bill of Complaint filed in this suit, and from simulating the appearance and style of printing of the complainants' "Chatterbox," and from selling, offering for sale, and from presenting to the public juvenile publications, printed in such style and in such manner as to lead the public to believe that there are the publications of the complainants.

And it is further ordered that the said defendants, Frank Leslie, The American News Company, and Patrick Farrelly, their and each of their attorneys, agents, clerks, servants, workmen, and the officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, servants and workmen of said corporation, and each of them, be enjoined and restrained, and are hereby forbidden to suffer or commit any of said acts until the further order of this Court.

That service of this order on or before October 12, 1886, be sufficient.

Dated Oct. 11, 1886.

W. J. WALLACE

We therefore again issue our

NOTICE TO ALL DEALERS IN BOOKS.

We hereby caution you against buying or selling any book bearing the name "Chatter-box," either alone or in combination with other words, excepting those with our imprint, or marked as sold under our license, as the United States Courts have repeatedly confirmed our exclusive right to this word as a trademark, and ALL INFRINGERS, whether PUBLISHERS or DEALERS, WILL BE PROSECUTED.

ESTES & LAURIAT, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

TRUTH vs. FICTION.

The pretence of ESTES & LAURIAT that they have obtained the i njunction of the United States Circuit Court against any publication with the word "Chatterbox" has imposed upon the public long enough.

The injunction they did obtain was in these words: "It is also further adjudged and decreed that a perpetual injunction be issued in this suit against the said defendants, Belford, Clarke & Co., restraining them, . . . their servants, . . . and all persons claiming or holding under or through them, or either of them, from printing, stamping, marking, attaching, or affixing said name or word · Chatterbox' in or upon books of a juvenile character OF THE GENERAL APPEARANCE, STYLE, AND MANNER OF COVER AND STYLE OF PRINTING WHICH ARE UPON THE COMPLAINANTS' SAID BOOKS, . simulating the appearance and style of printing of the complainants' · Chatterbox; ' and from selling, offering for sale, and from presenting to the public juvenile publications printed IN SUCH STYLE, and with the use of the title 'Chatterbox,' IN SUCH MANNER as to lead the public to believe that they are the publications of the complainants."

Precisely the same injunction was granted against FRANK LESLIE, and no other or different one has ever been obtained by them.

My books do not resemble in any of the respects mentioned the publications of Estes & Lauriat.

That the public may know what kind of men ESTES & LAURIAT are, I give the following extract from the testimony of Mr. ESTES in their suit against me:

Cross-Interrogatory No. 227.

Was not the REPRINT of the "Chatterbox" of 1878 MADE BY YOU in a form CALCULATED TO DECEIVE THE PUBLIC?

Ans. Upon reflection I should say it undoubtedly was. Cross-Int. 228. And was so intended?

Ans. YES.

Judge Wallace on January 5, 1885, refused to grant any injunction against my publications containing the word "Chatterbox" as part of the title.

See his opinion in 22 Federal Reporter, p. 823.

BOOKS FOR THINKERS.

The Labor Movement in America.

By Prof. RICHARD T. ELY. 12mo, $1.50.

By Prof. RICHARD T. ELY. 12mo, $1.50.

This book is the result of several years' work on the part of Prof. Ely, who is an acknowledged authority, both in Europe and America, on economic and social topics. It is the most complete historical sketch yet published of the origin and growth both of Socialism and of labor organizations. No pains have been spared to secure accuracy. Professor Ely has collected for years books, pamphlets, labor newspapers, constitutions of trades-unions, and like material, with this in view; and, during the preparation of this book, he has travelled several thousand miles, visiting Communistic settlements and leading industrial centres, and forming the acquaintances of labor leaders. His picture of the present condition of the labor movement may be relied upon as taken from life.

A CHARMING STORY:

The Marquis of Penalta.

(MARTA Y MARIA.)

I 2100 By Don Armando Palacio Valdes.

"The literature is delightful; full of charming humor, tender pathos, the liveliest sympathy with nature, the keenest knowledge of human nature, and a style whose charm makes itself felt through the shadows of a strange speech. It is the story of two sisters—daughters of the chief family in a Spanish scaport city. Maria, who passes from the romance of literature to the romance of religion and abandons home, father, and lover, to become the spouse of Heaven; and Marta, who remains to consol all these for her loss. We do not remember a character more finely studied than that of Maria. But Maria-Marta is delicious! Nothing could be lovelier than the portrayal of this girl's affection for her father and mother, and of the tenderness that insensibly grows up between the supplier of the strength of the strength of the tenderness that insensibly grows up between the nath her sister's lover, left step by step in the lurch by the intending bride of Heaven.

her and her sister's lover, left step by step in the intending bride of Heaven.

"A sketch of the story gives no idea of its situations of what is more difficult and important, the atmosphere of reality in which it moves. The whole social life of the quiet town is skilfully suggested, and an abundance of figures pass before us, all graphically drawn, none touched with weakness or exaggeration."

NOTES IN SEASON.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in press another book for young people entitled "Prince Peerless: A Fairy Folk Story-Book," by Hon. Margaret Collier. It will be illustrated by Mr. John Collier, the author's brother, the famous English. painter, whose recent portrait of Miss Huxley was : heralded with so much praise.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have in preparation a new edition of "Ralph Waldo Emerson, his maternal ancestors, with some reminiscences, of him," by his relative, David Greene Haskins, printed in large type and illustrated with silhouette portraits, The first edition is all sold. They have nearly ready "Two Comedies," by F. Donaldson, Jr., of Baltimore, Md... They are entitled "An Ill Wind" and "An Abject Apology."

D. APPLETON & Co. will have ready about November 1st a national romance by Geo. Alfred Townsend, called "Katy of Catoctin," beginning with the raid of John Brown at Harper's Perry, and bringing in picturesque, romantic, historical, | publish very soon.

domestic, and dramatic incidents of the eventful years between that raid and the death of Lincoln; and an exquisite edition of the best known " Essays of Elia," with over one hundred wood-cut illustrations, the work of Mr. Charles O. Murray, who did such clever work in illustrating Addison's "Sir Roger de Coverley," some two years since.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have just ready a fine volume of interest to Americans, in "Memorials of Washington and of Mary his Mother, and Martha his Wife, from letters and papers of Robert Cary and James Sharples," by Major James Walter. The volume is illustrated with portraits in autotype of Washington and his wife, of seven prominent American women of the period, and of Priestly, from paintings by Sharples, the originals of which are now on exhibition at the rooms of the American Art Association, 6 E. Twenty-third Street, New York City; also a portrait of Mary Washington by Middleton.

LEE & SHEPARD have in preparation for early publication "The Monarch of Dreams," by Thos. Wentworth Higginson, a work which will attract attention for the reason that it indicates a reversion from the current realism to the more imaginative school of Hawthorne. It is based on a careful study-perhaps through the Society for Psychical Research—of the phenomena of dreaming. The hero, a lone man in a farm-house among the hills, is possessed with the ambition to connect his dreams and thus lead two separate existences, and this he carries out with a success that ends in tragedy. It reminds the reader of Hawthorne in its style. They have also nearly ready "Sketches of Western Life," by Hon. Harvey Rice, of Cleveland, Ohio.

TICKNOR & Co. publish to-day "Sonnets from the Portuguese," by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, illustrated by Ludvig Sandoe Ipsen, in an oblong folio (13x16 inches) bound in cloth and tree calf. This magnificent work has been a labor of love with the artist for many years, he having lavished upon it all the resources of his imagination and skill. They have also just ready "Stories of Art and Artists," by Clara Erskine Clement, a profusely illustrated work, giving a complete resume of the history of art, with accounts of the various schools, sketches and anecdotes of the great artists, with portraits and reproductions of their works; "Songs and Satires," a volume of poems by James Jeffrey Roche, well known as a contributor of singularly original and delicate vers de société to Life and other periodicals; and "Literary Curiosities," edited by Henry M. Brooks, of Salem, being vol. vi. of the the Olden-Time Series. The publishers have now put up this popular series in sets, in a handsome box containing the six volumes.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. JENNIE E. CROLY ("Jennie June"), it is reported, has resigned the editorship of Demorest's Magazine.

THE first chapters of William Black's new story, "Sabina Zembra," appeared in England on the 9th of this month,

It is said that Miss Kathleen O'Meara, whose excellent series of articles on Madame Mohl were such a pleasant feature of the Atlantic last year, has placed the manuscript of a new novel in the hands of the Messrs. Harper, which they will

Nearly all the characters presented and all that take prominent parts in the story have been introduced in the preceding volumes of the series. The principal of the Beech Hill Industrial School entertains some doubts in regard to the principle upon which he has been conduct. Beech Hill Industrial School entertains some doubts in regard to the principle upon which he has been conducting the institution, and brings about a partial change in its character—by making it partly reformatory—still retaining its useful features. The subjects of the new experiment are the Topovers, the bad characters of the story, who become more tractable. The book is full of adventure and incident. The work to be done by the students is to riga fore-and-aft schooner. rig a fore-and-aft schooner.

The object of the Boston Monday Lectures is to present the results of the freshest German, English, and American scholarship on the more important and difficult topics concerning the relations of religion and science. Mr. Cook has just completed a tour of the world, the journey occupying two years and seventy-seven days.

He lectthe more salient points of the present volume are a study of the character and career of Keshub Chunder Sen and of the contributions of the Brahmo Somaj of India to the science of comparative theology; a consideration of the achievements and probable future of civilization in Australasia; a discussion of the international duties of Christendom and of the prospects of imperial federation in the British empire, etc. The Princeton Review pronounces Mr. Cook "a great master of analysis." *Cutts, Rev. E: L. Scenes and characters of the middle ages. New cd. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., 1886. O. cl., $2.50.

The endeavor has not been to represent China from the special point of view of the politician, merchant, or missionary, but simply to describe the scenes of daily life as shonary, but simply to describe the scenes of uarly line at they appear to one moving to and fro among them. The chapters are mostly compiled from notes made when trav-elling upon mission journeys and from letters written to friends in England. The author thinks that in a few years the "Chinese question" will become a great interna-tional problem, which it will need all the wisdom of Western countries to solve.

The author has the advantage of personal familiarity with the materials of which his novel is built up. The characters are natural and life-like. People are possibly a little tired of stories of the Indian mutiny, but when we once get started in this the interest is sustained without any lapses and the author has love-scenes, battle-scenes, tournaments enough for another story.

Klaus Bewer is the son of a rich Lubeck ship-owner. At twenty-five he tires of life in his father's counting house and goes off to Sumatra. Here all he touches turns to money. At thirty-three he becomes homesick, winds up his business, and returns to Lubeck. On the evening of his return he visits a variety theatre and falls in love with a second-rate ballad singer, invites her to supper, and within a week marries her. The little details of their married life are brightly told. The author's point is that the wife of a cultured man must have developed in the same social atmosphere or one similar to his own. while of a cultured man must have developed in the same social atmosphere or one similar to his own. Men do not require learned women, but all that is beautiful and godfaith, morality, love, friendship, truth, etc. Kluss Bewer's brother's wife and her sister form the contrasting picture to his Bohemian love. The book is well translated.

Justin S. Morrill was United States Senator from Vermont. He was first a merchant, then a farmer, and in 1855 became a member of Congress. During his leisure hours he read much and always kept a scrap-book. The present volume is made up of extracts collected during many years, all bearing upon the estimate great men have put spon themselves. The author makes a nice distinction between self-consciousness and vanity. The book is an interesting collection of such revelations. Beginning with St. Paul it comes down to the present day. Writers predominate, but workers in other fields are fairly represented. The noted persons, 17x in number, are chiefly English, many Americans, with some Frenchmen, Romans, Russians, and Greeks. The book is a literary curiosity of permanent value.

"To know the facts of modern missions is the necessary condition of intelligent interest. In vain shall we look for an absorbing, engrossing peassion, for the prompt spread of gospel tidings, for full missionary treasures, for full missionary ranks, until the individual believer is brought face to face with the grand fact."—Preface. The work is purposely compressed within a narrow compass to insure readers in these busy days, It is neatly gotten up with gilt top and uncut edges.

Mr. Curzon, an English soldier, has travelled through Mr. Curzon, an English soldier, has travelled through many lands with his twelve-year-old motherless daughter. He finally reaches England to be taken away from her at "the king's command." He appoints an old friend her guardian, but directs her to live alternately with two sisters of her mother, both Irish ladies of wealth and education. Dorothy has been very carefully brought up, and much that her cousins do jars upon her. Still she has a healthy, happy life. When she is twenty-one she comes into a large inheritance, which she uses for building a home for waifs and strays. Her marriage is romantic.

social study. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887 [1886.] 213 p. O. cl., $2.

"The discussion begins with a description of the Semitic and Aryan families. The development of the marriage relation is then traced through Greek, Roman, Jewish, early Christian, Catholic, and Protestant civilizations to the present day. A study is made of the family as an institution, divine and human, and as the basis of social order. The authors then present some remarkable statistics as to the increase of divorce, especially in this country. The remedies suggested are a proper conception of woman's responsibilities, a higher standard of belief and practice as to domestic institutions, a restoration of the religious basis of marriage, and uniformity of law as to marriage and divorce."—N. CLOSE DISCOUNTS.

As will be seen from a communication printed elsewhere, the movement for introducing a close discount will meet with opposition from many of those in whose interest the measure is proposed. This was to be expected; indeed it will take a long time to effect any complete reform, because, in the first place, the demoralization in the book trade is too great to be overcome in a short time, or with one measure, and, in the second place, because there are so many "ifs" to be considered. The reason we have favored the close discount is that it seems to us to offer the most practical way out of the present difficulty. If we are mistaken, we are not so set in our ideas that we shall refuse to be corrected by those who deal with the subject from the standpoint of every-day practical experience. We do not see that our correspondent succeeds in this. His argument is that the close discount would compel him to handle a $1.25 book at a net profit of two cents. To prove this he gives a schedule of his expenses, which, if they prove anything at all, prove that his estimates are altogether too high. In the first place, the item of express or postage which he quotes is not the rule. A bookseller in Colorado would not order his general line of books in that way, and even on special orders by mail the average postage would scarcely be ten cents. He would have his goods sent by freight or enclosure, which would put the cost of transportation on the book within five cents. Then his estimates for clerk hire, rent, etc., | tell stories against himself.

are pretty well up at fifteen per cent., calculated not on investment but on sales. In other words, the average transaction should leave him a profit of sixteen cents instead of two cents. But even accepting his figures for argument's sake, would our correspondent be better off under a long discount, say of 40 per cent. We doubt it, because in that case not more than $1.00 probably could be got for the book. This would leave our correspondent a margin of six cents—four cents more, he would claim, than the close discount would give himbut it would also leave him with a public used to, and insisting upon a discount-which is now considered the bane of the book trade. Until we have more convincing evidence, we shall continue to look for the introduction of close discounts as the first step in the direction of correcting the demoralization of our trade. As to the abolition of the retail price, we doubt whether that would ever become practicable. That, from our view of the matter, would by no means be an unmixed blessing to the bookseller, even if the publishers could be induced to adopt the measure.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error occurred in the advertisement of Messrs. Estes & Lauriat in our last issue, page 538. In the twenty-first line from the top the word "Chatterbox" should have read "Chatterbook." The advertisement is correctly printed on page 578 of this issue.

WHAT A BIBLIOGRAPHER MUST KNOW.

From the Saturday Review.

To succeed as a bibliographer a man must, besides a natural power of distinguishing, have an eye which comes to the work as a correct ear comes to the study of music; but he must also have a wide education, must know all the dead and most of the living languages; he must be enough of an artist to recognize an artist's touch; he must have an extensive knowledge of all kinds of books in different libraries; and, above all, his memory must be unerring. With these qualifications he may begin to learn water-marks, founts of type, lines in a page, and all the mysteries of early printing, paper-making, and binding. These are but the preliminaries of bibliography, and must be acquired apart altogether from any literary or critical study of books. If they can afterwards be combined, well and good; but at the beginning they are independent. The man who, like Hill Burton, can write pleasantly about old books is not to be trusted for scientific bibliography; and Dibdin, with his ignorance of things in general and his wretched style, is often after all a safer guide. But Oldys and Davies, who could combine knowledge and easy writing, published very little that will interest the bookworm. Cotton and Maitland are too dry, and hardly up to the latest lights. A book like the late Mr. Henry Steven's "Recollections of Mr. James Lenox," though it gives us little or no bibliographical instruction, is certainly well calculated to show us how to acquire it, and is very entertaining besides, as is so often the case when a writer is willing to

RAPID DISCOLORATION OF PAPER.

PROF. WIESNER, of Vienna, published an article upon this subject in Dingler's Polytechnisches Journal for September. His observations of books were undertaken in Vienna at the suggestion of Leithe, the well-known librarian. rapid discoloration is the yellowing shown in so short time by much of the paper manufactured in the present day, especially when freely exposed to the air. It is only noticed in wood-pulp paper and must be clearly distinguished from the discoloration of old good rag-paper. Wood-pulp paper when exposed to the almost perpendicular rays of the sun showed the beginning of discoloration within an hour; as, however, at the temperature caused by the sun's rays no change was shown while the paper remained in the dark, it was naturally concluded that only the light is instrumental in the discoloration of wood-pulp paper. Further experiments proved that the discoloration of woodpaper is a process of oxidation dependent upon the light; also, that while dampness is favorable to the discoloration, it is not a necessary element of the process. The power of the light was important for the discoloration; when exposed to gaslight the color only changed after four months.

Prof. Wiesner recommends the following to aid in the protection of wood-pulp paper: Sunlight is the most injurious light. Very weak, light is the most injurious light. shaded daylight, especially in very dry rooms, Gaslight, owing to will take but little effect. the limited refraction of its rays, is almost wholly harmless. On the other hand, electric light, and, in fact, every light having strong refraction, is favorable to discoloration. Therefore, gaslight should generally be preferred to electric light in illuminating libraries, if the danger of discoloration is to be considered.

HURD AND HOUGHTON.

N. Y. Correspondence of the Literary World.

It is very rarely that a single publishing-house has done so much for a national literature as that which is now Houghton, Mifflin & Co. But you will ask what a New Yorker has to say about so eminent a Boston house-whose earliest traditions are of Boston—Ticknor, Reed & Fields, Ticknor & Fields, Fields, Osgood & Co., Houghton, Osgood & Co., H. O. Houghton & Co., Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Where is there any New York in that catena? Stop a bit. We say that until 1870 it was a Boston house. But in that year the firm of Hurd & Houghton, which was a New York house, made the firm bigger than any one single town, and began publishing books for the nation. Melancthon M. Hurd was a member of the old firm of Sheldon & Co., of this city, the member of that firm. He saw the possibilities of something more than he was engaged in, entered into an arrangement with H. O. Houghton, who had already made the Riverside Press equal the finest book-work turned out in the world, and the firm of Hurd & Houghton began on Broome Street, and then on "Booksellers' Row" at Astor Mr. Hurd sat in the New York office, and, I think, to his genius for knowing the what, plus Mr. Henry O. Houghton's consummate understanding of the how, is owing the great successor-firm that presents what is one of the largest publishing lists in the world to-day in your advertising columns. I still meet Mr. Hurd occasion-He left the firm on account of ill-health, and if pressed for the truth (for he is no hypochondriac) admits to bad health to-day. But it is named: Prof. Mandell Creighton; Mr. H. H.

hard to associate illness with the handsome, browned, elegantly dressed gen-leman who warms your heart with his cordial ways. Mr. Huri spends his summers here or in barope (he has a splendid home in Brooklyn) and his winters in the West Indies. What a pair of hobbe brothers it was! Melancthon M. Hurd and Henry 0. You in Boston know west a noble Houghton. man, every inch of him, is Henry O. Houghton. When the book of great publishers is all written there will be many a chapter packed with his good deeds, his great work, his almost infallible judgment. He once refused to print a book, prepared with great pains, and in some three years of labor, by the present writer. But when, in a kindness and cheery sympathy, Mr. Honghtode clined to print it, the writer put his MS. inte te fire. If he had refused it, could there by a good in it, or any hope for it? At least its conpiler believed not, and now, ten years later, her certain of it.

ENGLISH HISTORY BY CONTEMPORITY WRITERS.

From the London Academy.

MR. DAVID NUTT, London, has in preparation the first volumes of a series entitled English History by Contemporary Writers, in which the facts of English national history, political and social will be set forth in a way not yet systematically attempted in this country, but somewhat similarts that which Messrs. Hachette have so successfully adopted in France under the editorship of MM This series is Zeller, Duruy, Luchaire, etc. planned not only for educational use, but also for the general reader, and especially for those to whom the original authorities are for various rea-To each well-defined sons difficult of access. period of English history will be given a little volume made up of extracts from the chronicles, state papers, memoirs and letters of the period, and other contemporary literature, chronologically arranged and chosen so as to afford a living picture of the effect produced on each generation by the political, religious, social, and intellectual movements in which it took part Extracts from foreign tongues will be translated, and passages from old English authors put into modern spelling, but otherwise kept in their original form. Where needed, a glossary will be added and brief explanatory notes. There will also be appended a short account of the writers quoted, and of their relation to the events they describe, and such tables and summaries as will facilitate reference. Such illustrations as are given will be chosen in the same spirit as the texts, to represent historic monuments, documents, sites, portraits, coins, etc. The chief aim of the series will be to send the reader back to the original authorities, and so bring himas close as may be to the mind and feelings of the times he is reading about. Mr. F. York Powell, of Christ Church, Oxford, will be editor of the series. Among the earlier volumes issued will be "Britain under the Romans," by Mr. C. I. Elton;
"The Little English Kingdom," by the editor; "The Danish Sea Kings and their Settlements, by the editor; "Henry II.—Statesman and Reformer," by Mr. T. A. Archer; "Simon of Monfort and his Cause," by the Rev. J. Hutton, of St. John's College, Oxford; "Edward III. and his Wars," by Mr. W. J. Ashley, of Lincoln College, Oxford. Among future contributors may be named; Prof. Mandell Conjectures, Mr. H. H.

worth; Mr. T. G. Law, Librarian to the Sig-, Edinburgh; Mr. C. H. Firth; Mrs. Creighi; Mr. Reginald Lane-Poole; Mr. B. L. Skotre; and the Rev. W. Hunt. The series will published simultaneously in New York by sers. G. P. Putnam's Sons, and the editor will re the co-operation of several American historl scholars.

"TEST OF THE TRADE"-MORE EXPERI-ENCE.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 12, 1886.

the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Allyn's letter of October 4th is eresting, but would be more so if he (or you) re the publisher's name; let us know who they i. Here is a late experience of mine. A stunt in a Troy seminary asked me for a price on copies of a German text-book, the retail price which is $1.75, discount to the trade, 33\frac{1}{2}-\text{net}, 7; knowing he was a close buyer I quoted 25; another firm quoted the same, and another 40. He then tried the publisher, and he sold n for 88 cents; and fearing the local bookseller ruld get the order, sent the quotation by wire. Testing the trade" is all very well. The stunt referred to has tested both, and finds the blisher pays him the best.

The name of the firm referred to is E. Steiger Co., and mine is WILLIAM J. WOODS.

E. STEIGER & CO.'S REPLY.

New York, Oct. 19, 1886.

the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: We thank you for the opportunity lorded us to reply to Mr. Wood's communicam.

It was the Librarian of the Seminary who inrmed us that a German class had been organed, for which they intended to adopt our book, id he, therefore, inquired our terms for introducm. We quoted, as usual, half retail price (88 nts), and Mr. Woods would have been enabled 7 us to do the same, if he had stated the case to

This reminds us of the following out of many milar cases: Last month a student of a Westnumiversity asked our rates for certain books. It quoted 20% discount, whereupon his Professor of Latin wrote us in his (the student's) behalf, aming a number of prominent publishers who ad allowed that student full booksellers' rates ad thirty days' time or more.

With pleasure we refer to the fact that, fully apreciating the good-will of booksellers, we allow hem a larger discount off our publications, and rotect their interests better than—as far as we now—other publishers do. This policy in favor of booksellers we intend to continue.

Respectfully yours,

E. Steiger & Co.

AN OBJECTION TO CLOSE DISCOUNTS.

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 4, 1886.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

I THINK country booksellers will read with increst that The Century Co. advertise "A New Departure by reducing the retail prices of all of their books on which the ordinary discounts to the rade have been given, to a figure from which only mall discounts can be allowed. This means that a bookseller cannot afford to give a discount on The Century Co.'s publications. He must sell them at the full retail price in order to make anything—but the public is getting books at a lower price than ever before, and as good books of the kind as we know of for the least money."

The above would appear to be an experiment which might be conceived as the outgrowth of the long-discussed question of discounts which your Weekly has been so liberal in giving space to Let us see how such a system would work with booksellers if it were universally adopted by publishers—that is, reducing discounts to twenty-five per cent. I can see that for dealers in New York City twenty-five per cent. would be a handsome discount when there is no freight or express charges to pay. But how is it with the remaining ten or eleven thousand booksellers scattered all over the country? How much can we make at twenty-five per cent. discount? Here are the figures:

| • | | |
|--|-----|----|
| List price of book | $1 | 25 |
| Less twenty-five per cent | | 31 |
| • | | |
| | | 94 |
| Postage or express, say | | 10 |
| Fifteen per cent. for expense of clerk hire, rent, etc., | | |
| on the sale of $1.25 | | 19 |
| | | |

Leaving a net profit of two cents for the proprietor, to say nothing of interest on the capital invested.

As we can never ask more than the advertised price for a book, I, for one, vote for either a public list price with fair discount, or a private wholesale price.

Respectfully,
J. H. Eoff.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE first number of Scribner's Magazine will make its appearance on Dec. 15th simultaneously in all parts of the United States and Canada. Subsequent numbers will be issued on the 1st of the month.

WOODS PASHA, Admiral of the Turkish Navy and one of the best living authorities on everything relating to naval affairs, has written an article for the November number of The Forum on "Recent Naval Progress," in which he makes valuable suggestions as to the construction of our new war-ships.

The Independent is about to begin the publication of a series of articles entitled "Letters on Literature," by Andrew Lang. They are written somewhat in the style of "Letters to Dead Authors," the difference being that they are not addressed to the authors themselves, either dead or living, but to a "Mr. Arthur Wincott, of Topeka, Kansas," to whom Mr. Lang writes his criticisms of the literature "of the present and of the past, English, American, ancient, or modern."

MR. S. R. KOEHLER'S connection with The Magazine of Art ends with the number now in the hands of the printer. Mr. Koehler's work as the American editor of this magazine has been distinguished by dignity, accuracy, and thoroughness, and the loss of his valuable services will no doubt be regretted by its readers. Mr. Koehler has resigned his position in order to give his entire time to creative literary work. He will be succeeded in the editorial chair by Miss Charlotte Adams, a young lady who holds a high position as a writer on art subjects, and who has for several years past been a valuable contributor to the columns of the Century Magasine, The Critic, and the Art Age.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

JOHN L. BOLAND, St. Louis, Mo., has issued his fall and holiday catalogue for 1886-'87, which is fully equal to his former issues in point of attractive get-up, and fine printing. (128 p., 8vo.)

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, N. Y., have published a handsome list of new juvenile books with many specimen illustrations, and a full list of their new and forthcoming publications. (24 p., sq. 16mo.)

W. B. SAUNDERS, 33 South Tenth Street, Philadelphia, has issued a neat "Catalogue of Rare and Fine Books on Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, General Art, and Miscellaneous Literature." (58 p., 8vo.)

DUPRAT & Co. have published an attractive catalogue of original and rare editions of esteemed English and French authors, artistic publications, bibliographical works, and Tauchnitz editions in half morocco binding. (30 p., 12mo.)

J. W. BOUTON, New York, has issued a new catalogue containing a list of new and second-hand books, and a list of books in preparation. The catalogue contains titles of over 350 works, most of them standard library books. (62 p., 16mo.)

B. HERDER, 17 S. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., has issued a handsome illustrated catalogue of the books published by his house. Also, a wholesale price-list of his school-books, chiefly adapted to use in German Catholic schools. This firm is a branch of the house established in 1801 at Mörsburg, on the Bodensee, by Bartholomäus Herder (b. 1774, d. 1839), which was afterwards removed to Constance, and finally settled in 1810 in Freiburg, Baden. There are also branch houses in Carlsruhe, Strassburg, and Munich. (136 p., 8vo; 4 p., 4to.)

JOHN DELAY, 23 Union Square, N. Y., has published a new catalogue—the sixth—of ancient and modern French books, worthy the attention of the bibliophile and collector. Among the treasures we note a fine copy of Gringoire's "Heures de Nostre Dame," printed by Jehan Petit, and bound by Duru, Didot's copy of which sold at auction for 2047 francs; a handsome copy of the second edition (1673) of Molière's collected works with frontispieces by Chauveau, richly bound by Marius Michel; a complete set in four volumes of the rare original edition of Le Sage's "Gil Blas," printed by Pierre Ribou (1715, 1724, 1735), bound by Chuzin and a number of others. The second part contains a list of standard French literature. (54 p., 8vo.)

ISSUED BY

[ALL ENTERPRISING BOOKSELLERS.]

The subscription edition of the ILLUSTRATED CHRISTMAS NUMBER of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be issued as carly in November as possible, to give time for the imprint editions to reach all dealers three weeks before Christmas at the latest.

The Number will as usual present the finest specimen illustrations from the New Holday Books, with special articles on the leading works, a full descriptive summary of books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the Illustrated Works, Books for the Young, and other Choice Books published during 1886, etc., etc. Every endeavor will be made to surpass the issues of previous years.

The imprint edition (intended for distribution by dealers with their sole imprint) will be printed immediately after the issue of the Trade edition, under the title of "Christmas Catalogue," as given above.

The local bookseller can add half as much again to his holiday trade by properly calling the attention of the public to his goods. For this purpose, the best means is the circulation of this handsome, interesting, and comprehensive Christmas Catalogue, which is received with pleasure by those to whom it is given or sent, as itself a picture-book of no little value; and its descriptions of and illustrations from books, at once arouse the desire to purchase the books themselves.

No better investment can be made by the bookseller who wants to make the most of his holiday brade.

Orders filled in the order of size of edition, largest first, and then of receipt. As the paper is specially made for this issue, orders should be received at once, as the filling of later demands cannot be guaranteed.

These prices are all lower than the actual cost to us, and are made to insure wide circulations of the publishers' advertising.

Orders should be sent in at once, and in order to avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that

Orders should be sent in at once, and in order to avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the remittance All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

Announce the First Complete Edition of

THE POETICAL WORKS

BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR, LL.D.

One handsome volume, containing portrait of the author, 12mo, 355 pages, $1.75.

London Times, England:—"Benjamin F. Taylor is the Oliver Goldsmith of America."

John G. Whittier writes:—"I do not know of any one who so well reproduces the home scenes of long ago. There is a quiet humor that pleases me."

American Wesleyan, Syracuse:—"There is poetry in his thought, and a finish in his expression which affects the spirit like the rapturous thrill of indescribable music."

Boston Transcript:—"Some of the poems in the volume are destined to as wide a popularity as Longfellow's 'Village Blacksmith,' or Whittier's 'Maud Muller.' Of these are 'Mary Butler's Ride,' 'Going to Spelling School,' and the 'Psalm-Book in the Garret.' What is there in the range of American poetry more beautiful than the concluding stanzas of the latter?"

Boston Commercial Bulletin:—"With the exception of Whittier, we have not seen any one whose descriptions of home scenes could, in graphic style or harmonious melody, in any way compare with these."

Binghamton, N. Y., Republican:—"Mr. Taylor's genius is of the rarest and subtlest kind. He sees poetry in everything, and his pictures of old things and old times have never been equalled. Every American who reads poetry should have a copy of Mr. Taylor's poems."

- "Beautifully printed and bound."-Indianapia News.

"Our reading of 'The Chamber Over the Gaze has discovered in it more of the elements of the long-expected product, 'the great American nevel, than we have found in any recent work of fiction. It has large stature, reserve force, aboudant play of power; its intellectual endowment s marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, ab-. . . Its commanding proportions, its excellent paper and print, its salmon-colored edges and cover of old gold, mark it out among the mass of books with a certain distinctness well befitting its uncommon character." -World, Boston.

"A well-written story of life, with no straining after dramatic effect, but possessing a quiet attractiveness that holds the attention to the end."-Sunday Morning Herald, Rochester, N. Y.

Chatterbox Caution No. 4.

As certain notices and comments upon a recent decision regarding our right to the trade-mart "Chatterbox" have been published in a form which we believe IS INTENDED AND CALCULATED TO DECEIVE, we publish herewith a verbatim report of the decision, by which it appears that Judge Wallace expressly reaffirms the validity of our claim to the trade-mark "Chatterbox." and only denies our motion for preliminary injunction upon technical grounds, from which it appears that there is no question but that we shall obtain an injunction in the same case at final bearing as we have in the previous cases.

United States Circuit Court, Southern District of New York.

WALLACE, Justice.

DANA ESTES et al.

RICHARD WORTHINGTON.

THE VALIDITY OF THE COMPLAINANTS' TITLE TO A TRADE-MARK in the word "Chatterbox" as applied to juvenile books, and which they acquired by purchase from James Johnston, of England, in the year 1880, HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED AND IS NOT (PEN TO CONTROVERSY upon the case made by the defendants. (MS. Opinion of Judge Wheeler in Estes et al. v. Williams et al.)

THE ONLY DOUBT AS TO THE COMPLAINANTS' RIGHT TO A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION is suggested by the fact that various publishers of such books, since 1876, have been permitted, without prosecution, to apply the word to their publications of juvenile books in this country and use it as a trade-mark in hostility to the real proprietors, and among them were the complainants themselves, who did so for two or three years before they purchased the right of Johnston. Laches in prosecuting infringers has always been recognized as a sufficient reason for denying a preliminary injunction, sometimes apparently by way of discipline to a complainant who has manifested reluctance to burden himself with the expense and vexation of a lawsuit, and delayed legal proceedings until his patience was exhausted. (See Boville v. Crate, I Law Reports: Eq. Cases, 388.) When the delay of the owner of a patent or trade-mark to prosecute infringers has been of a tendency to mislead the public, or the defendant sought to be enjoined, into a false security, and a sudden injunction would result injuriously, it ought not to be granted summarily, but the complainant should be left to his relief at final hearing. So also, where, as in this instance, the extensive me of the trade-mark by others, with the implied acquiescence of the owner, has contributed to give a reputation and create a demand for the article to which it has been applied, which it would not otherwise acquire, equity should not by any stringent intervention assist the owner to secure these fruits The complainants do not occupy a position that commends them to a Court of Equity, because they seem to have refused to recognize the rights of Johnston, the original proprietor of the trade-mark until they thought it would be more profitable to purchase his rights in this country and obtain a monopoly here in the use of the trade-mark. By their contract of purchase they reserved the right to annul the contract at their option. They should be left to their rights at final hearing according to the usual course of equity. The motion is denied.

For Complainants, Wetmore & Jenner, John L. S. Roberts. For Defendants, Scudder & Carter. (Endorsed.)—U. S. Circuit Court, 30, District of N. Y. Dana Estes et. al vs. Richard Worthington. Opinion, Wallace, J. U. S. Circuit Court. Filed January 5, 1885. Timothy Griffith, Clerk.

We again caution all publishers and booksellers against publishing or selling any book bearing the title "Chatterbox," either by itself or in connection with other words, which is not issued or authorized by us, as all infringers of our trade-mark will be promptly proceeded against.

RESTRAINING ORDER.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, In Equity.

DANA ESTES AND CHARLES E. LAURIAT

CHARLES B. ROUSS AND STANDARD PRINTING AND PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Upon reading the hereto annexed affidavits, copy of Bill of Complaint herein, and on motion of G. G. Frelinghuysen, Esq., counsel for complainants, it is hereby ordered that the defendants, Charles B. Rouss and Standard Printing and Publishing Company, or their solicitors, show cause before me, or one of the judges of this court, at Chambers thereof in the Post-Office Building, in the City of New York, on Friday, the 29th day of October, 1886, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, why an injunction should not issue, commanding and enjoining the said Charles B. Rouss and Standard Printing and Publishing Company, and each of them, their and each of their attorneys, agents, clerks, servants, workmen, and the officers, attorneys, clerks, servants, workmen of said corporation, and any and all persons claiming or holding under or through them, to desist from printing, stamping, marking, attaching, or affixing said name or word "Chatterbox" in or upon books of a juvenile character of the general appearance, style, and manner of cover and style of printing which are upon complainants' said books, referred to in the Bill of Complaint, filed in this suit, and from simulating the appearance and style of printing of the complainants' "Chatterbox," and from selling, offering for sale, and from presenting to the public juvenile publications, printed in such style and in such manner as to lead the public to believe that they are the publications of the complainant.

And it is further ordered that the said defendants, Charles B. Rouss and Standard Printing and Publishing Company, their and each of their attorneys, agents, clerks, servants, workmen, and the officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, servants, and workmen, and each of them, be in the meantime restrained, and are hereby forbidden, to suffer or commit any of said acts until the further order of this Court.

Let service of this order on or before October 28, 1886, be sufficient.

WM. J. WALLACE. Dated Oct. 23, 1886. (Signed)

The Chatterbox books referred to in Bill and affidavits are "Birthday Chatterbox" and "Bright s Chatterbox."

AGAIN WE CAUTION ALL CONCERNED.

NOTICE TO ALL DEALERS IN BOOKS.

We hereby caution you against buying or selling any book bearing the name "Chatterbox," either alone or in combination with other words, excepting those with our imprint, or marked as sold under our license, as the United States Courts have repeatedly confirmed our exclusive right to this word as a trade-mark, and ALL INFRINGERS, whether PUBLISHERS or DEALERS, WILL BE PROSECUTED.

It any one doubts our intention he has only to furnish proof of infringement to enable us to prosecute.

NEW AND ATTRACTIVE WORK ON CHINA.

The Dragon, Image, and Demon;

Or, the Three Religions of China—CONFU-CIANISM, BUDDHISM, and TAOISM giving an account of the Mythology, Idolatry, and Demonolatry of the Chinese. By Rev. HAMP-DEN C. DU BOSE—I4 years a Missionary in China. With 188 ILLUSTRATIONS— Crown octavo volume. Beautifully bound. Cloth, ENGRAVED IN CHINA. Crown beveled boards, full gilt side, etc. $2.00.

beveled boards, full gilt side, etc. $2.00.

"The writer has drawn his water from native wells, the facts being mostly gathered from Chinese sources.

The pen is not held by one seated in a professor's study, but by a plain man, who daily walks to and fro among idolaters, and testifies of what he has seen and heard, written in a plain style, so that the young as well as the old may understand it."—Asthor's Preface.

A NEW WORK BY REV. WM. M. TAYLOR, D.D., LL.D.

The Parables of Our Saviour.

EXPOUNDED AND ILLUSTRATED. By Wm. M. TAYLOR, D.D., LL.D., uniform with same author's "Limitations of Life," and "Contrary Winds," and other Sermons. I volume, crown octavo, cloth. $1.75.

"In adding another to the number of works on this subject I can claim only such originality as may be fairly accounted for by what astronomers have called the 'personal equation'; and the result may be a further illustration of the many-sidedness of these exquisite stories. To Archbishop Trench, who more than any other English writer has brought patristic lore to bear upon the illustration of the parables, every later author must express his peculiar obligations; but the recent works of Prof. Bruce and Siegfried Goebel have brokes new ground in this department, and my aim has been to turn their fruitful suggestions to good homilatical account. The little volumes of Dr. Dod's—only the first of which was in my hands when these discourses were prepared—are full of richest nuggest; and the Expositions of William Arnot are characterized by the masscaline sense, rich Christian experience, and striking illustrations for which he was so remarkable. But the present work, while indebted in different respects to all these authors, will be found to be in others independent of them all."—From Author's Preface.

Legends and Popular Tales of the Basque People.

By MARIANA MONTEIRO. With full-page ILLUSTRATIONS IN PHOTO-GRAVURE. By HAROLD COPPING. Small quarto volume. Tastefully printed and elegantly bound in cloth. Illuminated cover—from original design. Price, $3.75. (A small number of copies on large paper. Price, $7.50.)

"On placing before the reader this collection of Basque legends, fairy tales, ballads, and popular stories having their origin in the ancient traditions which formed a portion of the sacred inheritance bequeathed to the Basque people by their forefathers, and handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation, I have thought that a few remarks would not be out of place concerning the moral and historical importance which these legends and tales possess, as being the reflection of the ideas and faithful echo of the sentiments of past generations."—From the Introduction.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE BALTIMORE PUBLISHING Co. will publish immediately a remarkable work by the Rev. Dr. Bernard O'Reilly, called "Novissima: or, where do our departed go?" It is said to be the only work on this subject ever written by a Roman Catholic and it is thought it will prove of interest to all denominations.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish, about No-Mjerne Björnson, John Stuart Mill/Etnest Renan, a volunteer special, which is said to be a detailed and exceedingly graphic history of the great draft riot in New York in July, 1863. The author was in close relations with the authorities at Washington, and a personal friend of Acton, the head of the Metropolitan police, who did more than any other man to suppress the riot. He claims to have had free access to all the records and telegraph reports, a multitude of which he gives, which kept the authorities posted throughout the riot, also to records of the police department, the military, and to all other official sources of information.

TICKNOR & Co. publish this week " Persia and the Persians," by Hon. S. G. W. Benjamin, late U. S. Minister to Persia, which combines adventure and description with political information of great value; "Recollections of Eminent Men, and Other Papers," by Edwin Percy Whipple, containing characteristic papers on Sumner, Motley, Agassiz, Choate, George Eliot, etc.; "Confessions and Criticism," by Julian Hawthorne, including a variety of valuable miscellany by this skilful writer: and "The Evolution of the Snob," a brilliant social study, by Thomas Sargeant Perry.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have in preparation "Riding for Ladies," with hints on the stable, by Mrs. Power O'Donoghue, author of "Ladies on Horseback," fully illustrated by Chantrey Corbould; "In the Time of Roses," a tale of two summers, told and illustrated by Florence and Edith Scannell, a charming book for girls; and "Gordon Browne's Series of Old Fairy Tales," comprising "Hop o' My Thumb" and "Beauty and The Beast," retold in a very happy manner, by Laura E. Richards, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, and author of "The Joyous Story of Toto," finely illustrated by Gordon Browne. These stories were written expressly for Mr. Browne to illustrate, by request of the English publishers.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish shortly, simultaneously with its appearance in London, "Sketches from my Life," by the late Admiral Hobart Pasha, edited by Mrs. Hobart. The preface to the volume is as follows: "These pages were the last ever written by the brave and truehearted sailor of whose life they are a simple rec-A few months before his death some of his friends made the fortunate suggestion that he should put on paper a detailed account of his sporting adventures, and this idea gradually developed itself until the work took the present form of an autobiography, written roughly, it is true, and put together without much method, part of it being dictated at the Riviera during the last days of the author's fatal illness. Such as it is, however, we are convinced that the many devoted friends of Hobart Pasha who now lament his death will be glad to recall in these 'Sketches' the adventures and sports which some of them shared, and the genial disposition and manly qualities which endeared him to them all. The volume contains, in addition to numerous adventures of a general character, descriptions of slaver-hunting on the coast of Africa, mjerne Björnson, John Stuart Mill/Einest Renan, and Gastave Flanbert. Dr. Brandes has revised the proof-sheets of the volume, and the work with the English navy during the war with Russia. They will also publish immediately, by arrangement with the English published with lifts sanction, contains in the war with Russia. pally by W. C. Jackson. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1886. 7+318 p. O. canvas, $3.

The many eventful encounters of the navy, North and South, during the late war are graphically portrayed with pen and pencil. The book is a most attractive one for boys, who will gain both instruction and amusement from it. The style of pictures is most vigorous, while the manner of telling is fresh and comprehensive. Numerous anecdotes illustrate the story. The pictures are full-page and in the text. The cover is a novelty in canvas, representing a part of a white sail on a dark blue background; the ropes and lettering are in gold.

An'account of the persistent struggle of the Huguenots of France to secure a fair degree of religious liberty, such as they finally attained in the Edict of Nantes: fifteen years of the struggle (1574-1589) falling in the reign of their deadly enemy, Henry III., and nine more (1589-1598) in the reign of the friendly Henry of Navarre, now known in history as Henry IV. of France. The work, while distinct in itself, is supplementary to the author's pervious work, the "History of the Rise of the Huguenots in France." He hopes in time to bring the series to its natural conclusion in a "History of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes."

"This work," says the author, "though constructed on a different method, may be regarded as a companion to my work on 'The parabolic teaching of Christ, published a few years ago. In the fifth and sixth lectures I have considered from my point of view at considerable length a large number of the miraculous narratives, and made observations on nearly the whole of the narratives of the character contained in the Gospels. My object in these portions of the work is not to expound homiletically the whole narrative in which a miracle is recorded, but to include the point of the work is not to expound homiletically the whole narrative in which a miracle is recorded, but to include the property of the work is not to expound homiletically the whole narrative in which a miracle is recorded, but to include the miracle of the property of the prope whose narrative in which a miracle is recorded, but to significant the event recorded be indeed a miracle. To prevent misapprehension, readers are requested to now that throughout the discussions in this volume the Gospes are regarded not from the view point of a strict doctrise of inspiration, but from that of substantial historicity. It is not dogmatically the highest point of view, but it is that which is most genuine to apologetic inquiries."

"Bab," a little orphan girl, tells the story. She and her brother "Peep" are adopted by their Uncle John Bruff, an old retired sea-captain, and go home to live in the country with him. The chief event of the story is the uncle's marriage, and the coming of "Aunt Pen," who is a good friend to the little ones. The story has a motive. The incidents, which are related with unusual fulness of detail, are chosen as best developing graciousness or ungraciousness in manner, kindliness or unaffectionateness in gift and acceptance, the enjoyment that lies in simple and inexpensive pleasures."

The crime is murder committed by the hero and described in sickening detail. The victims are an old, miserly pawnbroker and her half demented sister. The object is robbery. The punishment begins in the hero's conscience, leading him to imagine every variety of suspicion and persecution. The heroine, a young girl, who, for the sake of keeping her step-sisters from starvation, sacrifices her womanhood, and finds her strength for her horrible life in her firm belief in the Christian religion, is a remarkable creation. She induces the hero to confess his guilt and finally accompanies him to Siberia, where she spends seven years with him and wins him over to a belief in all good things and an ambition to lead a new and better life.

novel. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887 [1886.] 3-395 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The house at High Bridge is the home of a successful novelist, his wife, and two daughters. When the story opens the novelist has apparently something on his mind concerning his last novel, which has sprung into instant popularity, while his six previous works had merely helped him to live. Hints are thrown out that the work is not his own, that probably he had stolen the MS. from a friend now dead, and so on, the mystery and interest increasing until explanations are arrived at in the last chapter. The love affairs of his two daughters lighten the mystery which surrounds the father, and which almost ends in a tragedy. tragedy.

This lexicon is founded on the second edition of the lexicon of Professor Grimm, of Jena, and it embodies all the distinctive merits of Grimm's work. Besides translating the work, Professor Thayer has striven in many ways to improve it. He has sought "to verify all references; to note more generally the extra-biblical usage of words; to give the derivation of words in cases where it is agreed upon by the best etymologists; to render complete the enumeration of verbal forms; to append to every verb a list of those of its compounds which occur in the Greek Testaments; to supply the New Testament passages accidentally omitted in words marked at the end with an asterisk; to note more fully the variations in the Greek text of current editions; to introduce brief discussions of New Testament synonymes; to give the more noteworthy renderings, not only of the Authorized Version, but also of the Revised New Testament; to multiply cross-references, references to grammatical works, both sacred and classical, and to the best English and American commentaries, etc." An appendix classifies the vocabulary of the New Testament, and points out the words peculiar to each Book, with a fulness and accuracy hitherto unattained. The whole ends with a catalogue of peculiar and singular verbal forms. and singular verbal forms.

Mitchell, J. A. The romance of the moon. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1886. No paging, obl. T. cl., $1.

Fourteen humorous pen-and-ink sketches reproduced on heavy paper in blue ink, with red titles: they tall the romantic tale of how the Moon was loved by the larth and Saturn, who fought a duel about her, in which he latter was seriously beaten and hurled into space; and how the Sun also came wooing the Moon and was sepectfully declined, but carried her off in his chariot by hain force; and how it is only when the Sun is sleeping hat she steals away to see her lover and sheds the tears which men call dew. Mr. Mitchell has been led to pubsh these facts to dispel the "wide-spread and lamenble ignorance concerning all that pertains to the rolantic side of earth's history."

S. Cl., OO C.

The chapters of which this work is composed first apeared in outline in the New York Independent. As now fiven they are recast and amplified. The work is divided nto three parts: "Society and its wants," Capital and its uses," and "The laborer and his wages." The author, who use made a life-long study of these question, endeavors to race the relations between great operations of commerce and industry on the one side, and of human welfare on the ther, and while he talks entirely in the interest of the aborers, he tells obain truths to both entirelists and laborer. aborers, he tells plain truths to both capitalists and labor-

"Silent Pete" is a timid little violinist left an orphan and homeless in New Orleans. He is taken up by a strong boy named Jerry, who protects him in the most touching manner. Silent Pete longs to go North and find his mother's sister, Aunt Annette. Jerry gets the cook of the Cto to promise that they may go as stowaways. The voyage ends in shipwreck. All are saved. After fruitless attempts to find his aunt, Silent Pete falls sick and finally dies. His love for his violin which he calls "Sweetness" is beautifully told. Jerry is a boy it will do all boys good to read about. First published in Harper's Young People.

Alexander Selkirk, jr., is a little lonely lame boy, who excites the sympathy of a kind-hearted shop-girl who passes his house every day. She brings him various little gifts, and her imagination bestows upon him his familiar name. On Christmas day she presents him with a penny, and it is the "Red Indian" on the coin who relates to him during the ensuing week the seven stories contained in this handsome volume. The illustrations are so numerous and the type so bold and large, and so much generosity has been displayed in the make-up of the book in the way of margins, that the stories are not so long as the size of the book would lead one to suppose. The cover has a rich and striking Japanese design, flying cranes in gold on black cloth.

"That child" is a little waif whose mother is killed in a railway accident. She is adopted by Miss Beaumont, a lady fond of reading, who feeds her young mind with most heterogeneous information. The death of her benefactress leaves the child in the hands of the second Miss Beaumont, who is systematic and commonplace, and imitates Avice constantly. The old organist who is planning a history of his parish is a splendid character. He teaches Avice music, which she loves passionately, and influences her life in many important ways. This work was translated originally for The Journal of Speculative Philosophy. It was intended for the use of philosophical students, and the terse German of the of philosophical students, and the terse German of the original was rendered by equally terse English. An edition of two thousand copies was reprinted in a separate volume. Demands for the work continuing after the first edition was exhausted, it was determined to publish a new one. For this purpose a revision has been made of the translation with a view to better adapt it to the needs of readers not skilled in philosophy. Where it has been thought necessary, phrases, or even entire sentences, have been used to convey the sense of a single word of the original. The first part considers the general idea of the original. The first part considers the general idea of education—its nature, its form, its limits. The second part, education in its special elements. The third, education in its particular systems.

The Aublishers' Aeekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 30, 1886.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of auty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE OF 1876.

WE promised recently that we would give to our readers an account of the outlay and returns in connection with the great American Catalogue of 1876, and take them into confidence as to the profits of this office on that publication. It was somewhat difficult to make this accounting, since during the period from 1875, when the practical work began, the accounts of the Catalogue have been kept by different methods, and, for a considerable period, were not on the books of this office but on those of Messrs. A. C. Armstrong & Son. But a good deal of patient toil on the part of Mr. G. D. T. Rouse, who has been associated with the business management since the beginning, has at last evolved the actual facts. The totals have been as much a surprise to us as they probably will be to the trade.

Up to the 1st of January, 1886, at which time seventeen sets of the work, with some surplus copies of the subject volume, remained on hand, the total outlay had reached the sum of $27,266.47. and the entire income had amounted only to $26,-179.71. Here was a loss in round numbers of over $1000, excluding absolutely any allowance for interest (although during most of the ten years much capital had been borrowed, part of it specifically for this work) and any return for the services of Mr. Leypoldt or of the many persons who had given indirect service to the work. This does not include also a number of preliminary expenses previous to 1875. The sales of 1886 at the increased price of the final copies will still leave a deficit of several hundred dollars.

The history of the Catalogue is an interesting chapter in the general history of bibliography. Mr. Leypoldt had planned it some years before it actually took shape, and it was a subject of discussion in The Publishers' Weekly almost from the beginning of this journal. In the number for Sept. 13, 1873, a detailed plan for a Finding List was put forward, and 600 subscriptions at $25, or 300 at $50, were asked. Three firms responded. The preface of the second Trade List Annual, 1874, returned to the subject. But it was the inspiration of the centennial year that finally brought the scheme down from the clouds to practical realization. In The Publishers' Weekly o

March 20, 1875, Mr. Leypoldt announced that he would "begin at once and push forward vigoously" the great work, in the hope of insuring the first volume during the Centennial year, and the subject volume within 1877. A competent safe was employed with Mr. L. E. Jones at its head, and a room at 13 Park Row was devoted to in use. The calculations were made on the supposition that the work could be carried through in a year or so, but the first difficulty proved to be the utterly inadequate shape in which the material existed or was at first sent by publishers, and in the endeavor to be accurate and approximately complete, more than two years additional, with the corresponding expenditure for rent, salaris, etc., were consumed before the first part of the first volume was issued, February, 1879. The second part was issued in June, and the third is September of that year, but the first volume was not completed by the issue of the fourth part ustil March, 1880. Miss J. E. Walker, Miss M. L. Howe, and Miss Dukes, were the principal assisants on this volume, and the invaluable services of Miss A. J. Appleton, who managed the compilation of the 1876-'84 volume, were secured a chief assistant for the subject portion, which was issued, completing the work, in June, 1881, four years after the expected date. The delay in completing the first volume was made the opportunity of an appeal to publishers to publish and pay for the list of their newer books in an appendix, and this was the only payment made otherwise than by subscribers for their copies.

The advance subscriptions amounted to only half the guarantee then thought necessary. Mr. Leypoldt found himself early forced to negotiate a loan, for which high interest was charged, of which no account is taken in the figures quoted and the expenses of insurance were also considerable. In 1879 this load became literally too heavy to bear, and an arrangement was made on his behalf through Messrs. A. C. Armstrong & Son, with Mr. George F. Stevens, who furnished capital for the completion of the work, Messrs. Armstrong becoming the publishers. Aside from the credit of the imprint, Messrs. Armstrong received no compensation whatever for their rebtion to the Catalogue, and Mr. Stevens received a very modest salary for parts of 1879-'81 amounting in all to $1500. Mr. Stevens was to receive a certain share of the profits, but unfortunately there were no profits, and he was obliged to content himself with the repayment of the principal of his loan, which was done early this year, on behalf of the estate, in advance of the return of this money from the receipts of the Catalogue.

The largest items of cost up to 1886 had been $12,153 for salaries of the compilers (1875-'81): $1326 for rent; $2150 for paper; $6336 for printing; $738 for binding; $638 for insurance; $77 for postage, telegraph and expressage; $903 for catalogues, circulars, etc. The edition was 1000 copies, of which about 50 were press and complimentary copies, and a small surplus was printed of the subject volume. It will be seen that the cost of editing alone was over $12, and the cost of manufacturing above $9 for each copy of the entire edition. Most of the 950 copies were sold at $25; the price was successively raised to $40, and then $50; and the last sets were sold in September, 1886, more than eleven years from the start of the work, at $60.

The dedication of the new volume of the American Catalogue (1876-'84) expresses the feeling towards Mr. Leypoldt and his work on the great Catalogue of 1876 which was felt by all his associates, and we believe very largely by the trade. We present these figures now to show how great was his sacrifice and how large is the pecuniary indebtedness of the trade to him in this matter alone. If this showing shall be of service to the promoters of other bibliographical enterprises in obtaining for them a more cordial and prompt support on the part of those who are benefited by such work, it will not be altogether in vain.

THE present moral of the statement we have made above should be the prompt response of those book-dealers or librarians who have not the subject volume of the 1876 Catalogue or the new volume of 1876-'84 to the present appeal for the disposal of the remaining copies of those two volumes. The edition is limited in both cases, and it is reasonable to suppose that they may increase in value as the original sets have increased in value. The book-store or library which orders now will therefore have the advantage not only of buying at a reasonable price, but of present use of the Catalogues, instead of waiting the time when the price will be much higher than now.

IT has always been the desire of this office to fill any gaps that might be discovered in the original and later American Catalogues, and thus to pave the way for that future American bibliographer who in the year 1900 or 2000 will make the complete American bibliography. It was intended, indeed, at the time of the 1876-'84 Catalogue, to issue to subscribers an additional sheet giving the omitted details which had been reported to this office. Those have been so few as to make that supplement not worth while, but we presume there are many missing titles which have not come to our notice, and we are proposing to make an offer say of five cents each, to be taken out in publications of this office, for titles lacking in these catalogues not previously reported to us, with the purpose at least of including them in an appendix plating also extending this offer back to a certain year, say to 1850, before which the Bookmart of Pittsburg, which gives its attention largely to older rather than current books, proposes to make a similar offer for titles not in the bibliographies of earlier date. We shall be glad to have any suggestion from the trade before this plan is put practically into operation as to how far it is well to go in the direction indicated.

WE reprint elsewhere a table of telegraphic addresses of all the English publishing firms who have thus far registered them. We should be pleased to print the telegraphic addresses of publishers in this country now using them, if they will favor us with the data.

THE "HEPTAMERON" PUT UNDER BAN.

SPECIAL despatch from Washington to the N. Y. Evening Post states that Acting Secretary Fairchild on the 20th inst. " made a decision which will excite considerable comment among the importers of books, as well as on the part of moralists. He has condemned and ordered to be seized an invoice of an English translation of the ' Heptameron' which was imported by William H. Lowdermilk & Co., of Washington, D. C., one of whose specialties is quaint and rare books. This invoice was imported, as many others have been, in the regular course of business to meet demands. point was raised at the New York Custom House that the book and its illustrations came in conflict with Section 2491, Revised Statutes, relative to the importation of obscene articles. The part of that section applicable to this case is as follows:

""All persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image, on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature. No invoice or package whatever, or any part of one in which such arti-cles are contained, shall be admitted to entry; and all in-voices and packages whereof any such article shall com-pose a part, shall be liable to be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law.'

" Mr. Fairchild, upon a personal examination of the book, ordered that it be not admitted to entry, and that it be proceeded against in accordance with the provisions of law. This is a new precedent established as to the translations of the erotic classics, and will, for that and other reasons, attract attention.

"The views of Mr. Fairchild having been sought upon the subject, he said, in substance, that if any book is obscene, the confiscated edition of the 'Heptameron' in question is such a book. The illustrations are some of them insignificant, while some of them are decidedly unchaste. The language, while possibly not in itself obscene, is impure in all its suggestions, and the entire scope of Certainly no one the work is unwholesome. would be any better for reading the book, and it can be of no value except as an illustration of certain features of literature. The exceptions which might be made in behalf of such works as literary products might apply to the original Italian. They certainly do not apply to English translations. It is difficult, he said, to define what the of the next five-yearly volume. We are contem- law exactly covers, or what the meaning of the

It is very possible that the book is no more harmful than scores of others, but the point has not been raised before, and it has been deemed, in this case, expedient and legal to decide that the book is obscene, and that it comes within the provisions of the inhibitory statute.'

HINTS ON PAPER.*

On the Right and Wrong Sides of Paper .-Roughness of surface cannot be said to invariably indicate the wrong side of paper. Some misconception prevails on this point; but proof is readily obtained from papers for crayon and chalk drawings. The roughest there is the right side. On opening a ream of flat paper (i. c. unfolded), the right side is the top side. When paper is folded into quires it is right side out. The lettering of the water-marks can only be read from the right side of the paper. When papers are azure laid, yellow wove, or blue, they are, if machine-made, usually darker on the wrong side; if hand-mades the right side is the darker. Some of these characteristics may be absent, and then an independent test becomes necessary. This is found in the wire-cloth mark. When everything else fails this points out the wrong side. There are but few exceptions to this rule, since it is seldom the exhaust boxes act so lightly that the finishing obliterates the marks they leave. The wrong side of a granite paper is denoted by all the fibre being set in the same direction. It is worth mentioning that the wire side is only the wrong side when speaking of machine-made pa-In hand-made paper it is the right side. This is rather odd, for undoubtedly the top side would give the most suitable surface.

On Judying Paper.—When writings are yellow wove, azure laid, or blue, they are frequently darker on one side than on the other. When the paper is darker in color on the right side, it is hand-made; when darker on the wrong side, it is machine-made. This method of distinguishing cannot be taken as conclusive without corroboration from other sources, for means are now taken on the machines in some mills to counteract the subsidence of the blue pigment. It may happen that this rule fails, owing to a high finish having been imparted to the right side of a machine paper by which it would become darker on that An unsought water-mark is impressed by the wire cloth on all papers made by machine. It is indelible. No after-process of surfacing can obliterate it. It is always present in laid machine papers, but is never found in laid hand-mades. The mark, which is a facsimile of the wire cloth, owes its existence principally to the suction of the exhaust boxes: and according to the intensity of their action on the fibre so does the texture-like impression in the finished sheet vary. Hence it is more distinct in some papers than others. With a very fine wire, light action in the exhaust boxes, and a good finish afterwards, these wire marks get so faint that they are only discernible on looking through the sheet at a strong light. Two marks, laid and wove, in the same sheet are an infallible indication of the sample being made by machine.

THE SALE OF BLAINE'S BOOK.

From the Washington Hatchet.

I LEARN from good authority that about 100,-000 of the first volume have been sold; that 75,-000 copies of the second volume have been printed, and that no more will be sold for the present. It is a singular fact that the second volume of a subscription book never sells as well as the first. The reasons for this have nothing to do with the book. People die, move away, lose their money, and feel too poor to take the additional volume, or are dissatisfied, with or without reason, and refuse to take it. Thus there will be about 175,000 volumes sold, 100,000 of the first and 75.000 of the second. Mr. Blaine gets 75 cents a volume. Thus he will receive about $131,250, quite a snug sum even for the "historian of his own time."

COMMUNICATIONS.

IS IT FAIR!

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: A country bookseller was asked by a customer at what discount he would sell one hundred dollars' worth of the books of a large publishing house, of which a list was presented (he had about one half of the books on hand). He offered twenty per cent. discount, but was handed a written reply from the house to the customer, saying that their regular rates of discount were as follows: "On $10 worth of books not special, bought at one time, 10 per cent.; $25 worth, 20 per cent.; $50 worth, 25 per cent., and we will pay the postage or express charges in either case." The bookseller had to furnish the books and lost 5 per cent. of his small profits.

The rates of the house in question, except on special bills or first orders, is one-third. Can the Bazaars and the publishers do all of the retail book business? What discount would the publishers have made on $100 or $150 worth?

"CHATTERBOX" AGAIN: STATEMENT OF ESTES & LAURIAT.

BOSTON, Oct. 27, 1886.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: In a recent advertisement headed Truth vs. Fiction" which appeared in your publication, a statement was made that no other or different injunction than the one against Belford, Clarke & Co. had ever been obtained by us. The truth of this statement can be ascertained by reading the following extract from the final decree for perpetual injunction in the case of Dana Estes and Charles E. Lauriat vs. John D. Williams and John W. Lovell:

"This cause came on to be heard at the February term, 1884, of said court, and was argued by counsel for the respective parties, and thereupon, and upon consideration thereof, it is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed as follows, viz.:

"That the name or word 'Chatterbox' as applied to and used with books of a juvenile character by James Johnston is a good and valid trademark, and that the title thereto for such use in the United States of America is vested in the complainants, and that the defendants have infringed upon the exclusive rights of the complainants in and to the same.

"And it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the complainants do recover from the defendants the profits, gains, and advantages which the said defendants have received or made, or which have arisen or accrued to them by reason of any infringement by the said defendants of the said trade-mark 'Chatterbox' since the 1st day of

"And it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said complainants do recover of the defendants their costs and charges and disbursements in this suit to be taxed. And it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that a perpetual injunction be issued in this suit against the said defendants according to the prayer of the bill enjoining and restraining them, and each of them, and their and each of their attorneys, agents, workmen and servants, from directly or indirectly printing, stamping, marking, attaching, or affixing said name or word 'Chatterbox,' or any name or word substantially the same or essentially identical therewith, in or upon any books of a juvenile character, of the class, style, and character of the complainants' said books mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in this suit, and from selling, offering for sale, or in any manner dealing in such books, except those made, printed, and published by the complainants under their license and authority.

"HOYT H. WHEELER, Judge. "U. S. Circuit Court. Filed October 8, 1884. "TIMOTHY GRIFFITH, Clerk."

We do not care to enter into any wordy warfare on this subject; we merely wish to reiterate what we have many times stated, that in our belief all books in or on which the word "Chatterbox" is used as a part or whole of the title infringe our trade-mark, and that it is our intention to prosecute all persons either publishing or dealing in such books. We could further emphasize this matter by publishing extracts from other orders and decrees of courts in various parts of the country if it were worth while and we felt that it would be right to trespass upon your valuable space for this purpose. It is only necessary, however, to publish the first decree which so far has been sustained in every case which has come to final hearing, and which no doubt will be sustained in all other cases which we are prosecuting or shall prosecute in the future. If there is any doubt on this subject, it could easily be dispelled by reference to the Chatterbox advertisements which we have requested you to insert in this number and which we commend to the careful attention of all interested in this subject.

Yours truly, ESTES & LAURIAT.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

EDMUND ROBERTSON, M.P., is about to publish a book on American law as affecting British companies and investors.

MRS. JOHN CHAPMAN is engaged putting to-gether materials for a life of George Eliot, which, however, will not probably see light for years.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE'S only son, Henry A. Howe, has entered the field of literature, in which his three sisters, Mrs. Anagos, Mrs. Laura Richards, and Miss Maud Howe, have made their mark. Mr. Howe's maiden effort was an essay upon "Steel in Warfare," read last week before the Boston Society of Arts.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MR. HOMER GREENE, the Pennsylvania lawyer who once wrote a poem which was attributed to Mr. Greeley, has received from The Youth's Companion, of Boston, the prize of $1500 offered for the best serial story.

MR. THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH will offer to the readers of the Atlantic next year a serial story which he has written in collaboration with Mrs. Oliphant. It is entitled "The Second Son." This literary combination is interesting and the story will be read with curiosity. Another serial story promised for the Atlantic is Mr. F. Marion Crawford's novel, "Paul Patoff." Mr. Crawford's strong story, "Sarracinesca," will shortly be published in book form by the Macmillans.

THE SCIENCE Co. intend to devote the supplement of every fourth number of Science to "Education and Pedagogics." There will be thirteen of these numbers a year, which, if desired, will be furnished separately to subscribers at $1.50 a year. It will be so paged that it can be bound separately, thus furnishing an educational journal complete in itself. It will discuss the bistory of education, the art of instruction, the science of education, classical study, industrial education, science teaching, normal school methods, school discipline, common-school questions, etc. It will publish notes of events of importance and will specially review educational works. A bibliography of education will also be a feature; it will contain a list of new books, arranged by subjects, and brief descriptive notices of works with references to extended critical reviews in foreign and American periodicals.

Mr. M. N. Forney, well known for many years as connected with the Railroad Gazette, of New York, and who more recently became owner of the American Railroad Journal, will, on the first of January next year, take the Engineering Magazine, which for so many years has been published by D. Van Nostrand, and will consolidate it with the American Railroad Journal, the title of the new publication being The American Engineer-ing Magazine and Railroad Journal. The gen-eral features of Van Nostrand's magazine will be preserved, but as railroad construction and operation is one of the more important branches of engineering in this country, more space will be devoted to them than any other one department. This is really a consummation of an arrangement proposed by Mr. Van Nostrand during the last year of his life, and was brought about because his appeal for a more "cordial and remunerative support" for the Engineering Magazine remained unheeded. We hope the new proprietor will have better success.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Boston, Mass.—Haskell & Post, 3 Somerset St., have entered into a a partnership to carry on a subscription-book business. The firm is composed of C. Lansing Haskel, formerly with Samuel L. Hall, and Frank J. Post, late with The Congregationalist.

CLEVELAND, O.—Owing to continued ill health, Ernest L. Schinkel has resigned his position as Vice-President of "The Burrows Bros. Company," and has sold his entire interest in the Company to the remaining officers. There will be no other change in the business as heretofore conducted.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEO. A. MOSHER & Co., Syracuse, N. Y., have published a block calendar entitled "The Chantauqua Gem Calendar," compiled by Miss M. A. Barney.

H. T. WRIGHT, Kansas City, Mo., will publish Nov. 15th a new edition of "Wright's New Map and Guide for Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kansas."

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish a once a full report of the great debate on the Andover theory of a possible future probation, at he recent meeting of the American Board at Des Moines.

THE HOMANS PUB. Co. make an exception in the discount on Macleod's "Economics for Reginners," just issued by them. Their usual discount to the trade is twenty-five per cent.; on this work they make it forty per cent.

GROLIER CLUB MEETINGS.—In addition to the regular meetings of the club there will be an exhibition of books on November 8th, preceded by an address on "Wood-Engravings of the 15th and 16th Centuries," by W. J. Linton; and on the 15th of December an exhibition of Oriental books accompanied by an address on the subject by E. Shugio.

W. S. GOTTSBERGER has begun suit against the Aldine Publishing Co. to restrain them from publishing the "Eber's Gallery," which, Mr. Gottsberger claims, interferes with his rights. On the 6th inst. Judge Colt, of the U. S. Circuit Court held in Boston, granted a restraining order till a motion for a temporary injunction could be heard and decided.

LITERARY circles are greatly stirred over the bitter controversy raised by the Quarterly Review in its attack on Mr. Gosse as a critical fraud and scholastic impostor. It is understood that the author of the article is Churton Collins. Mr. Gosse imports a painful element into the wrangle by recounting, in the Athenaum, that the assulant used to be a guest and intimate friend ofhis.

H. L. HASTINGS (The Scriptural Tract Repoitory), Boston, has entered the ranks of publishers who propose to try the close discount system. The retail prices of his publications now average about one-third less than the old retail prices and the net prices to the trade are about ten or fifteen per cent. less. The discounts and prices for the Anti-Infidel Library remain unchanged, as the prices of these pamphlets are mostly five and ten cents each.

A. S. Barnes & Co. warn the trade against an individual who, under the names, F. J. Cummings and Wm. Foley, pretending to reside at Orange Valley, N. J., and at Fonda, N. Y., has applied to several school-book publishers for sets of books. His dodge is to send a letter signed James J. O'Brien, a well-known clergyman of Fonda. Mr. O'Brien, when referred to, declared the letter to be a forgery. Publishers and others will do well to keep the names in mind.

WM. R. JENKINS has just ready a new revised and enlarged edition of Liautard's "Vade Mecum of Equine Anatomy;" and "Equine Hospital Prescriber," by Dr. James B. and Albert Gresswell. Three little books appropriate for Christmas are also ready: "Glad Tidings," "A Happi. Christmas," and "Glad Sounds," all consisting of ses from different poets, touching upon the reous joyousness of the day, very neatly printed h red-line borders and gotten up in illuminated

HENRY P. ALLEN, N. Y., will publish directly book upon which Rev. Dr. A. Stewart Walsh, New York City, has been engaged for two years, 1 which he calls "Mary, the Queen of the ruse of David and Mother of Jesus." Dr. Walsh igned the pulpit of an influential church for the rpose of devoting himself wholly to this book. Walsh is a Baptist, but a liberal man, and he refully avoids sectarianism and controversy. e Rev. T. De Witt Talmage will furnish the ok with a preface. The work will be sold by bscription only.

ULBRICH & KINGSLEY have published in an edion limited to 300 copies of a work by George Ifred Stringer, entitled "Leisure Moments in ough Square; or, the beauties and quaint con-its of Johnson's dictionary." This is a collecon of the more interesting definitions and illusations of that monument of English literature. 'he selections are confined to words which are obsolete, curious, or rarely used," and little is ttempted in the way of supplementing or corecting the Doctor's learning by the results of tter scholarship. The volume is thus a literary uriosity with some historic literary value.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SOM

HAVE JUST READY:

Our Arctic Province, Alaska, and the Seal Island

By HENRY W. ELLIOTT. Illustrated by Drawings from Nature, by the author, and Maps. 1 8vo, $4.50.

During the past few years everything relating to Alaska has been regarded with increased interest, and I liott's book comes at the time it is most needed. The author, as he says in the preface, has endeavored to "put word, and by brush and pencil, the life and country of Alaska as it is, so clearly and so truthfully that the reak draw his or her own inference, just as though he or she stood upon the ground itself." A scientist and a same his book on Alaska, besides being of the utmost interest to the general reader, is of great value and important contribution to scientific research. The author has spent six or sever years in studying the country and is a travelling from the most southerly point of the province to the most northerly, along the coast, and same islands extending nearly 3000 miles to the west. His treatment of the seal interests is particularly full, as now of especial moment.

The Messianic Prophecy.

The Prediction of the Fulfilment of Redemption Through the Messiah. By CHARLES AUG. BRIGGS, D.D., Professor in the Union Theological Seminary. 1 vol., 8vo, $2.50.

Dr. Briggs, who gives us in this book a critical study of the Messianic prophecies of the Old Testament order of their development, belongs to that influential group of religious scholars and thinkers who approach the and all religious themes in a thoroughly progressive spirit. This book is the result of profound study as scholarship. The author is well known as an authority on all that relates to Old Testament study, and is so one which is sure to attract universal attention among Biblical scholars.

The Buchholz Family.

Sketches of Berlin Life. By Julius Stinde. Translated from the Forty-ninth Edition of the Geman by L. Dora Schmitz. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

A book which has attracted extraordinary and well-merited attention first in Germany, where the faithfulness its pictures of social life was keenly appreciated, and then in England. This admirable edition will introduce a set charming book to American readers.

"Every phase of Berlin middle-class life is treated with exhaustive thouroughness, and its relation to God and to the world, to the State and to society, to marriage, the family, birth, and death, are given so truly and vividy that the reader is initiated once and for all, and the occasional exaggerations and improbabilities do not come into a sideration."—Deutsche Rundschau.

"Our author has singled out one tiny group for study of an almost scientific accuracy and thoroughaea, as has then fused his observations into such a living picture as only a true artist can create. His sketches are vigural realistic, and racy; they sparkle with bright fun and joyousness."—Blackwood's Magusine.

Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings.

Edited by J. D. CHAMPLIN, Jr. Critical Editor, CHARLES C. PERKINS. 4 vols., 4to, with more than 2000 illustrations, $25.00 per volume.

The second volume of this superb work is now ready. Besides the engravings in the text are twelve full prepared reproductions by photogravure, etching, etc., of paintings by Rossetti, Meissonier, Jules Bréton, Puvis de Chavans. Bastien-Lepage, Sir Frederick Leighton, Elaize, Piloty, Hebert, Laurens, Kaulbach, and Henner. But im hundred copies are printed. Intending purchasers should enter their names at once, as the subscription his in rapidly being filled.

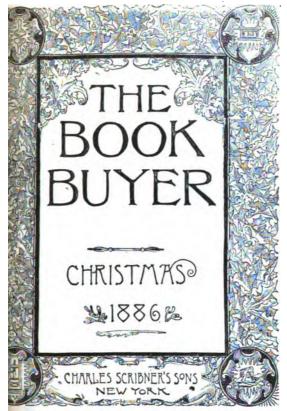

The Beginnings of Christianity.

With a View of the State of the Roman World at the Birth of Christ. By Prof. GEORGE P. FISHED. New Edition. Crown 8vo, $2.50.

This new edition of one of Prof. Fisher's most important books is issued in a uniform style and price with is "History of the Reformation" and "The Grounds of Theistic and Christian Belief." The New York Examine says: "The rolume is not a dry repetition of will-known facts. It bears the mark of original research. Every page glows with freshness of material and choiceness of diction.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743-745 Broadway, New York.

TO THE TRADE:

We beg to announce that we shall have ready on December 1st, The Book Buyer Christmas Annual for 1886. It will give a comprehensive review of the Christmas literature of the year, omitting no book deserving of mention published for the holiday season.

Among those who will contribute to the annual are Miss Louisa M. Alcott, Mr. G. P. Lathrop, Mr. Roger Riordan, Miss Edith M. Thomas, Mrs.

ton Harrison, who will write of the children's books, Mrs. Schuyler Rensselaer, Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, Miss Sara Orne Jewett, J. D. Champlin, Jr., and Mr. Ripley Hitchcock.

The chief pictures, some of which have been especially reproduced The Book Buyer, will be printed in colors, on the finest ivory shed paper, and everything will be done to make it the most active annual of the kind ever published.

We are now preparing the imprint editions, the bookseller's name earing in place of that of Charles Scribner's Sons, in the cut at the d of this sheet. The number will be enlarged to 112 pages; and nuch of the edition has already been placed, we trust that those hing copies will communicate with us at once.

Imprint editions, $7.50 per hundred. We cannot take imprint ers for less than 250 copies. May we hear from you at your liest convenience?

Respectfully,

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

October 26, 1886.

743-745 Broadway, N. Y.

TAKE WARNING, and order, before it is too late, the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876-1884, of which the edition is limited, now priced at $12.50 paper parts, $15 half morocco. It is worth twice its cost each year in any library or book-store.

We have some extra copies of the Subject-volume only of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876. This contains, classified by subjects, all but the Novels, Poems, etc., and is very useful by itself. Price, $15, half morocco.

The prices on these volumes will be raised to $20, and later to $25 each.

CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES.

Measrs. Geo. R. Lockwood & Son desire to inform the trade that they have NOW READY a very attractive and el line of Christmas souvenirs. They are as follows:

LOCKWOOD'S PARCHMENT DAINTIES."

This Series, so well known, has reached in a single year a sale of many thousands, and is perhaps the most popular line of booklets ever put on the market. They will be issued in a decidedly novel style, more attractive than ever. They are:

1. GLAD TIDINGS. (New this season.)
2. TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS.
3. THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.
4. POEMS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR. By Frances Ridley Havergal.
5. CHRISTMAL FESTIVITIES. By CHARLES DICKENS and WASHINGTON IRVING.

Retail price, 40 cents each.

IOLLY LEAVES. MISTETOE SPRAYS.

These two novelties consist of appropriate verses, bound in dainty covers, each being cut in the shape of the leaves named (so universally associated with Christmas), and richly lithographed in bright colors and hard polished silver.

They are remarkably original as to shape, and will readily be recognized as a refined and popular Christmas souvenir.

Retail price, 40 cents each.

SEEKERS AFTER THE LIGHT. From Ben Hur.

Fourth edition now ready. This souvenir is issued with the kind permission of Messrs. Harper & Bros., publishers of "Ben Hur," and Gen. Lew Wallace, its author. It consists of four colored etchings, illustrating the meeting of the three wise men as Seekers after the Light, and the appearance of the star, announcing the birth-place of the Redeemer.

The etchings are accompanied by text explanations selected from "Ben Hur." Embossed silver stamping on a heavy tinted cardboard, bound with a wide satin ribbon to match, forms the very unique cover.

The unprecedented and continued sale of "Ben Hur" needs no comment, and we therefore feel confident that the many thousand readers of that interesting book will be gratified also to possess this little token, so appropriate for a Christmas glift.

Retail price (in a box), $1.25.

The trade are respectfully urged to reserve a place for them in their stock. For sale by all Jobbers.

Chatterbox Bulletin

The Full Text of the Recent Belford Chatterbox Injunction.

CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, | In Equity. NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS.

DANA ESTES et al US. Belford, Clarke & Co. et al.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

This cause coming on to be further heard upon the motion of the complainants by their solicitors, Messrs. Raymond & Rainey, for an injunction pendente lite, and the same having been heard on the Bill of Complaint, and the affidavits filed by the respective parties having been read, and the arguments of Mr. J. L. S. Roberts and Mr. W. G. Rainey on behalf of the complainants, and of Mr. N. A. Partridge on behalf of the defendants, having been heard and duly considered by the Court. and it appearing to the satisfaction of the Court that the complainants are entitled to an injunction pendente lite, in pursuance of the prayer of the Bill of Complaint, etc.

It is ordered that the said defendants, and each of them, and their attorneys, agents, employes. and workmen, be enjoined and restrained pendente lite from directly or indirectly selling or shipping out of the jurisdiction of this Court any juvenile publication bearing in or upon the same the word "Chatterbox;" and further, that the said defendants, the said Belford, Clarke & Co., its directors, officers, managers, agents, servants, and workmen; and said Alexander Belford, James Clarke, and M. A. Donohue, and the attorneys, agents, workmen, and servants of them and each of them, be enjoined and restrained pendente lite from directly or indirectly making, printing, publishing, selling, offering, or keeping for sale, any books of the general class, style, and character in said Bill of Complaint mentioned, upon which are printed, marked, stamped, or attached said words "Chatterbox," or any word simulating the appearance thereof, so adopted and used by said James Johnston and the said complainants, as his assignees, in connection with the manufacture, publication, and sale of said books, and also from advertising or printing or circulating any catalogue or publications, or circulars or notices of any kind whatsoever, announcing that they are making or offering for sale juvenile books bearing said word "Chatterbox," all as in said Bill of Complaint is prayed until the further order of this Court.

And this injunction is made also and specially to apply to publications of the defendants referred to in said Bill of Complaint and affidavits, and known and marked as "Chatterbox, 1883;" "Belford's Chatterbox, 1885;" Belford's Chatterbox, 1886-87;" "Our Boys' Chatterbox;" "Our Girls' Chatterbox;" "Our Baby's Chatterbox;" and "Little Pets' Chatterbox." And the said defendants and each of them are hereby ordered and directed to use due diligence on all ordinary and available business methods promptly to suppress the advertisements, display, offering, distribution, and sale of each and every the books herein generally and specifically referred to, so far as the case may be either within their direct or indirect possession or control, including all books in transit and all delivered on consignment, and so to restrain and prevent the further advertisement, display, offering, distribution, and sale thereof until the further order of this Court.

W. Q. GRESHAM, Circuit Judge.

OCTOBER 26, 1886,

AGAIN WE CAUTION ALL CONCERNED.

TO ALL DEALERS IN BOOKS. NOTICE

We hereby caution you against buying or selling any book bearing the name "Chatterbox." either alone or in combination with other words, excepting those with our imprint, or marked as sold under our license, as the United States Courts have repeatedly confirmed our exclusive right to this word as a trade-mark, and ALL INFRINGERS, whether PUBLISHERS or DEALERS, WILL BE PROSECUTED.

If any one doubts our intention he has only to furnish proof of infringement to enable us to prosecute.

ESTES & LAURIAT, Boston.

Chatterbox Case: INJUNCTION REFUSED.

TRUTH vs. FICTION.

The pretence of ESTES & LAURIAT that they have obtained the injunction of the United States Circuit Court against any publication with the word "Chatterbox" has imposed upon the public long enough.

The injunction they did obtain was in these words: "It is also further adjudged and decreed that a perpetual injunction be issued in this suit against the said defendants, Belford, Clarke & Co., restraining them, . . . their servants, - . . and all persons claiming or holding under or through them, or either of them, from printing, stamping, marking, attaching, or affixing said name or word 'Chatterbox' in or upon books of a juvenile character OF THE GENERAL APPEARANCE, STYLE, AND MANNER OF COVER AND STYLE OF PRINTING WHICH ARE UPON THE COMPLAINANTS' SAID BOOKS, . . . and from simulating the appearance and style of printing of the complainants' 'Chatterbox'; and from selling, offering for sale, and from presenting to the public juvenile publications printed IN SUCH STYLE, and with the use of the title 'Chatterbox,' IN SUCH MANNER as to lead the public to believe that they are the publications of the complainants."

Precisely the same injunction was granted against FRANK LESLIE, and no other or different one has ever been obtained by them.

My books do not resemble in any of the respects mentioned the publications of ESTES & LAURIAT.

That the public may know what kind of men ESTES & LAURIAT are, I give the following extract from the testimony of Mr. ESTES in their suit against me:

Cross-Interrogatory No. 227.

Was not the REPRINT of the "Chatterbox" of 1878 MADE BY YOU in a form CALCULATED TO DECEIVE THE PUBLIC?

Ans. Upon reflection I should say it undoubtedly was.

Cross-Int. 228. And was so intended?

Ans. YES.

INJUNCTION REFUSED.

Judge Wallace on January 5, 1885, refused to grant any injunction against my publications containing the word "Chatterbox" as part of the title.

See his opinion in 22 Federal Reporter, p. 823.

BOOKSELLERS WHO MAY HAVE RECEIVED LET. TERS FROM ESTES & LAURIAT, WARNING THEM AGAINST SELLING MY BOOKS, WILL CONFER A FAVOR BY FORWARDING TO ME ALL SUCH COMMUNICATIONS. SUCH WARNINGS COMING FROM SUCH TRADERS IN DECEIT SHOULD RECEIVE NO ATTENTION FROM RESPECTABLE AND INTELLIGENT BOOKSELLERS.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish shortly a volume of sermons with the title "Life of Christ in the World," by Rev. Arthur Brooks, of New York.

RAND, McNally & Co., Chicago, are about to issue "The Memoirs of Napoleon and Marie Louise," by Madame Durand, one of the first ladies of the French Empress, Marie Louise; also "Karma," a story, by A. P. Sinnett.

JAMES H. EARLE, Boston, has just published "Friendship and Wayside Gleanings," a volume of original verse, by Mrs. E. A. Barrows, who has been a contributor to the press for many years. The volume contains a selection of her best poems.

CASSELL & Co. will publish early next week "A Banker of Bankersville," a novel, by Maurice Thompson. The story touches a question which will very likely attract the attention of our next Congress—that of an extradition treaty with Canada.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have just ready: "Sugscial events, and notable gestive Lessons in Language and Reading," a 1840 to the present time.

manual for primary readers, by Anna R. Badlam, of the Rice Training-School, Boston; "An Introduction to the Study of Robert Browning's Poetry," by Hiram Corson, Prof. in Cornell University; and "Progressive Outline Maps," of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, United States, Great Britain, and the World, printed on substantial drawing-paper, 93/4 x12 ins.

L. PRANG & Co. are about to publish a series of etchings to be entitled "Homes and Haunts of the Poets," to be issued in parts, each to consist of the portrait, a facsimile reproduction of a selection from manuscript, with autograph, and four scenes representing birthplaces, residences, and quiet nooks and resting-places connected with the poets' every-day life, or actually described in their writings. The etchings have been made by the well-known artist, W. B. Closson, especially for this purpose, and are entirely new; and the printing has been done under the supervision of the etcher, assuring an even standard of artistic excellence. The first will be Longfellow, to be followed by four others.

TICKNOR & Co. have just ready "A Muramasa Blade," a story of Feudalism in Old Japan, by Louis Wertheimer, beautifully illustrated by Japanese artists, and bound in richly ornamented Japanese cover, and also in red Japanese Kioto brocaded silk. The author has incorporated into the work a rich fund of tradition, sentiment, and local color, that makes it one of the most charming and most accurate of representations of the inner life of these fascinating Orientals. They have also just ready "Rankell's Remains," a novel, by Barrett Wendell, author of "The Duchess Emilia," an interesting story of modern American life; "The Memorial Hall at Harvard University," being No. 4 of the Monographs of American Architecture," containing 13 gelatine plates 13x16 inches, and one photo-lithograph, in portfolio.

ROBERTS BROS. publish this week a limited edition (483 numbered copies) of Lord Ronald Gower's charming monograph, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette," a highly interesting account of the last two or three weeks in the life of the unfortunate "Widow Capet." The work is handsomely printed on hand-made Irish linen paper, illustrated with a steel portrait of Marie Antoinette and a facsimile letter, and is richly bound in bi-color cloth. They have also just ready a limited edition of 400 copies of "Reynard the Fox," after the German version of Goethe, by Thomas James Arnold, with 60 woodcut illustrations for the state of the sta cut illustrations from the original designs of Wilhelm von Kaulbach, and 12 full-page etchings by Fox, from designs by Joseph Wolf; an edition of 500 copies of "Imagination in Landscape Painting," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton, a new work by this celebrated writer, containing many illustrations after Claude, Poussin, Rembrandt, Rubens, Turner, and others, in one elegant folio volume; a new edition of "The Unknown River," by the same author, which has been long out of print, containing 37 fine etchings by the author; "Autobiographical Memoirs of Giovanni Dupré," translated from the Italian by E. M. Peruzzi (a daughter of William W. Story), with an intro-duction by William W. Story, and a fine portrait of Dupré. This latter work is an exceedingly interesting and graphic account of art, political, and social events, and notable men and women from Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887 [1886.] 4-334 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Anders wishes is understood from the outset that his work does not claim to be either a treatise upon hygiene or botany; he aims simply to set forth, in plain terms, the latest light regarding the effects of some of the various physiological functions in plants and flowers upon the atmosphere in general, and the air of dwellings in particular, as well as the application of this knowledge to the laws of health. Most of the conclusions put forward have been arrived at from the results of an almost continuous action of corrections of the conclusions of corrections. nave been arrived at from the results of an almost contin-uous series of personal experiments extending over a period of eight years. The chief purpose of the writer will have been accomplished if he succeeds in proving that plants and flowers, particularly when cultivated in-doors, are worthy to be placed in the foremost rank of sanitary agencies. The concluding chapters treat of the sanitary influences of forest-growth—a subject engrossing, and deservedly so, a large share of the attention of scientific observers.

Pub. Soc., [1886.] 2+333 p. S. cl., $1.25.
Portrays a New England farmhouse with a group of children whose Christian names have become obscured in the nicknames, "Dear," Roundtop, Squaretop, Pet and Tiptop. "Dear" fulfils the promise of her name and will interest the little reader by quaint sayings and doings, and a loving ministry over her brothers and sisters. The story has a humorous side and the incident about the family off. Dear's Timon, and her missionary about the family pill, Dear's Timon, and her missionary effort, is sufficient to provoke mirth, as well as deeper feeling, in an older reader.

"The power by which Balzac is distinguished from all other novelists is displayed remarkably in 'Cousin Pons.' The plan of the story is of the simplest. It has but two motives—friendship and greed. The characters are few, the situations commonplace. But the interest of the story never flags. The development of the little drama prover flags. The development of the little drama promits steady pace. As the people concerned go never flags. The development of the little drama proceeds with steady pace. As the people concerned go about their several functions their reality grows upon us, and the fortunes of the two musicians absorb us until the climax of the sordid tragedy is reached. The friendship of Pons and Schmucke is one of the purest and most beautiful creations in fiction. These two old men, drawn together by a community of occupations and tastes, one to have but one life between them. Each is the complement of the other. Each is necessary to the other. Of the two, Schmucke is the higher soul. Pons is capable of baseness."—New York Tribune.

"A faithful picture of the impressions produced on the English aristocratic mind by modern socialism. One of the characters, Mr. Foreman, is a lightly disguised portrait of the English Socialist Hyndman, and the figure s painted in with vigorous lines and in almost lurid colors. He is permitted to advance the staple arguments of his class with freedom, tempered, it is true, by the superior knowledge of facts possessed by one of the Roman Catolic priests who occupy such influential positions in some of Disraell's novels. This priest, Mr. Stanley, is certainly very cleverly drawn, and a quite attractive and estimable personage; a little too omniscient, but humanly defective in the arguments—intended to be crushing—with which he meets the philosophy of Mr. Humbert Spender (alias Mr. Herbert Spencer). Carew, the hero, is an aristorat deeply touched by compassion for the lot of the majority.

There is a love story woven into the book, and it is told with so much tenderness and delicacy as to deserve hearty praise and admiration."—New York Tribuse.

Thomas, Reuen. Grafenburg people; fiction but fact. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1886.] 291 p.

il. D. cl., $1 25.

II. D. Cl., $1 25.

The Grafenburg people are supposed to inhabit a little town in the south of England. On a slender thread of fiction the author gives much practical advice against sectarianism. He introduces two clergymen, one Episcopal, the other a Rationalist, and makes them work in perfect harmony in their efforts to improve their people and teach them to love God and man. The heroine is an ideal woman, who exerts a powerful influence for good. who exerts a powerful influence for good.

Townsend, Virginia F. A. Boston girl's ambitions. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887 [1886.] 3-

395 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A story in which a young girl's indomitable grit is the motor which helped her combat sorrow and adversity, and gained for Caryl and Dorrice Dacre brilliant success.

There are several mysteries and a quaint little romance, but the story is singularly free from sensationalism.

The Marquis of Peñalta has been educated in the expectation of marrying María Elorza, the daughter of the chief family in a Spanish seaport town. When about of an age to marry, Maria becomes a religious fanatic. She belongs to the Romish Church and goes to mass constantly, makes her devoted servant scourge her, fasts and punishes herself in many ways. Finally she becomes a nun and the marquis marries her younger sister. The invalid mother is an excellent piece of character-drawing.

NOVEMBER 30, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenence and profit, so ought they of duly to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE recent circular of the Treasury Department, informing publishers that they should send to Collectors of Customs official certificates from the copyright office as to any book on which they claim copyright, and of which they desire to prevent the importation, puts the trade in a curious dilemma. In fact, if the Customs authorities themselves were to be bombarded with individual copies of copyright entries in the case of each book copyrighted, they would be in a chaos of confusion and would scarcely know where to turn, while the publisher would be mulcted to the extent of fifty cents apiece for each book with each Collector of Customs, and a good share of the profit taken out of his business. Endeavors are now being made to obtain some kind of ruling from the Treasury Department which shall provide more practicable methods of settling the difficulty. This difficulty has been foreseen in the Chace Bill now before Congress, which provides for periodical publication of all copyright entries on the authority of the Librarian of Congress. As the circular does not seem to have been sent to publishers generally, we reproduce it in full, though it was summarized in our issue of Oct. 2.

WE have several times had complaints from our subscribers that in dealing with those advertising for "Books Wanted" in our columns, they have had difficulty in getting their money promptly, or in some cases in getting it at all. It is of course impracticable for a journal to guarantee either the soundness or the honesty of its advertisers, and dealers must take the same precautions in the case of those advertising for "Books

Wanted" that they would in the case of other to whom they have to give more or less creix. On the other hand, in cases where these columns are made use of to obtain books under false patences or with no intent of paying for them, we should be very willing to co-operate with the seferers by taking steps to prevent or to punish this kind of dealing. We say this in view of a case which has recently come before us, where them is some ground for suspicion.

We have received in response to a circular offering our work on "Copyright: its Law and Literature," a number of replies by postal cards which give neither name nor address of the sender. We therefore ask those anonymous friends who may have ordered and do not receive the work to favor us with their name and address, that we may fill their intended order.

THE FIRST BOOKSELLER OF BOSTON.

From the N. Y. Newsdealer.

IN 1652, Hezekiah Usher, the first bookseller, began his business in Boston, Massachusetts. The first settlement of the town was made a 1630. The printing press at Cambridge was in operation, and had been put under the control of Samuel Green, whose descendants—he had ameteen children—are so widely scattered, and so well known in the history of printing in the colonies. Green remained in the management of the Cambridge press nearly fifty years. Isaiah Thomas, the author of the "History of Printing," collected nearly one hundred books he printed.

There must have been some demand for books in the Massachusetts colony at that time, to induce Usher to settle there as a bookseler. The fact, too, that he continued in the business over twenty years, and made a fortune in it. shows that he found a demand for his wares. That he was successful is known from the fact that in 1677 he advanced to the State of Massachusetts in purchase money for Maine, the proprietary right to which the grandson of Gorges, the original grantee, sold for £1250. At this time, also, # have the information that there were four book sellers in Boston; Dunton, the London bookseller, having carried there an invoice of books on speculation, "most of them practical," and "well suited to the genius of New England," reports that he found this number of competitors on the ground. Usher was not only a bookseller, be was also a publisher, and in 1672 obtained from the General Court a monopoly for seven years for printing the laws of the colony. He was the agent, also, of the London Society for the Prop agation of the Gospel among the Indians and superintended their publications in Massachusetts It was at the expense of this society that Elliot's translation of the Bible in the dialect of the Na tick Indians was printed, and in this and similar works the society must have spent over $2000.

Boston, as the chief city of New England, continued to be the literary centre of the colorist into the middle of the next century. In fact, there was but little attention given to books is any of the other cities. A singular evidence of the rarity of books is given by Franklin, in its

I waited upon him cordingly; and would have taken Collins with e but that he was not sober. The Governor eated me with great civility, showed me his lirary, which was a very large one, and we had a ood deal of conversation about books and aunors." Evidently the possession of a collection f books was rare enough in New York at that me to excite attention and comment.

AN ALLEGED BOOK SWINDLER.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, October 2.

THERE are several booksellers and others in his city who, when they meet, mournfully ask, 'Have you heard about Savage yet?" and then ndulge in anathemas. They are so interested in his Mr. Savage that they have induced a detecive to look after him. The booksellers are loath o tell their misfortunes, but a Globe-Democrat resorter managed to learn this much: Henry H. savage came to St. Louis some weeks ago and iberally distributed cards which seemed to indiate that he was connected with a good book house in New York. Several knew him as a book-agent, and trusted him. He had a great knowledge of the trade, apparently, and was very voluble in his professions of ability to dispose of books and secure rare ones. John Linahan, on Market Street, near Broadway, had a six-volume Shakespeare, valued at $50. Savage knew of a purchaser, and carried three of the volumes to him. But he did not find him home, returned the volumes and took them later on. Since then Mr. Linahan has not seen the agent, nor can he find the books, and his set is spoiled. Dan Linahan, of Fourth and Washington Avenue, despite all Savage's representations, would not let him have a $60 set of books to dispose of to a man around the corner, until the money was put down. Mr. Savage could not effect the sale, and got his money back. Alexander, who keeps a secondhand book-store at 605 Chestnut Street, expected that Savage would get him a good price for the two folio volumes of Johnson's Dictionary, supposed to be a first edition. He discovered that his agent did sell them to Dr. Frank L. James for the nominal sum of $10, giving a receipt, but Mr. Alexander got none of the money. The doctor, in turn, let the agent have four or five books to dispose of, and perhaps they were disposed of, but the doctor has no returns. Then the Jones Bros., at Eighth and Olive, would like to know how much their subscription "History of the World" brought. Foster Bros., of Eighth and Pine, estimate their loss at $21. Dr. W. D. Hinchey, who has a liking for books and art, let the agent have $10 to get him a rare volume. volume is still rare, as far as the doctor is concerned. John Linahan wrote to the firm in New York with which Savage was supposed to be connected. Some Cincinnati parties are also manifesting eagerness to catch up with Mr. Savage.

OBITUARY.

AUGUST BRENTANO.

A TELEGRAM from Chicago to his family in New York on the 2d inst., announced the sudden death in that city of August Brentano, the founder of the well-known firm of book and magazine dealers in Union Square. Mr. Brentano had only been ill a few days, the result of a cold. His health had been good, but the cold developed into pneumonia. Mr. Brentano was born in Hohen Ems, Austria, and at the time of his death was fifty-seven years old. His early taste and education inclined him to books and general literature, and when a young man he organized a circulating library in his town, and conducted it for several years. When Mr. Brentano came to America he was twenty-three years of age. His means were small, and he began his career in this city by selling daily papers in front of the New York Hotel, and from this he started his first store in Broadway, at Houston Street, under the Revere House, in 1856. He removed to No. 636 Broadway, subsequently to No. 708 Broadway. In 1870 he moved to 33 Union Square, then to 39, and finally a block lower down to No. 5, where his nephews now carry on the business. Mr. Brentano was the pioneer of the book trade to enter Union Square fifteen years ago, when it was filled with private houses. Since 1877 Mr. Brentano has not been connected financially with the house. He established a branch house in Washington and one in Chicago, where he was living and directing The business this store at the time of his death. was carried on by his nephews, Arthur, Simon, and August Brentano, Jr. Mr. Bientano was unmarried, and his nearest living relatives are a brother and sister. His body will be brought to this city for burial.

The career of August Brentano, says the N. Y. Sun, in an interesting sketch of the deceased. ought to be an example, and to afford encouragement to every clever and enterprising young man who is disposed to grumble because his circumstances are not what he would have them, and to those who cry out that the hard conditions of their lot make the struggle for advancement hopeless. Few men begin life more handicapped in the race than Mr. Brentano. When he came to this country, about a generation ago, he was a poor immigrant, a total stranger, unable to speak our language, and, besides, was afflicted with bodily deformities that would have crushed the spirit of a less resolute man. Nature had denied him the opportunity of earning his living with his hands, for they were greatly deformed, so that he was debarred from nearly all the employments open to his fellows. But his bodily infirmities only made him the more self-reliant and determined to surmount the obstacles to success. He was ready to set himself to work at anything which came in his way and was within his re-stricted capacities. He could carry and sell newspapers, and though the business was a humble one, the labor exhausting, and the rewards small, he went into it at the first opportunity and pursued it with tireless zeal.

That was about thirty-five years ago, when New York newspapers were almost wholly distributed by carriers from house to house. Each carrier had his definite route, and it was his function not only to seek and obtain required great in the customers. The business cessitated rising the papers at the doors, but seek and obtain required great in the customers. The business constituted rising the papers and punctuality and punctuali rapid walking in all weathers in the gray of the morning. It also involved no little risk in comparison with the gains obtained, and demanded both tact and patience in its prosecution. Customers paid weekly, and accordingly there were great numbers of bills to be collected when the route had been made large enough to be at all profitable. But an active and enterprising carrier was able to build up a business whose goodwill eventually came to have a pecuniary value like that of a mercantile establishment, or, more exactly, like that of a milk or a bread route.

In the old days, and even when Mr. Brentano landed in New York, there were comparatively few news-stands. A business which has now grown into enormous proportions, so that it gives employment to thousands of people, was then in its beginning, and he was one of the earliest to take advantage of the new method of distribution. We remember well when he set up his first news-stand on Broadway, where he at once attracted attention because of his appearance, and won a profitable trade by reason of his enterprise and anxiety to please his customers and anticipate their wants. He was noted for his promptness in getting the papers on his stand, and before long had increased the variety of his wares by including publications not often found at such a place. If a customer wanted any periodical which he did not have or sell, he was eager to be allowed to get it for him, and get it he would at any cost of running and inquiry. In that way Brentano's news-stand came to have a celebrity which extended far beyond the neighborhood in which it was situated. He succeeded in making his name known more than that of any other newsdealer in town.

Then, when he had accumulated enough money by prudence and economy, he entered into a more ambitious field. He rented a store and established what, if we remember rightly, was the first, and for a long time the only shop of the kind in New York. It was on Broadway, and was stuffed with publications of every sort, both domestic and foreign. If you could not find what you wanted in that varied collection, Mr. Brentano was glad to be told of the lack in order that he might supply it.

Therefore the demands of his increasing custom taught him the proper directions into which to extend his business, until at last he had not only a store for the sale of newspapers and periodicals, but also a book-store at which the freshest publications of every kind could always be obtained.

Therefore, when he removed his place of business to Union Square he was already a prosperous man, and there was no dealer of the kind so well known as he, both in the town and outside of its borders. People had found out that what they could not get elsewhere he was sure to have or to get for them promptly.

How to Take Out the Curl in Art Prints.—D. Lothrop & Co. send out with their issues of the "Wide Awake Art Prints" a slip with the following useful hint: Lay the art print on a table or other flat surface, face down; take the edge furthest from you with the left hand; hold a ruler with the right lengthwise against the art print, near the left hand; then lift steadily with the left hand and at the same time draw the ruler, with moderate pressure, toward you, across the back of the picture. Do not slide the picture itself. By this simple method the "curl" is readily removed in a moment without injury to the art print.

IMPORTATION OF BOOKS COPYRIGHT-ED IN THE UNITED STATES.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of the Secretary,
Washington, D. C., September 20, 18

To Collectors of Customs and Others :

The Department Circular of October 19. 182 (Decision No. 5416 of 1882), is hereby modified and republished for the better protection of its owners of American copyrights.

By Section 4964, Revised Statutes, the impatation of books copyrighted in the United Stan without the consent of the owner of the capright is prohibited; and by the joint operations section 15 of the act of March 3, 1879, saking appropriations for the service of the Post-Offer Department, and Section 3061, Revised Status, such importations are forfeited to the United

But, in order that owners of works copyrights in the United States, and subject to forfester, not only to the United States but to such owners may avail themselves of the protection of the rights given by the law, they must file with oblectors of customs duly authenticated certificate of such ownership. On importation of such ownership. On importation of such ownership, which is covered by any such certificate, and the importation of which is not consented to by the owner of the copyright, the proper officer of the custom will detain the books, and at once notify the owner of the copyright, to the end that the lam may take the steps necessary for their forfeine to him.

Books covered by such certificate will not be admitted to an entry on behalf of the impores. but it will be the duty of the collector to request the district attorney to intervene for the duties in any proceeding which may be instituted for their forfeiture.

Decision No. 7654, of the 26th of July less is hereby revoked so far as it declares importations of books in violation of American copyrights of forfeitable under the customs laws.

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Acting Secretary.

THE CHATTERBOX CASES.

WE are informed by Mr. R. Worthington that on Friday, Oct. 29, 1886, Judge Wallace, sitting in the U. S. Circuit Court, New York City, on motion made by the counsel of R. Worthington, granted an order closing Estes & Lauriat's side of the case in the "Chatterbox" matter; and that on Monday, Nov. 1, 1886, Judge Gresham, in the U. S. Circuit Court, Chicago, refused to grant Estes & Lauriat's motion for an injunction against R. Worthington's "Chatterboxes."

COPYRIGHT IN REFERENCE-BOOKS

A DESPATCH from Chicago to the N. Y. Work dated November 2, states that proceedings have been instituted by Erastus Wiman in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Gresham for an injunction against a publication known as the Standard Farm Implement Directory, containing names and ratings of implement dealers, seedsmen and kindred trades. The papers in the suit allege that these names and ratings have been copied and simply classified from the mercantile agency reference-book of Messrs. R. G. Dun & Co., of which firm Mr. Wiman is a member. Inasmsth as several thousand of the books containing the alleged piracy have been distributed to subscrib here and elsewhere, the injunction would be vailing except for the attempt to make parties the suit the subscribers themselves on the und that they are receivers of stolen property, that books published in violation of the copyit law are liable to forfeiture. The fact that implement directory has not been sold, but t on the payment of $15 the book is loaned to scribers, to be returned on the issue of a new ion, is relied upon to make effective the ration of the injunction, no matter in whose session the books are found. A favorable deon to the agency in the matter would have portant results, as there are said to be thouds of subscribers to various other classified oks who may be liable to proceedings should it shown that these books are devised, wholly or part, from other publications.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—We learn from the Washgton Post that Mr. A. Scott Wetherbee, who for o years has been the resident manager of Brenno Bros.' book-store, in that city, has purchased e business, and will hereafter conduct it under e name of A. S. Wetherbee & Co. His partner, is understood, is a well-known newspaper man, he new firm will continue to be Brentano's jents in Washington, and will be in close relation with that firm.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"THE COUNTRY DOCTOR," will be the next sue in Roberts Brothers series of Balzac novels.

D. APPLETON & Co. will be the American pubshers of Francis Darwin's biography of his emient father.

It is Henry S. Allen, not Henry P. Allen, who vill publish Dr. Walsh's "Mary, the Queen of the louse of David and Mother of Jesus."

GINN & Co. announce that Collar's edition of Eysenbach's German Grammar has been delayed by the author's preoccupation with his Beginner's Latin Book, but is now in the printer's hands.

WE learn from the N. Y. Star that Mr. H. S. Smith, secretary of the National Publishing Company of Philadelphia, Pa., for nearly fifteen years, has resigned and accepted the presidency of one of the largest publishing companies in the United States. We wish him success in his new office.

GINN & Co. have just published "First Weeks at School," by J. H. Stickney and S. C. Peabody, a neat little book designed to precede the primer; also, "Thucydides," Book I., by Prof. Charles D. Morris, of Johns Hopkins University, and Book VII., by Prof. Charles Forster Smith, of Vanderbilt University. They will hereafter publish Myer's "Ancient History" (heretofore on the list of Harper & Bros.) in connection with his volumes of mediæval and modern history.

J. M. STODDART Co. (limited), Philadelphia, announce that the publication of the "Encyclopædia Britannica, American Reprint," will not be affected in the least by the death of the late Roger Sherman, his position in the J. M. Stoddart Co. (limited), being filled by the election of his brother-in-law, Maxwell Sommerville, as President. Robert Graham continues as Secretary and Treasurer. They also state that the remaining volumes will be published as soon after the receipt of the English copy as practicable, consistent with the revision of the book to prepare it for the American market.

THE ALDINE BOOK PUBLISHING Co. have ready the "Globe Dictionary of the English Language," containing over one hundred thousand words, edited and compiled by Hyde Clarke, from the dictionaries of Worcester, Webster, Walker, Johnson, Richardson, Murray, and Latham, and the London Lancel pronounces itself surprised and delighted at the terseness, conciseness, and precision of the definitions. They have a new edition of "A Nihilist Princess," by Gagneur, a book which the N. Y. Tribune says throws fresh light upon one of the most difficult and burning questions of the day; and "The Marquise de Brinvilliers," by Emile Gaboriau. "Young America" is a beautiful book for young children, with new and original stories, gayly bound in a lithographed board cover.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have in press for immediate issue an important new work, in five volumes (each volume complete in itself and sold separately), by Rev. H. R. Haweis, M.A., author of "Thoughts for the Times," etc. The first volume, to be published this month, will be "The Story of the Four" (evangelists). It will deal with the sources of the gospel narrative, and the historic environments of eye-witnesses; to be followed with "The Picture of Jesus" (the Master), "The Picture of Paul" (the disciple), "The Conquering Cross" (the Church), "The Light of the Nations" (Asia, Africa, Europe). The first volume, just published in England, was all subscribed for by the trade before publication day, and will doubtless awaken no little interest in this country, where the author is well known by his previous works.

THE ICONOGRAPHIC PUB. Co., 39 N. 9th St., Phila., have issued the first two volumes of "The Iconographic Encyclopædia of the Arts and Sciences," which will constitute a series of illustrated manuals embracing those branches of human knowledge whose acquisition can be facilitated and whose principles made clear by pictorial representation. The progress of civilization, natural sciences, and the entire range of the liberal and fine arts and the higher products of the artisan, are treated in their logical sequence. The complete work, not exceeding fifteen vol-umes royal 8vo, will include the following leading divisions: Anatomy, Anthropology, Agriculture, Archæology, Architecture, Astronomy, Botany, Building, Chemistry, Engineering, Ethnology, Geology, History of Culture, Mathematics, Mechanics, Military Science, Mineralogy, Mining, Mythology, Naval Science, Painting, Physics, Sculpture, and Zoology. By special arrangement with the German publisher, F. A. Brockhaus, of Leipsic, the present publication will be the only edition in the English language. The illustrations are mainly from the original plates, engraved by the most skilful German artplates, engraved by the most skilful German artists. The two volumes now ready comprise "Anthropology and Ethnology," by Dr. D. G. Brinton, and "Ethnography," by Dr. G. C. Gerland, bound in one volume, and "Prehistor of Culture," by Dr. D. G. Brinton, and "Histor of Culture," by Dr. August von Eye, edited by J. Foster Kirk, also in one volume.

THE GENUINE CHATTERBOX

IS ALWAYS SURE TO SELL.

DID YOU EVER KNOW IT FAIL?

Then why order inferior and unsalable books when you can buy one on which there is no risk?

"A nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling." The Chatterbox is the quickest as well as the surest to sell.

"The sincerest form of flattery is imitation." What book in the history of the juvenile book trade was ever imitated to the extent that Chatterbox has been?

Now that nearly all of the spurious and illegal imitations of Chatterbox have been enjoined by repeated decrees of the United States and State Courts, and suits against all others are being pushed forward, it is evident that with this dishonest competition removed, the genuine book will be the safest, best-selling, and most profitable of all juvenile books.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SOM

Publish To-Day:

A History of the French Revolution.

By H. Morse Stephens. In three volumes. Vol. 1 ready. Containing a new Preface to the American Edition. Octavo, $2.50.

Mr. Stephens' work represents many years' reseath and study, and the result is a mass of wholly unpublished material now incorporated for the first time into a history of the French Revolution. The book attracted upon is appearance in London not only exceptional interest at attention, but universal praise from critics and historian alike. The volume is eminently readable, and of especial interest to American readers, tracing, as it does, the important influence of the American Revolution in the overthrow of the French monarchy.

"I have studied this volume with increasing interes, and close it with admiration. Its merit is cumulative and grows steadily upon the reader, leaving a final impression of confidence in its matter and method."—E. PURCHLE

"Manners Makyth Man."

By the Author of "How to be Happy, Though Married." I vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE,—"I am showing my grained to the public for their very kind reception of 'How to be Happy Though Married,' by now presenting to the another little book with my best 'manners!' It is not a book of etiquette, for I am by no means a master of commonies; nor does the motto of Winchester College, 'Manners Makyth Man,' refer to those social rules and forms which are often only substitutes for good manner, but rather to manners in the old sense of the word which we see in the text, 'Evil communications corrupt god manners.'"

Prince Peerless.

A Fairy Folk Story Book. By MARGARET Col-LIER. Illustrated by John Collier. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.25.

Young readers who find the old-fashioned kind of survellous fairy stories the best, will derive genuine pleaser from these graceful and charmingly written tales. The illustrations by the author's brother, the famous Engish painter, are superb in themselves, while they illustrate the text in the best sense and carry out the author's faxon admirably.

The special attention of the Trade is called to the fact that our publications for the Holidays undoubtedly form the most attractive and salable line of the season. Dealers who have not yet secured a stock of these goods should do so before it is too late.

The CHRISTMAS CAROL, by Dickens ($9.00), illustrated with 24 beautiful designs by Gaugengigl and Chominski, is in its second edition, and less than 200 copies remain unsold. No more will be made this season.

Thackeray's MAHOGANY TREE ($6.50), the "book of the season," is in its third edition, and nearly all sold.

The attractive BEACON LIGHT SERIES ($1.50 in bronze, $2.00 in celluloid), consisting of "Long Shore," "Habitations," and "Beacon Lights," are now on press with the 18th thousand of one and the 10th thousand of each of the others. The Celluloid binding on these is the "hit" of the season.

The fine Booklets, "Lyrics of Love," "Heart to Heart," "From a Friend's Garden," "Breezes from the Fields," "Christmas Songs and Carols" (50 cents in paper, and 75 cents in celluloid), are temporarily out of print, the third edition being all sold. A new edition will be ready immediately. The second edition of "Fairy Flowers from Ocean Bowers" is now in preparation.

Does not this indicate that no wide-awake dealer in books can afford to be without the above items?

If you have not yet secured a stock of these books send your orders before it is too late. Liberal discounts.

THE

Literary News. 1886.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS.

THE LITERARY NEWS for Christmas, 1886, will embrace thirty-two pages of reading matter and illustrations, and we intend to make it of a higher interest and artistic attractiveness than last year, and to issue it promptly.

Its sole aim and object is to increase the sale of books; and every bookseller who distributes it may be sure of being benefited thereby.

A chief attraction of the forthcoming issue will be the numerous specimen illustrations from the most prominent and popular new holiday books.

The most valuable feature, besides the Literary Notes, will be a special price-list of the Books of the Season, in all the departments of Holiday Literature.

To those who desire to reach a wider public than they feel they can afford to seek through the more expensive Christmas Number of the Publishers' Weekly, the Christmas Number of the Literary News is recommended as the best possible medium to cultivate a holiday trade.

ISSUED BY

IALL ENTERPRISING BOOKSELLERS.]

The subscription edition of the ILLUSTRATED CHRISTMAS NUMBER of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be issued as early in November as possible, to give time for the imprint editions to reach all dealers three weeks before Christmas at the latest.

The Number will as usual present the finest specimen illustrations from the New Holi-DAY BOOKS, with special articles on the leading works, a full descriptive summary of books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the ILLUSTRATED WORKS, BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG, and other CHOICE BOOKS published during 1886, etc., etc. Every endeavor will be made to surpass the issues of previous years.

The imprint edition (intended for distribution by dealers with their sole imprint) will be printed immediately after the issue of the Trade edition, under the title of "CHRISTMAS CATA-LOGUE," as given above.

The local bookseller can add half as much again to his holiday trade by properly calling the attention of the public to his goods. For this purpose, the best means is the circulation of this handsome, interesting, and comprehensive CHRISTMAS CATALOGUE, which is received with pleasure by those to whom it is given or sent, as itself a picture-book of no little value; and its descriptions of and illustrations from books, at once arouse the desire to purchase the books themselves.

No better investment can be made by the bookseller who wants to make the most of his holiday trade.

Orders filled in the order of size of edition, largest first, and then of receipt. As the paper is specially made for this issue, orders should be received at once, as the filling of later demands cannot be guaranteed.

The thick paper edition of the CHRISTMAS CATALOGUE will be supplied as follows: SINGLE COPIES (postpaid), PER 100 COPIES (with imprint), . $20 00 35 CTS.

The thin paper edition, with dealers' imprints, will be supplied at the following rates:

PER 100 COPIES. PER 500 COPIES, $10 00 75 00 20 00 " IOOO 250

These prices are all lower than the actual cost to us, and are made to insure wide circulation of the publishers' advertising.

Orders should be sent in at once, and in order to avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding, should accompany the remissions. All packages sent by express unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.

NOTES IN SEASON.

JOHN E. POTTER & Co., of Philadelphia, have in press "How He Lost Her," a novel, by Jonathan Barrett.

ROBERTS BROS. have just ready "Daily Morning and Evening Companion Calendars," each mounted on cards of appropriate designs, oval in shape, and enclosed in a handsome box; also "Calendrier Français," printed entirely in the French language, and mounted on a handsome card in colors. The selections for these calendars—wise, witty, and pathetic excerpts—have been made by two ladies of eminent critical judgment, and are the fruit of a very extensive reading of both ancient and modern writers.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish immediately "Sketches of My Life," by the late Admiral Hobart Pasha, containing, in addition to numerous adventures of a general character, descriptions of slaver-hunting on the coast of Africa, blockade-running in the South during the Civil Blackwood & Sons.

War, and experiences in the Turkish Navy during the war with Russia; "Reminiscences and Opinions," 1813–1885, by Sir Francis Hastings Doyle, abounding in sparkling anecdote and piquant stories of public men; "A Study of Mexico," by David A. Wells, which is a reprint of papers that appeared in the Popular Science Monthly, and are now extended and revised; and "The Witching Time," a series of tales for the year's end by F. Marion Crawford, W. E. Morris, Laurence Alma-Tadema, Vernon Lee, and others, uniform with "The Broken Shaft" of last year. They have also new editions of Archbishop Trench's "Notes on the Parables" and "Notes on the Miracles."

Anson D. F. Randolphi & Co. will publish immediately "The Wisdom of the Apocalypse," by Rev. J. H. McIlvaine, D.D.; "Siam, or, the heart of Farther India," by Mary Lovina Cort, a resident of Siam; "For Love's Sake: poems of faith and comfort," by Margaret J. Preston; "A Handful of Monographs, Continental and English," by the same author; "In Quietness and Confidence, a series of talks on topics pertaining to the spiritual life," by Rose Porter; "The Three Kings: a Christmas legend of long ago," by Mary Leland McLanathan, with illustrations by Rosina Emmett; a new and enlarged edition of "Fellowship: letters addressed to mourners;" the Elstow edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress," with numerous illustrations; two miniature volumes of religious poetry, "Abiding" and "Confiding," "The Song of the Angels," "The Holy Night," "The Happy Christmas Time," and "Centuries Ago," four separate selections of Christmas poems, each with three photographic illustrations; also a new volume in the Epochs of Church History, "The Evangelical Revival in the 18th Century," by Canon Overton.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

WILKIE COLLINS, now convalescent after a severe illness, has written a Christmas story called "The Guilty River."

GUSTAV FREYTAG is preparing an introduction containing reminiscences of his career for the proposed complete edition of his works.

M. DE LESSEPS has in press in Paris a book about his mission to Rome in 1849, in which he gives an account of his relations with Mazzini.

MISS ROSE CLEVELAND'S attempts to become an editor have not been successful. It is said that she finally arrived at the conclusion that Elder, the publisher of Literary Life, of Chicago, wished simply to use her and her name as an advertisement. At any rate, she has made up her mind to withdraw from the enterprise.

Miss Jane Margaret Strickland, the only survivor of the clever family of sisters of that name, has written a memoir of Agnes Strickland, whose historical biographies, poems, and novels secured her a literary reputation which still preserves interest in her name. The book will contain a great many of Agnes Strickland's letters. It is not generally known that Elizabeth Strickland was a fellow-worker with her younger sister, and the parts taken by each in writing the "Lives of the Queens of England" are indicated in the volume. The book will be published by Messrs.

Adams, Rev. H. C. Charlie Lucken at school and college; il. by J. Finnemore. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887 [1886.] 6+408 p. D. cl.,

Charlie Lucken is the great-uncle of the boy who hears the story of his life from a companion of his youth. The time this brave sailor flourished was 1797, when he was sent to Canada to reinforce General Wolfe. The history of the period and the many wars among the French and Canadians are graphically described.

 "Refined fancy, graceful imagination, and true poetic feeling crop out on every page. The poet's muse always sings in sad strains, but without morbid or misanthropic sentiment. Many of these poems have an exquisite melody and lyrical flow, and suggest irresistibly a musical setting. Among these, 'The silver bridge,' 'If I were dead,' Lines to a Tuscan air,'' and 'A white rosebud 'are particularly noticeable."—Boston Evening Gasette.

Benjamin, S G. W. Persia and the Persians.

Benjamin, S G. W. Persia and the Persians. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887 [1886.] 14+507 p. por. and il. Q. cl., $5; hf. cf., $9. In the winter of 1882-1883 the author was appointed by President Arthur to the legation in Persia, just created by act of Congress. The experiences connected with the establishment and conduct of the legation at Teherân suggested the present volume. His position of course gave him exceptional opportunities for seeing the country, and penetrating into the domestic life of the people. He had many novel and entertaining adventures of his own, which he combines with graphic descriptions, and political and other observations of great value. He does ample justice too, to the rich stores of Persian poetry and legends, its strange customs, and its romantic scenery and architecture. The volume is an unusually handsome one; printed in large type with ample spacings on fine rich paper with generous margins. The illustrations are many and very good. The dark blue cloth binding is richly stamped in red and gold.

por. O. cl., $6; large-pap. ed., $10.
The illustrations dominate the text, which serve setting; the text, however, is full of interest, relating the early life and artistic efforts of one of England's most noted and popular artists. The illustrations are on every page and all through the text, being chiefly of a humorous kind; many are now for the first time published, others are of familiar designs. The work is handsomely gotten up, on fine paper, with gilt edges, etc.

"It is intended mainly for ministers of the gospel and theological students, though it is hoped that Sabbath-achood teachers and thoughful laymen will find much in its pages that will help them to a proper understanding of the Scriptures. A concise and comprehensive statement of the Messianic idea precedes each passage or group of passages, and the foot-notes are abundant, and contain much technical information for the Hebrew student which would puzzle the ordinary reader in the general body of the text. There is a freshness about the book which will excite the discussion the author so generously courts, and those who differ from him must acknowledge his industry and candor."—Boston Gasutte.

Brine, Mary D. A mother's song; il. by Miss C. A. Northam. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1886.]

The 44 love sonnets from the Portuguese are all enshrined in emblematical frames of different designs, made by Mr. Ipsen, the celebrated decorative artist; preceding each sonnet is a richly ornamental half-title, on a full page. The work, besides being a most exquisite specimen of bookmaking, is an excellent study for young artists. It has been a labor of love with Ipsen for years, and he has put into it some of his best and most original work.

Olark, J. B. The philosophy of wealth: economic principles newly formulated. Bost.,

Ginn & Co., 1886. 12+235 p. D. cl., $1.10.

A general restatement of economic principles in harmony with the modern spirit. The book aims, the publishers state, "to secure a truer conception of wealth, labor, and value; and of production, distribution, exchange, and consumption considered as activities of the social organism." Also, "to lay a foundation for the solution of the labor problem, and to apply the test of economics to the labor problem, and to apply the test of economics to the intellectual and spiritual activities of society." Intended for general readers; while not in the form of a text-book, and not a complete discussion of political economy, may be used with advantage by classes whose teachers instruct partly by lectures and partly by topical reading.

The Rev. Parker Lee was the chaplain of Darkley Model Prison; his craze was getting his reformed convicts situations in respectable families. When a midnight murder is committed at Findon Friars, where one of his protégés is butler, the reader is most ingeniously led off the track into suspecting the butler and Lee's own man Denby, also a reformed criminal, of having committed the crime. The explanation is entirely unexpected and the mystery of the story kept well concealed to the end.

Ingelow, Jean. John Jerome; his thoughts and ways: a book without beginning. Bost., Roberts Bros, 1886. 266 p. S. cl., $1.25. Scarcely can be called a story, and yet the form is that of fiction. John Jerome discourses about innumerable things, such as the difference between caterpillars and silk-worms, the qualities of the ailanthus tree, etc., before he tells who he is and how he had been induced by his friend Katharina to write the present book. We further learn that he in his youth saved Katharina and her cousin Anna from drowning, and was so injured as to be lame in consequence. Katharina is a strong element of the book, the story becoming almost exciting when a doubt arises as to whether she will accept the right man. The thread of the story, however, is secondary to John Jerome's "thoughts," which relate to a wide range of subjects, including art and religion, and which fill many pages.

50 C. The story of a young English girl who believes she has in her the making of a great artist. She begins life as a great heiress pursuing art as a pastime, but her father's death and the failure of a bank throw her upon her uncle's kindness for a home. In spite of his sincere affection for her, she longs for independence, and obtains his permission to go to longs for independence, and obtains his permission to go to London, and pursue the profession she loves under the protection of her old nurse. Her career and struggle are full of interest, and teach some practical lessons. Wilfrid Tristram, the Royal Academician, who permits her to study in his studio, is evidently a picture from life, it is so full of delicate lines and details. When it is forced upon Hope at last that she is not the possessor of genius, and can scarcely ever expect to live by her pictures, she accepts the colly alternative the author seems to think open to a woman only alternative the author seems to think open to a woman under the circumstances-marriage.

D. cl., $1.

Two young people, tired of boarding, make up their minds to try housekeeping on a small scale; the wife, who is an excellent cook, and a bright, spirited woman, assures her husband that with ten dollars a week and care and scopport she can set an excellent table. The book relates economy she can set an excellent table. The book relates her experience in the form of a story, giving an account of her friends, her home-life, her little hopes and joys, her troubles with servants, etc.; and at the same time giving a detailed account of her housekeeping and how the cold meats, etc., are transposed into savory dishes. Recipes are given all through the book of all the dishes she prepares and prices of various articles also appended. A full index makes it easy to find any of the recipes. Appeared serially in Good Housekeeping.

Phelps, Elizabeth Stuart. The madonna of the tubs; il. by Ross Turner and G: H. Clements. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887 [1886.]

4+94 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The chief charm of the story is its unpretentiousness; the scene is laid in a New England fishing village; the principal character is Ellen Jane Salt, who ekes out a scanty livelihood by washing for the summer boarders of Fairharbor; Helen Ritter, watching her at this ceaseless toil and ministry over her crippled child, noting as well Raffé's surroundings, gives Ellen Jane the fitting appellation, "The madonna of the tubs." The characters are all very clearly defined. Helen Ritter is charming in her rôle of patroness to the Salt family: Henry Salt is a typical New England fisherman, with a brood of rugged children, and one little suffering lad who claims the love of everybody; while Ellen Jane's loving care over all gives her the beauty of a madonna.

Picard, G: H. Old Boniface: a novel. N. Y., White, Stokes & Allen, 1886. 4+279 p. D. cl.,

The man whose name is taken as the title for the book does not appear upon the scene at all, though constantly referred to by the characters and exerting a certain influence upon their fates. He is a bank clerk in New York and the father of Kitty Boniface, a charming girl, who is travelling in Europe with her aunt, Mrs. Georgiana Swift, who is the wife of a great N. Y. railway lawyer. Whilst on their way homeward the aunt and nice linger in London, and Kitty becomes acquainted with Kenneth Blackie, who forthwith falls in love with her. His Scotch augus and broken-down old father are unusually good character-sketches. Kitty and Kenneth's love experience and the influence exerted upon them by "Old Boniface's" misfortunes are the leading themes. does not appear upon the scene at all, though constantly unes are the leading themes.

The reader is taken back to the opening of the nineteenth ntury. The aim of the book is not, however, to give century. The aim of the book is not, however, to give mere historical sketches; the incidents form but the framework of an interesting soul history, through which a mass is led from unbelief into clear, bright faith. The argument from nature for the being and goodness of God is presented in conversation, link by link, as the story goes on. The book is thus fitted to be put in the hands of those who are disposed to scentisem. disposed to scepticism.

The writer has gathered together in this work an enormous mass of new material which from its production in small magazines, local histories, proceedings of societies, and the works of specialists, is naturally inaccessible ties, and the works of specialists, is naturally maccession to the great majority of English and American readers. The author has endeavored, and, we think succeeded, in treating the subject impartially, systematically keeping down fine writing and over-elaborate description—blemishes which disfigure the works on this subject by all French writers—with the exception, perhaps, of Mignet. French writers—with the exception, perhaps, of Mignet. Not the least interesting portion of the first volume is the preface, in which the author gives considerable space to the books which have been written on this epoch, and an estimate of their authors. The first volume ends with the flight of the king to Varennes, the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly, and a chapter on the provinces and the colonies of France in 1900 and 1791. The second volume, which will bring the subject down to the death of Robespierre, will be published next summer, and the third volume, completing it down to the end of the Directory and the assumption of power by Bonaparte, next winter. cl., $1.50.

Scene is laid in Maryland and around Washington. This historical novel opens in October, 1859, just before John Brown's raid. The details of that expedition are given, and the death of John Brown vividly described. The election of President Lincoln, the civil war, the murder of Lincoln, the death of John Wilkes Booth, the trial of Mrs. Surratt, and all the leading events which led to and followed the emancipation of the slaves, have been cleverly used to make a story of great merit. Katy of Catoctin is a young, innocent girl, a descendant of the Pennsylvania Dutch, who becomes engaged to the hero after very short acquaintance and remains faithful to him throughout his troublous career. In the descriptions of life among the Tunkers, of natural scenery, and in the life among the Tunkers, of natural scenery, and in the study of the characters of John Brown and John Wilkes Booth, Mr. Townsend shows his great versatility and strong English to great advantage. Quotations from the press of those days are skilfully worked into the plot.

The story of the draft riot of 1863, in New York City, has probably never before been adequately told. The difficulties in the way of obtaining data for a trustworthy record have been very great. The author of this volume laboriously sifted the press reports for all material contained in them that was worth preserving. He also had access to the telegraph books of the Police Department, and has carefully examined the hundreds of despatches sent and received during the riot. Many of those have been quoted in full as a part of the record or as illustrating it. He has had help, too, from veteran members of the police force and city officials of the time, by officers of the volunteer and militia forces who were engaged in the struggle, and by citizens who were eyewithecases of of the volunteer and militia forces who were engaged in the struggle, and by citizens who were eyewitnesses of the events narrated. The author was then in the city, serving as a volunteer during the first two days of the riot, thereby obtaining vivid impressions which better prepared him for the present work. The book tells the whole story of those dreadful days of riot and assassination in a vivid, graphic way, making no statement that is not authentic.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Atlantic Monthly for December, issued to-day, has a supplement containing the oration by James Russell Lowell, and the poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes, on the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Harvard College, revised and corrected by the authors.

The Nineteenth Century for October (Leonard Scott Pub. Co.) has two able articles on "What Girls Read," by Edward G. Salmon, and "Disease in Fiction," by Dr. Nestor Tirard, which tells about the various chronic and other complaints from which the characters in well-known novels have suffered.

The Earth is a new weekly, started by The Earth Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, with a view of giving a glimpse of religion, politics, finance, and art as seen by the inhabitants of all the leading countries of the world. The first number devotes much space to the history of the Bartholdi Statue and a description of its unveiling. The publishers announce that they have purchased the plant of the Day-Star, Philadelphia, and will fill out the unexpired term of subscribers to that sheet. The paper will run sixteen pages folio, but even then it will require good journalism to condense the affairs of a week throughout the earth into that generous allowance of space.

Our Young Men is a new monthly magazine of interesting and instructive literature, devoted to the welfare of young men, edited and published by G. F. Wright, Minneapolis, Minn. Special attention will be paid to all items of news relating to the workings of Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the United States. About five years ago a magazine was issued called Our Young Men, under the auspices of the Christian Associations of Minnesota. After ten months the publication office was destroyed by fire, and the magazine was discontinued. It is not now issued as the organ of the Christian Association. The motto of the paper is in the words of John B. Gough: "Young man, make your record clean."

THE Youth's Companion, always lavish in its provision of good, interesting, instructive reading for young people, has again made arrangements to make its next volume fully as good, if not better, than its last. W. D. Howells will tell the story of a sensitive, poetic boy in a Western log-cabin; the Marquis of Lorne will write of "The Wonders of the Cascapediac" and the Princess Louise will make the story attractive with drawings; the money received for the articles will be used to help poor English and Scotch families to emigrate to Canada; Prof. Huxley has written "A Study in the Evolution of Housebuilding;" Taine has written a charming essay on "English Literature;" and three serials have been secured in the prize competition, to be called "Blind Brother," "Dollikins and the Miser," and "Bet and her Family." Besides all this, Francis Parkman, Admiral David Porter, Edward Everett Hale, and Prof. William Mathews will write of things dear to boyish hearts and instructive to youthful brains.

Scribner's Magasine, of which the first number will be issued on the 15th of December next, and all succeeding numbers on the first of the month of which they bear date, will be in the widest sense a magazine of general literature; and its main purpose will be to bring together, not only good reading, but literature of lasting value. Each number will be fully illustrated, and in a manner to be in the best sense illustrative of the text, and it is hoped the artistic side of the magazine will represent as good-spirited, sincere, and original work as there is in the field. The un-published "Letters of Thackeray," recently discovered, will be printed during the first year, with facsimiles from unpublished drawings; and interesting historical matter, such as Ex-Minister Washburne's "Reminiscences of the Siege and Commune of Paris;" "Glimpses of the Diaries of Gouverneur Morris;" and "Early New York and New England Society," as it appeared to a girl who was prominent in it seventy-five years ago. In fiction there will be novels by Harold Frederick, Robert Louis Stevenson, and J. S. of Dale (F. J. Stimson). The new magazine will also make a feature of short stories, and will represent the best strength of American writers in this very difficult field of fiction. Joel Chandler Harris, T. A. Janvier, Miss Jewett, Octave Thanet, Miss Margaret Crosby, and H. H. Boyeson will have stories in the earlier numbers. Special subjects will also receive exhaustive treatment at the hands of specialists of reputation. Papers on literary topics and criticism will be contributed in a form which will give the discussion of the subjects freshness, interest, and value. Books will be discussed upon general lines rather than through brief book notices. The poetical contributions to the magazine will be of a very high order of merit. It goes without saying that paper, type, and print will be worthy of the publishers, who promise a really handsome magazine.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 13, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenence and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE POSTAGE ON BOOKS.

THE history of what is known as the "secondclass" postal rate forms a curious and interesting chapter in post-office annals and postal progress. In the early days of our post-office, when newspapers were few and far between, and the people not very many and far apart, the fathers of the republic saw the necessity of binding the people together by diffusing information, just as in the days of the war our own generation found it necessary to tie together the Atlantic and Pacific coasts by the Pacific Railway. It was this feeling, undoubtedly, which led to the provision that certain classes of newspapers should circulate free within the county of their publication and of other provisions which treated the newspapers with great liberality. The old arrangements as to other periodical matter were, however, confusing and even conflicting. They, as a rule, required complicated accounts either at the office of publication or at the post-office, and it was an enormous improvement when the news system, permiting newspapers to be mailed in bulk from the office of publication at the prepaid rate of two cents per pound, went in operation. This was a long step forward in postal reform. Books still remained at the rate of eight cents per pound, to which rate, however, they have been gradually reduced from a much higher schedule.

When the cheap quartos were first started there was much question among the post-office authorities whether or not they could fairly be called periodicals. The matter was discussed at the conference of publishers and others interested in postal reform, with the postal officials at the

New York post-office in 1878, and there was much division within the book-publishing trade on the subject. To bring these publications within the letter of the law a date was given to them and it was announced that a certain number would be published each month or week. After considerable controversy it was decided that books so published should be admitted as periodicals at the second-class rate of two cents per pound, while bound books and those in paper, irregularly issued, were left at eight cents per pound.

The second-class rate, we believe, fairly covered, or nearly covered, the expense of this class of matter. The old reasons for accommodating the newspaper press had in a measure gone by, since it was no longer difficult in any part of the United States for the people to get reading matter and to obtain that knowledge of what was going on in other parts of the country so vitally necessary to make the people really one nation. But the newspaper press was not satisfied with the reduction, and a feeling in favor of what may be called a one-unit rate, which gave penny-postage in England, and as near as we could come to the unit rate for letters, two-cent postage for letters here, aided in bringing the rate for second-class matter down toone cent per pound. The business is now done at a considerable loss, but it has been the general feeling in this country that the post-office was to be a source of convenience to the people rather than of revenue to the government, and the deficit has not been so large as to make itself noticeably felt.

It was natural enough that publishers of books which had not the advantage of second-class rates should endeavor to fall in line and get the advantage of the reduction. This probably stimulated the supply of cheap libraries, and it gave opportunity also for paper novels better made than the cheap libraries, such as Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s series, to obtain the benefit of the rate by monthly publication and by formal entry as second-class matter. By this time the post-office department had given up its old tendencies to technical rulings and made liberal construction of the laws.

The latest movement in the direction of cheap postage is for the extension of the second-class rate to bound books. A correspondent in the Evening Post last July suggested that incorporated circulating libraries, such for example as the Mercantile, of New York, should be allowed to send out their books and to receive them again through the mails as second-class matter for one cent a pound, and made an interesting argument in favor of the proposition. The question came up at the conference of the American Library Association at Milwaukee this year, and the following series of resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, the Congress of the United States provides by law for the carrying of newspapers and periodicals, from the office of publication, as second-class matter, at one cent per pound, for the purpose of more widely diffusing knowledge and increasing intelligence; and

Whereas, the distribution of books through the mails at the same rate of postage would tend, in a still greater degree, to the cultivation of the people; therefore

Resolved, That this Association, representing the libraries of the country, would earnestly recommend such legislation by Congress as shall enable libraries to distribute books as second-class matter.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to secure such legislation.

—Messrs. Wm. F. Poole, A. R. Spofford, M. Chamberlain, W. T. Peoples, F. M. Crunden being appointed.

In the course of the discussion a query from the "question box" was read to the following effect: "Would not the system of reduced postage on library books work the destruction of the smaller libraries? Would it not destroy the local pride which is so great a stimulus in the maintenance of these?" To which one librarian answered that such a system would help libraries in small towns which desired to use books which they could get from city libraries, but could by no means furnish themselves. The query embodies probably the view of the case which a large number of smaller booksellers would take, and the similar answer might be made in their behalf that they could thus get their books cheaper from the publisher. If the rate should be extended to libraries there would doubtless be a pressure from the trade to make its provisions general-a proposition which would be very likely to meet with favor on the part of publishers as such, and to be opposed by booksellers as such on the ground that it would be another move against the existence of book-stores as centres of literary distribution in the smaller places. A great publisher once said that the book-trade was essentially a business of solicitation, and while that solicitation is now largely carried on by means of newspaper advertising directly from the publishers themselves, the distributing agency of the smaller retailers is a feature of the system which can scarcely be dispensed with safely. The subject is one well worth the attention of the trade, and we should be glad to hear what our readers have to say on the subject.

Objection to Wire Bookbinding.—A correspondent of the London Publishers' Circular, writing from Bombay, says: "Will you allow me through your columns to point out a serious objection to using wire for binding of books intended for use in all parts of the world? In Bombay, the result is that after the first monsoon there is a stain of ironmould, after the second or third one is fortunate if the leaves of a well-used book do not come out altogether. I have a book by my side in which this has taken place. Over the greater part of India, and in other moist and tropical climates, it would be the same. I hope publishers will kindly take this into consideration."

FIFTY YEARS OF ENGLISH PUBLISHING
THE SEMI-CENTENARY OF THE LONDOS
PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR.

THE London Publishers' Circular, in entering upon its jubilee year, after forty-nine years of hard and most excellent work in behalf of the English book trade, points out in the following retrospect a few of the important events and changes that the Circular has witnessed:

Our regular readers may not require to be reminded of the steps which were taken for the institution of the Circular. In No. 1000, published on May 16, 1879, the late Mr Sampson Low, the original editor, took occasion to give a full account of its origin; and very recently, or the lamented death of that gentleman, a familiar and facile pen recapitulated the story of Mr. Low's long connection with the trade and its organ. The death of Mr. Low was shortly followed by that of his old friend, Mr. R. B. Seeley, the last representative of the trade committee which founded the Publishers' Circular. That committee, as is tolerably well known, consisted of the following members: John Murray, John Rivington, William Longman, R. B. Seeley, Robert Baldwin, W. Pickering, Thomas Tegg, W. Ball, Samuel Holdsworth, L. F. De Porquet, James Nisbet, Joseph Ridgeway, G. B. Whittaker, and Charles Tilt.

Some of the houses that were familiar fifty years ago are to-day, as they were then, distinguished by a long and honored hereditary connection with publishing. On the other hand, not a few names which at that time were well known are now vanishing even from the memory of the older members of the trade; while to the rising generation they are familiar only on the titlepages of volumes that have stood firm against the rushing torrent of ephemera. Readers as well as business men of a generation ago are likely to miss such names as those of Henry Colburn, Saunders & Otley, Charles Tilt, Charles Knight & Co., Edward Moxon, Thomas Tegg & Son, J. & W. Boone, John W. Parker, James Fraser (the original publisher of Fraser's Magazine⁴). William Pickering, and other publishers who helped to bring the literary wealth of the time before the public fifty years ago. But, although they have disappeared nominally, the influence of their judgment and the labor of their lives still survive. so that their productions, renovated to suit modern requirements, continue to enlighten or entertain the reading public of to-day. New firms, too, have sprung into existence, and their success, more particularly in the far-reaching dissemination of cheap books, is one of the most significant testimonies to the reality of the intellectual animation which now energizes the national life. One conspicuous instance readily comes to mind. It was in 1836 that John Cassell, the founder of

^{*} In Mr. Montagu's recently published edition of Maginn's "Miscellanies" a humorous story is told about the origin of this magazine. It appears that the name chosen was due to the first editor, Hugh Fraser, and not to the publisher, James Fraser.

[†] In a subsequent issue of the Circular the following letter by Mr. J. T. Crafter, of London, was printed, giving additional information concerning John Cassell:

In 1847 he started the Testotal Times (he had stumped the country as a temperance advocate), the success of which determined him to enlarge his publishing operations, and he secured premises at 335 Strand, from whence in 1848 he issued the Standard of Freedom, a weekly newspaper advocating the welfare of the masses. It was he great house on Ludgate Hill, came to Lonon; but fourteen years elapsed before he began, n company with G. W. Petter and T. D. Galpin, o publish the Working Man's Friend, which inugurated his beneficent literary operations. Cheap books, however, were first issued much arlier than 1850. Their novelty dates from :827, when Constable's Miscellany and the producions of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge were thought marvels of moderation Marvels became miracles, however, when in 1832 such works as the Penny Magazine, Chambers's Edinburgh Journal, the Family Library, the Penny Cyclopadia, etc., were started. Mention should also be made here of the rich libraries of Henry G. Bohn, which have done so much toward diffusing the love of learning; enabling all classes to study the most genuine works of history, classics, science, philology, ecclesiasticism, and archæology. These united libraries amounted to over 700 volumes, all of which were produced with the truest care of earnest scholarship.

The production of literature at a cheap price is therefore the great material indication of the advance of letters during the past half century. In the social history of the country there can be no chapter more striking in its importance.

If we pass from the subject of publishers who represent the intermediate relations between the public and the author, to a brief consideration of the writers who have been or have come before the public during the past fifty years, it is not a little surprising to note the number who have shown that they well deserve their niches in the Temple of Fame. We say surprising advisedly, because it is far from uncommon in these days to hear depreciatory estimates of the worth of contemporary literary talent in England; notwith-standing the patent fact that the Victorian age is second only to two others in the history of English thought; we refer to the Elizabethan and the Augustan ages.

When the youthful Princess Victoria was called to the throne in 1837, the literature of England was undergoing a notable change. During the preceding reigns poetry had awakened an interest so fervid as to be unexampled in any previous era. It is now difficult to imagine the passionate and universal excitement which greeted the appearance of new poems by Byron, Moore, Scott, and Campbell. Less loud, perhaps, but still intense in small and devoted circles were the echoes of admiration which arose at the advent of the works of Wordsworth, Southey, Shelley, and Keats. Towards the close of the fourth decade of the century this enthusiasm seems to have been passing away. Prose had then supplanted verse. In the branch of imaginative prose the Waverley Novels had already electrified the world. The last of the series-thought, however, by the public to have a revolutionary title, and failed to secure a permanent success. Then came a succession of popular works, among others the "Working Man's Friend," the "Illustrated Exhibitor," 1851, the Magasine of Art, a popular cheap library, the Popular Educator, and many other periodicals, all tending to the elevation of the people.

In 1852, in consequence of the extending nature of his operations, he removed to larger premises in La Belle Sauvage Yard. In 1853, Cassell's Family Paper issued from his press, and had an enormous sale. Up to this time, and for a year or two afterwards, he was alone. It was not until 1853 that Messrs. Petter and Galpin became associated with him, and the accession of these gentlemen and their great capacity and enterprise have caused the concern to continually grow since, until it has attained its present gigantic proportions.

"Count Robert of Paris and Castle Dangerous" -was published in 1831.

Unquestionably Scott's greatest successor, and the first in the Victorian age to gain high distinction in the field of fiction, was Charles Dickens, who began to issue the celebrated "Pickwick Papers" in March, 1836, shortly after the publica-tion of the "Sketches by Boz." The literary career of Thackeray, who is destined to hold the position of the greatest novelist of the period, began earlier; but his splendid fame was first founded on the institution of Punch, in 1841. Marryat opened his career in fiction by publishing "The Naval Officer' in 1829. In historical and chivalrous romance the age boasts of such powerful writers as G. P. R. James, Bulwer Lytton, and William Harrison Ainsworth. Wilkie Collins came before the public in 1848 as the author of a life of his father; his earliest novel, "Antonina; or, the fall of Rome, appeared in 1853. In the latter year, too, that voluminous writer and brilliant master of fiction, Charles Reade, gave to the public his first notable work "Peg Woffington." Approaching to present times we have only to mention the names Anthony Trollope, William Black, R. D. Blackmore, and George Meredith, as giant exemplars of the art. The greatest lady novelists of the present age are assuredly Charlotte Brontë and "George Eliot," who yield to no one in their marvellous conceptions of nature and vivid pictures of life. At an earlier period flourished those delightful writers Mrs. Gore and Mrs. Frances Trollope. Happily we still have amongst us Mrs. Oliphant, Miss Mulock, Miss Braddon, Louise de la Ramé, and other gifted feminine novelists, who, in widely diversified fashions, have shown with what fascination their fertility of fancy could be made manifest by the apt use of the finely expressive English tongue.

RANKE'S POSTHUMOUS WORKS.

From the N. Y. Tribune.

THE publication of the posthumous works of the late Leopold von Ranke is now indefinitely postponed. Dr. Wiedermann, his faithful secretary, has succumbed to the strain and lost his reason. This is a grievous loss, for Wiedermann was better versed in the Professor's plans, ideas, and hopes than any living scholar. Wiedermann was a great favorite with the historian, and had become through unbroken intercourse his "alter "The History of the World," upon the completion of which he was working, is simply an elaboration of the lectures which Ranke delivered during his long professorship at the university. Ranke's immense library-how many volumes no one knows-may possibly come to Amèrica. A well-known antiquarian is in correspondence with the heirs in regard to its purchase for an American institution. Ranke's "Hand Library," as it is called, numbered 8000 volumes, but the garret of the old mansion contains four or five times as many scattered about promiscu-ously on the floor. The motley mass is appalling, yet Ranke knew the place of each book and required like knowledge from his assistant. The effort to please his master laid the seed of the terrible disease in poor Wiedermann, which has culminated in the clouded intellect, and added another to the list of martyrs to science.

"COPYRIGHT: ITS LAW AND LITERATURE."*

From The Critic, Nov. 6.

This volume is designed not so much to present any new arguments upon a well-worn and pretty thoroughly-discussed question, as to furnish a convenient manual upon all matters pertaining to the subject. The nature and origin of copyright is explained; its history in England and in this country is sketched, and the development of statutory development of the right of authors shown; the legal enactments of other nations are summarized; information is given as to what can be copyrighted, by whom and how; needed changes in the system are set forth; and, finally, a view is taken of the present status of international copyright in Europe and America. Appended to the first part of the volume are the copyright laws of the United States and of Great Britain.

Mr. Bowker's clear and impartial presentation of the subject in its historical and legal aspects must go far toward enlightening the reading public in regard to a matter which, once very plain, has been needlessly muddled. To the unsophisticated mind it would seem one of the simplest and most natural things in the world, that the person who has conferred a benefit upon humanity-whether by writing a book or inventing a plough—has a certain ownership in the fruit of his genius and a right to profit therefrom. And it would also seem quite as clear that political boundaries should not affect that right, but that, wherever his works are sufficiently valued to find users, his claims should be acknowledged. Yet this apparently simple question has been so manipulated by law-makers, political economists, re-formers, and other quibblers, and has been found or made—to involve so many abstruse points, that it is now a marvellous tangle; not so puzzling, perhaps, as to justify application to the oftinvoked "Philadelphia lawyer," but still very confusing to the "average reader." Thanks to Mr. Bowker's excellent compend, we have at last an intelligible statement of the whole subject, freed from all mystification, sophistry, and special pleading. Except in one or two places, the author is careful not to advance his personal opinions, being concerned rather to give a comprehensive and comprehensible summary of the case, than to play the part of advocate. But in case, than to play the part of advocate. speaking of the unaccountable indisposition of our country to put itself on an equality with other civilized peoples in regard to international copyright, he cannot refrain from calling it "a national disgrace which should be blotted out." Yet even in this connection he does not omit to state, with full force, the objections usually urged against the measure.

An interesting feature of the volume is the memorial to Congress of 144 American authors—whose signatures are here given in facsimile—asking for the passage of an international copyright law. The date of this document is not appended, nor is any allusion made to it in the chapter to which one would naturally turn for information. The autographs afford an entertaining study, and those who fancy some relation between chirography and character here find both confirmation and disproof of their theories. The latter half of this multum-in-parvo volume contains an extensive bibliography of the subject. filling 60 pages, and embracing some 2500 tries. This is a remarkable piece of work, and the later required in its production must have been immense. It includes not merely English and American books, but those in foreign languages as well; and not only books, but also articles in magazines and newspapers. It represents the tedious toil and painstaking research of years, and will be of incalculable service to one who wishes to make a thorough study of this vexed question. Mr. Solberg evidently has a "gift" for bibliography, and may well felicitate himself upon the excellence of his work, and its next typographical dress.

ENDOWED LITERATURE.

From the British and Colonial Printer and Statiener.

In these days of free trade and fair trade, when the reasons, good, bad, and indifferent, on which the whole fabric of society rests, and on which trade relations are carried on, are everywhere questioned, it may not be amiss to consider how far and in what degree the endowment of faerature, qua literature, can be justified or justifable.

Speaking broadly, then, it may be stated as a principal feature in our case, that the endowment of literature is generally connected with some worthy who held very strong and pronounced views on some points of morality, philosophy, or religion; and thought his views so vital to society, so potent in their influence, that, for the sake of posterity, he was bound to further them when he was no longer here.

"Our little systems have their day;
They have their day, and cease to be," sings Lord Tennyson; and in this matter a somewhat melancholy feeling arises when we look into facts.

Funds, for example, exist, we believe, for the gratuitous or reduced production of the works of Jeremy Bentham, of Jacob Boehme, and of Emanuel Swedenborg.

Unitarianism also has its fund for the distribution of certain literature.

The question, therefore, at once arises, Are these living, potent factors in the moral and religious philosophy of our time? and to this, we think, there can be only one answer, and that of a negative character.

The endowment of literature, in a spasmodic attempt to give life to those whom the world has neither heard nor heeded, has utterly failed.

None of the schools of thought whose leaders are named above have now vital influence, while if Unitarianism be, as it undoubtedly is, on the increase, it will be found on inquiry that its recent extension is in denominations outside itself; and therefore that the new movement, though kindred in sympathy and feeling, is self-originating and not the seed of the old Unitarian fathers.

The real reason for this ghastly want of success is the need of each movement appealing to, and beating in harmony with, the moral and religious necessities of each successive generation, and more greater proof can be found as to this nor more important conclusions drawn, than from the study of the catalogues and prices of our second-hand booksellers. Where are the volumes that were really popular with the Puritan forefathers of the seventeenth century? The reply is at once—Utterly out of date: the minister and the scholar may study them, but no publisher thinks f reprinting them for popular use, nor would the ublic buy them if he did. Fifty years back, Howe,)wen, Charnock, Bates, and Flavell were still read n some of their smaller works; now we do not elieve there is a single small treatise of theirs in he market. On the other hand, Andrews, Cosin, iherlock, Ken, and others who at that date were omewhat under a cloud are to be had in many orms.

It is the old story of Dame Partington and her nop: in theology and philosophy, new schools nust arise and reactions set in; and any one who uttempts to fix the great pendulum of human hought, at his own particular will and pleasure, will become a nuisance, make himself ridiculous, and have his labor for his pains. The Dead Hand in literature, specially in theological and religious literature, is an immoral and monstrous absurdity.

Some of the more thoughtful perceived this, and therefore founded lectureships or prizes for essays, which, delivered from time to time, should within fixed limits meet the wants and desires of present day men and women, and in every case where this has been done the result has been an unmixed good. The "Boyle Lectures," the "Bampton Lectures," the "Hulsean Lectures," the "Hibbert Trust" may be mentioned as prominent examples; in each case, the design was the same as that of those who considered Boehme and Swedenborg the prophets of the coming generations; but in every case the founders had the force of mind to see that "wisdom would not die with them," that other needs unfelt by them, that other thoughts in which they would have no share, that other duties to which they would never be called, that other doubts with which they should never combat, must, in the very nature of things, arise; and they believed, and left their money in that belief, that these would successfully be met in coming generations as in the past. With regard to funds left for the gratuitous distribution of tracts we need not deal; useful as they may be, and praiseworthy as the motive of the testators undoubtedly is, tracts can hardly be called liter-

The result then of our inquiry is that endowment stereotyped to a passing phase has never effected the design of the founders; that where "ample room and verge enough" has been left for the play of human thought, the result in every case, with whatever failing, has left permanent mark; and therefore we now see the lines laid down for further development. The lines laid down for further development. next question is: Would the endowment of literature, as literature in a general way, be of value to the English public? in other words—should a Rothschild or a Baring give a fund for the cheaper production of Shakespeare or Milton, of Bacon or Hooker, would the result be of value? And here, we say, decidedly not: it would handicap our publishers, it would demoralize our literary students in the shape of pauper-relief: and competition is now so keen, and our publishers have really done so well, that we do not in any way believe anything could be done of the slightest value. In our private book clubs, many presents are made by the richer members of extra issues; can our richer friends do nothing in this way? We think they can and suggest that copyrights might be purchased and presented to the public. Tennyson and Browning might then in their better work be seen in the laborer's home; George Eliot be no stranger, and Mr. Froude a welcome guest. Authors, publishers, and public would alike be satisfied; and the glow which they tell us ever accompanies a virtuous action would fill the worthy donor's heart. This suggestion may perhaps some day bear fruit.

A MÆCENAS OF PERIODICALS.

LAWSON VALENTINE, of New York, the owner of Houghton farm, near Cornwall, on the Hudson, we learn from the Paper World, has become associated with Editor Libby in the publication of the American Garden at Greenfield, Mass. Mr. Valentine's penchant for investing in journalistic property has been shown in various ways. He entered a few years ago the firm of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and is therefore one of the principal owners of the Atlantic Monthly. Not satisfied with this venture he added to his investments by buying the controlling share of the Christian Union and backing Dr. Abbott against some of the more conservative shareholders. Mr. Valentine had established a trade magazine in New York, simply to advertise his business, and the venture proving a business success, he was ambitious to lend agriculture a helping hand in the same fashion. He selected for an editor, therefore, E. H. Libby, who had been engaged in agricultural newspaper ventures at Amherst, and at Boston, and started about the year 1878 a weekly paper in New York, called the Country Home. Orange Judd, of the American Agriculturist, recognizing the strength of the new rival, induced Mr. Valentine and his young editor to transfer their forces and money to his publication. Mr. Libby became editor, and Mr. Valentine a large stock-holder; the latter still retains his interest. Mr. Libby, however, wanted to edit a different style of a periodical, and after various experiences, he has got under way in Greenfield.

Composition for Removing Ink.—A newly patented composition for the removal and erasure of writing inks or writing fluids from paper. cloth, and all other substances which writing fluids or inks may come in contact with, without injury to the paper or other substance, consists of the following ingredients, viz.: Four quarts of water, four ounces of citric acid, twelve to sixteen ounces of strong solution of borax, and threequarters of a pound of chloride of lime. In preparing the composition two quarts of water which has been previously boiled and cooled are taken. Four ounces of citric acid are added, and after the acid has been dissolved six to eight ounces of a strong, strained solution of borax are added, after which the whole may be put in a bottle or suitable receptacle. Two quarts of water which has been previously boiled and cooled are taken, adding thereto three-quarters of a pound of chloride of lime. The whole is well shaken and left to stand from four to six days, after which it is strained, and then from six to eight ounces of strong solution of borax are added, and the whole is placed in a separate bettle. When it is desired to remove ink from paper, cloth, or other absorbent substance the composition in bottle No. 1 is applied so as to thoroughly saturate the place occupied by the ink, a blotter being used to absorb all waste moisture. The composition in the second bottle is then applied. By the combined use of the two fluids thus described writing inks or other writing fluids will be immediately dissolved and removed from paper, so that the latter may be again written on.—Printing and Paper Trades Tournal.

IMPERFECT BOOKS.

MR. C. A. CLAPP, of E. P. Dutton & Co., in conversation with a Tribune reporter, referring to books in which pages were missing or signatures transposed, said: "As a rule the public does not know or readily discover such things. Not long ago the American News Company handled a re-print of Dickens' "Pickwick Papers," in which there was inserted by mistake an entire 'signature' from Nicholas Nickleby. This was a striking error, yet only ten copies out of about a thousand that were sold were returned to the News Company." These were cheap books and the buyers may have thought it not worth while to chase after the company for twenty cents, but another consideration may have been at the bottom of the small percentage of the damaged books The average American reader jumps returned. through a book instead of reading it, and it is no doubt true that many of the purchasers of this edition of "Pickwick Papers" glanced hastily through the pages from "Nicholas Nickleby" without discovering the difference.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"ELIAS BACHARACH" is the name of Sidney Luska's forthcoming novel.

REV. JOHN B. HILL, business manager of the San Francisco Methodist Book Depository, is dead.

Dr. HUNT and Mr. J. E. Stevens, of the Methodist Book Concern, left the city on the 8th for a four weeks' stay on the Pacific coast.

CHARLES A. BATES, Indianapolis, reports that "The Chamber Over the Gate" is now in its second edition, and arrangements are being made to put a third on the press in a few days.

The Princeton Review suggests an appropriate punishment for those authors and publishers who issue a book without an index: "They should be compelled to spend two or three years at hard labor in a library without a catalogue, looking up references in unindexed books." So say we all of us

C. N. CASPAR, Milwaukee, will issue shortly a supplement to the "Directory of Antiquarian Booksellers and Dealers in Second-hand Books of the U. S.," comprising all additions, corrections, and alterations up to date. It will be furnished free of charge to all subscribers of the original work.

A. S. Barnes & Co. have completed an édition de luxe of great interest and beauty of Lossing's "History of New York City," which was projected some years ago by George E. Perine, and upon nearing completion abandoned on account of the death of Mr. Perine. It will be limited to 250 sets, and issued in folios at $125 for each set.

THE "Domesday Book" celebration was marked by a grand public exhibition of an unprecedented collection of the originals of regal and monastic books and manuscripts of the Norman period. The anniversary will be commemorated by the publication of a great mass of novel archæological matter relating to the "Domesday Book" and the Conquest.

THE London Daily News for October 25th has a humorous leading article on the report of the evidence produced before the United States Senate Committee on International Copyright. The article says the report is full of American human, and is extremely interesting to all concerned a books, but that "beyond the harmless diversion its pages may afford, the English people are sot likely to get much good out of it at present."

MR. Gosse and Mr. John Churton Collins continue their animated warfare through the English newspapers; and the St. James's Gazette thus sums up the case:

John Churton Collins loudly thunders. That Gosse's book is full of blunders: And Gosse, as plainly as he can, Hints Collins is no gentleman.

The world, amused, beholds the two And thinks both charges nearly true."

MR. GEORGE W. CABLE, it is reported, is devoting all his time to the compilation of a collection of "True Stories of Louisiana," a series of tales by the Comtesse Françoise Bossier, in whom the Southern novelist has found a great Creok writer. The stories were found by the grand-daughter of the Comtesse Bossier among a mass of the latter's papers, and she has transferred them to Mr. Cable, who is enthusiastic over the literary treasures that have unexpectedly faller into his possession.

THE next volume of the "Encylopædia Britannica," which will get down as far as "Sia," will contain an article upon Shakespeare; by the editor, Thomas Spencer Baynes, LL.D., with a bibliography supplied by Mr. H. R. Tedder. Mr. Matthew Arnold writes upon Sainte-Beuve, Mr. Rossetti on Shelley, Professor Minto on Sir Walter Scott, and Mr. Saintsbury on Rousseas. Among the art articles is the "Rubens" of M. Hymans, Pr ofessor Middleton contributing an article on "Schools of Painting," Russia is treated of by Prince Kropotkine and Mr. Morfill.

THE GROLIER CLUB, 64 Madison Ave., N. Y. through its Committee on Publication, announces that the publication of the Lecture Series will begin with an edition of two hundred copies of Mr. Robert Hoe's Lecture on "Bookbinding as a Fine Art," which has been printed for the club in demy quarto form on Holland paper. One hundred and ninety copies will be offered to members of the club for subscription, until January 1, 1887. After that, we believe, the remaining copies will be offered to the public. The subscription price has been fixed at $7.50.

THE LITHOGRAPHER PUBLISHING Co., 12 Centre Street, N. Y., publishing weekly The American Lithographer and Printer, will shortly issue "A Directory of the Lithographic and Allied Trades," a volume containing all the information required by these trades. The object is to supply a medium through which dealers, etc., may have trustworthy knowledge as to all consumers, and through which also consumers will be provided with permanent information as to all reliable supply-houses, manufacturers, etc., established in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Central and South America.

IT is curious to note, in connection with the sketch given of Mr. Brentano in our last issue, that the two newsboys who were superseded by Mr. Brentano in front of the New York Hotel were Henry Miller and George T. Lorrigan. The former is now known as a prosperous bookseller, being one of the few remaining dealers in new and second-hand books on Nassau Street, and the other is now also prosperous and in the army—that is, he is a captain in the gallant Ninth (Fisk's pride) of the N. Y. S. N. G. Mr. Miller in mentioning the fact remarked that he does not ow feel as "sore" about the matter as he did hirty years ago.

THE BURROWS BROS. Co., Cleveland, O., have issued two blank-books for teachers, preared by M. S. Campbell, principal of the General High School of Cleveland. The one is entitled he " Economic School Register," which deserves ts name for two reasons—because its arrangement permits of great saving of time, and because, being condensed in form, it admits of a two years' entry for an ordinary school. It is bound in board covers, with removable insides and costs only seventy-five cents. The other book referred to is the "Économic Examination Record," also prepared by Mr. Campbell, a handy register which has all the merits of neatness and economy of time and price possessed by the preceding.

The Chamber Over the Gate.

BY MARGRET HOLMES.

12mo, 560 pages, Extra Cloth and Gold,

$2.00.

"The 'Chamber Over the Gate,' by Margret Holmes, is interesting from the beginning.

The writer's purpose and method are in harmony, and her work is decidedly strong."

Brooklyn Times.

-Brooklyn Times.

"Decidedly entertaining."—Commercial Gasette, Cincinnati.

"The narrative is bright, full of thought, bristling with life, and, while never dull, it often rises to the dramatic."—The Current, Chicago.

"It is a domestic, not a society story, and deals with certain social questions in a manner which shows that the author has thought deeply and felt deeply concerning them."—Trans-

"An exceedingly charming and well-told story. The characters well drawn, complete, and lifelike, and the story one which keeps the interest unflagging from preface to finis."

"The subject is thoroughly, intensely American: the book is right out of the soil, it is like a block of New England granite, or one of the big trees of California; it has large stature, reserve force, abundant play of power; its intellectual endowment is marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, absorbing."—Literary World, Boston.

SOME COMMENDATIONS.

"I have looked through the book with some care, and have laid it aside for careful study. I should say, as the result of this first examination, that it is the most satisfactory treatise on the subject that I have yet seen."—Prof. R. H. Thurston, Sibley College, Cornell University.

"From a hasty glance through (the book) I am convinced that it is a very thorough exposition of the subject, leaving nothing to be desired in regard to the theory of these Engines, and the results of practice, that is not found in this book."—Prof. W. P. TROWBRIDGE, School of Mines, Columbia College.

Beautiful Holiday Volumes,

With Phototype Illustrations.

The Book of the Tile Club.

HOLIDAY VOLUME, containing twenty-five full-page phototypes of paintings by members of The Tile Club of New York, with numerous illustrations in the text. With Sketch of the Club and descriptions of the Pictures, by F. HOPKINSON SMITH and EDWARD STRAHAN. Beautifully bound from designs by STANFORD WHITE. Folio, $25.00.

Many of the most eminent artists of the country are represented in it by some of their most successful works, and each artist has selected his own pictures. The artists represented are:—

BUNCE, GIFFORD, ABBEY, CHASE, FROST, Parsons, MAYNARD, DIELMAN, REINHART, VEDDER, ST. GAUDENS, MILLET, QUARTLEY, STANFORD WHITE, F. HOPKINSON SMITH. Boughton, WEIR. SARONY.

Well-Worn Roads of Spain, Holland, and Italy.

Traveled by a Painter in search of the Picturesque. Containing sixteen full-page Phototypes and many smaller pen and ink sketches. By F. HOPKINSON SMITH, author of "Old Lines in New Black and White," etc. With descriptive letter-press by the Artist. Tastefully bound. Folio, gilt top, $15.00.

Sixteen water-color drawings admirably reproduced in phototypes in different tints. These with the numerous pen-and-ink sketches and humorous descriptions, make a very attractive holiday book.

The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám.

Translated by Edward Fitzgerald. Illustrated by Elihu Vedder. New, smaller edition, with designs reproduced in phototype. Quarto, tastefully bound, $12.50.

A new edition of these remarkable designs reproduced in the same manner as before, only on a smaller scale, so that they may be afforded at a price which will bring them within the reach of a much larger number of art lovers.

Darley's Evangeline.

Sixteen Outline Illustrations to the Evangeline of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. By F. O. C. Darley. New and cheaper edition. Quarto, $7.50.

This edition is illustrated not with lithograph prints as heretofore, but with phototypes from Mr. Darley's original designs. The result is very gratifying; the illustrations are exact reproductions of the artist's drawings.

Old Lines in New Black and White.

Twelve Illustrations of Lines from the Poems of Holmes, Lowell, and Whittier, reproduced by the phototype process from designs in charcoal by F. HOPKINSON SMITH. Large-Paper Edition, in portfolio (measuring about 16 × 22 inches), with the illustrations printed on Japanese paper, mounted on heavy plate paper. Edition limited to one hundred copies. Folio, $25.00 net.

NEW EDITIONS NOW READY.

A SUPERB VOLUME.

ETCHING.

An Outline of its Technical Processes and its History, with some Remarks on Collections and Collecting. By S. R. Koehler. Illustrated by Thirty Plates by Old and Modern Etchers, and numerous Reproductions in the Text. I vol., large quarto, gilt top, $20.00; half morocco, gilt, $30.00; full morocco, gilt, $40.00. Edition de Luxe, 2 vols., 34 russia, per set, $100.00.

This volume is of special interest, as it is the first connected history of etching ever written. All the books on expraying hitherto published have treated it merely as a subordinate division of the general subject. It is very that illustrated, containing no less than one hundred and twenty-five specimens, thirty of which are etched plates by the and modern masters. The ninety-five examples in the text consist of phototypic reproductions of old etchings, illustrating the whole history of the art, from the beginning of the sixteenth century down to our own day, in Germany, the Netherlands, Italy, France, Spain, England, and America.

LIFE AND REMINISCENCES OF

GUSTAVE DORÉ.

By MME. BLANCHE ROOSEVELT.

Compiled from material supplied by his family and friends and from personal recollections, in one elegant octavo volume, with several hundred illustrations, many of which have never before been published. Gilt top, bevelled boards. In box, $7.50.

No pains or expense have been spared by the publishers to make this volume a fitting monument to the artist the story of whose brilliant career it tells. Mme. Roosevelt has been fortunate in her material, and has made a work that is readable from beginning to end.

The Wild Flowers of Colorado.

From Twenty-four Original Water-Color Sketches, drawn from Nature (with appropriate text). By EMMA HOMAN THAYER. The plates chromolithographed in the highest style of the art by Donaldson Bros. Bound in extra silk-finished cloth, full gilt, bevelled boards, and various colored inks. New style. $7.50.

"This magnificent work is in many respects the fixes thing of the kind ever published. It is printed throughout in a clear type, on heavy paper, and the plates are a perfect imitation of Whatman's water-color papers, and in point of execution and delicacy of coloring, has probably never been equalled."—Rocky Monatain Daily News.

"The most ambitious work of its kind ever published in America."-N. Y. Tribune.

Mrs. Browning's Love Sonnets.

Sonnets from the Portuguese. By ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. Illustrated by Ludwig Same-Ipsen. 1 vol., oblong folio (pages 13x16 inches), beautifully bound, gilt top, $15.00; in full call, $10.00.

"No woman ever before sang so nobly of the man whom she loved."—R. H. STODDARD.

"Never has the decorative art in publishing been carried out to any such extent as this. It is impossible to describe the exquisite art by which Mr. Ipsen has illustrated each sonnet, and yet made all blend in a unity of design."—LILIAN WHITISG, in Cleveland Herald.

"The great book of the year with this house, and and a volume unique and unapproachable in American art, is Ludvig Sandöe Ipsen's edition of Mrs. Browning's 'Sonnets from the Portuguese.' Tasmost noble of all modern love poems—if, indeed, it may not be called the most exquisite love poem ever written—has received from Mr. Ipsen a setting which is worthy of the verse, and praise could hardly go higher. He has taken each sonnet separately and enriched it with symbolical and ornamental designs of imaginative richness and fertility which are amazing; while still he has held the work well together as an artistic whole. It is necessary to see Mr. Ipsen's work to appreciate it; but it is safe to say that its publication puts him at the head of American decorators."—Arlo Bates, in The Providence Journal.

Stories of Art and Artists.

By CLARA ERSKINE CLEMENT. 1 vol., 8vo. Profusely illustrated and richly bound. In cloth, $4.00; in half parchment, $4.50.

This work, historical and descriptive, gives a complete résumé of the History of Art, with accounts of the various schools, and sketches and anecdotes of all the great artists, with portraits and reproductions of their works. The author is well known as a charming writer and an acknowledged authority on art criticism and history; and this biographical history is enriched with very beautiful engravings of the masterpieces of art, from ancient Greece to modern France.

Nature's Ballelnjah.

NE of the pleasantest episodes in recent book-making is the success as an all trator of Miss Irene E. Jerome, whose "One Year's Sketch-Book," is very late in 1884, proved so popular a favorite that it was reissed by year with increasing success. In the craze for illustration by the make new processes of reproduction which have developed of late year it is pleasant to see one line of book-making which stands by the off fashioned method of wood-engraving, though it requires vastly great outlay and consequent risk in the original production of an elaborative illustrated work. It is said that the original cost of Miss Jerome's favork was over $8000, and its success amply justified the publishing instituted the most off the publishing instituted work. book, which, under the title of "Nature's Hallelujah," delights the reader with pictures of bird's well as flower life. In unison with the title she has introduced pleasantly the idea of music in nature into the decorations, many of which consist of lettering on bars of music. Each page of her base is a study in itself for its ingenious grouping of pictures, decorations, and text, and the book appear perhaps to a wider circle of holiday buyers than almost any other issue of the year. Nothing nature seems to be beyond the scope of Miss Jerome's picturesque and delicate pencil. The comprises poems selected from the leading authors, beside a charming introduction written by artist-author herself. The book is a long folio, brilliantly bound, and is in every way worthy of a reputation which the author is making for herself. Besides her two large works she has done dainty little book, "The Message of the Bluebird," which will also be a favorite with holiday buye whose purse is not quite equal to the demands of the more costly books. The illustration on a opposite page gives only part of one of the long, broad pages of "Nature's Hallelujah," but so gests, nevertheless, the clever combinations which make Miss Jerome's pages so very fascination. The bits on this page, pretty as they are here, are even prettier in their appropriate places in the book. All her books are published by Messrs. Lee & Shepard.

A SONG.

From "She Stoops to Conquer." (Copyright, 1386, by Harper & Brothers.)

The Lay of the Last Minstrel.

E IGHTY years have passed since by the publication of "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" Walter Scott became at a bound the most popular author of his day. Scott came of an old Border family, the Scotts of Harden, an offshoot from the house of Buccleuch, which furnishes the hero for this melodious song of chivalry and romance. His childhood was passed for the most part on the very ground his marvellous word-painting brings before our eyes. Here the foundations of his mind were laid; and his early and delighted familiarity with the ballads and legends of the long years of border warfare floating over all that part of the country probably did more than any other influence to determine the sphere and manner of his future literary activity.

It seems rather uncalled for at the Christmas season of 1886 to tell the plot or speak of the characters of a work on which the critics of three generations have lavished their praise, from the careful essays of Jeffrey and Wilson down to the scholarly reviews of the leading essayists of to-day. All English-speaking readers know what Walter Scott made of "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." Our object is to tell our readers what Messrs. Ticknor & Co. have made of the rich material they have selected for their chief holiday publication. The volume is larger than "Marmion," "Lucile," and the successes of former seasons, and the size favors the display of the innumerable illustrations, which are printed on pages of a fine dead-finish, like old English hand-made paper. This paper was made expressly for the book, is remarkably firm and thick, and takes the impressions of the most delicate cuts with excellent effect.

The drawings are by W. St. John Harper, E. H. Garrett, F. Myrick, F. T. Merrill, and L. S. Ipsen, and are engraved by A. V. S. Anthony, John Andrew, H. E. Sylvester, H. W. Lyouns, and G. E. Johnson. The picture of "Fair Margaret" on the opposite page forms the frontispiece and is after a drawing of St. John Harper. Fair Margaret appears alone and with her lover on many pages of this handsome book, sketched by several of the artists, but nowhere does she seem quite so fair as when "she gazed upon the inner court."

The landscape scenes are reproductions of famous localities and are noticeably well done. Newark's tower, Haworth Castle, Branksome Turrets, Melrose, Liddesdale, the Eildon Hills. Yarrow's stream, Kelso Abbey, Roslin Castle, and many other beautiful and legend-haunted spots are scattered through the perfectly printed pages, and the head and tail pieces show originality and artistic taste.

The cover of the volume is emblazoned with the arms of the Duke of Buccleugh, Lord Branksome, and with the towers and battlements of a feudal fortalice. With full gilt edges and in a near box, it makes a handsome present in any of the many bindings the publishers have devised to meet the taste of purchasers of parlor-table books. It can be had in cloth, padded calf, tree calf, antique morocco, or crushed levant.

From " The Lay of the Last Minstrel." (Copyright, 1886, by Ticknor & Co.)

The season of Christmas, which to happy people means joy, gladoes, fun, frolic, friends, pleasant memories, and bright things coming, to others a suggestive of sad thoughts, past griefs, lonely hours, and "the days that The happy and the sad have some one who tries to think: What will please for

After the hours and days spent in thinking what to get and whether it will surely be liked, about half of the undecided, would-be givers come back to books, which offer the widest range of choice.

A beautiful book prepared for the season by the J. B. Lippincott Co. is "The Closing Scene," for which T. Buchanan Read furnishes the text and almost all our best artists vie with each other is furnishing illustrations.

The theme is sad, and at first glance seems out of tune for Christmas revelry. But the publishers have made a beautiful book.

We show the last design, literally the "closing scene" of the book, drawn by James B. Sword, and engraved by J. Tinkey. But before this last picture is reached the volume is filled with representations of American autumn scenes, which are acknowledged the world over to combine every element of beauty that can be put to use for illustration. Hamilton Gibson furnishes the head-pieces to the two pages of titles of illustrations and also the frontispiece of this elegant book. Bruce Crane and Edmund C. Garrett show their fine talent at landscape in:

- "Within his sober realm of leafless trees
 The russet year inhaled the dreamy air;"
- " The gray barns looking from their hazy hills."

and are no more."

Christmas?

" On slumbrous wings the vulture held his flight."

Pyle, Bruce Crane, Bolton Jones, and other well-known men give the closing year in all its signifcance of end and decay; and the same artists picture the "white-haired matron" who,

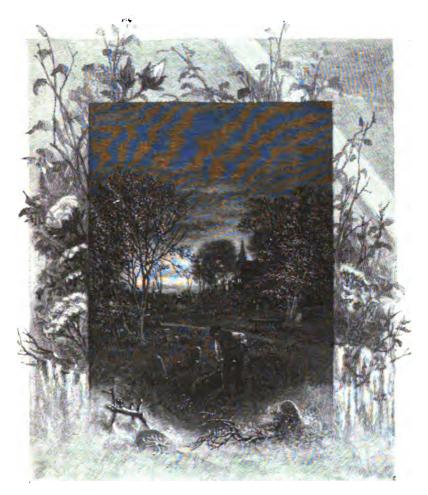

> "While yet her cheek was bright with bloom, Her country summoned, and she gave her all."

The pictures of the "white-haired matron," spinning, dying, and when

"Loving neighbors smoothed her careful shroud, While Death and Winter closed the autumn scene," show excellent figure-drawing and a fine feeling for the sentiment of the solemn text. The book is a large quarto printed on heavy paper, bound in gray cloth, with the title printed in silver, surrounded by handsome gilt scroll-work

The J. B. Lippincott Co., however, do not offer this as their leading book, but owing to its illustration by photogravure it was impracticable to show the splendid work which has been put into their chief publication, "The Book of American Figure-Painters."

Sonnets from the Portuguese.

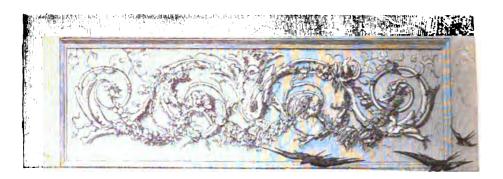

A FTER Elizabeth Barrett, at the height of her fame and in her thirty-fifth year, had published "Lady Geraldine's Courtship," Robert Browning began a correspondence with her as poet to poet, and soon after became her acknowledged lover. Owing to Miss Barrett's ill health, her father for many months refused his consent to her marriage. During this period the "Sonnets from the Portuguese" were written. The poetic fiction of presenting these sonnets as translations was immediately suspected, and now all the world knows that in these masterpieces of versification the poet laid bare her woman's heart, and confessed that the moment had come when love must be all in all to her. There are forty-four of these sonnets. In the opening ones the key-note is a solema wonder as the meaning of love comes as a revelation to her listening soul. Then every emotion,—doubt, jealousy, hope, happiness and peace—of which a pure, loving, mature woman's heart is capable, is worded with the trained art she now confesses can bring her no triumph so dear as to be all in all to the man who has won her heart.

The sonnet on the opposite page is one of the most beautiful and also one of the most characteristic.

It appears as the forty-second in the sumptuous oblong folio edition which Messrs. Ticknor & Co. have ready this season. Ludwig Sandöe Ipsen, the celebrated decorative artist, has for years made a labor of love of the illustrating of these sonnets, and some of his very best work appears in the emblematic ornamental borders encircling Mrs. Browning's definitions of the meaning of a woman's heart. The designs are delicate and of exquisite finish. The little figures in the elaborate scroll-work, the titles to the separate sonnets, and the ornamental lettering are harmoniously beautiful. Each of these titles is allowed a title-page, so to speak, in which the words "Forty-second Sonnet" or the like are bordered with a circular design corresponding with the larger frame of the sonnet which follows. The fact that no two of the compositions are at all alike becomes clear upon accurate examination, and adds greatly to the charm of the work and to the growing surprise at the originality of the artist.

All the publishers could do to show off the work of the artist whose services they were so fortunate as to obtain has been done to the smallest detail, and the result is one of the handsomest books of this unusually favored year. The book is bound in light-blue cloth with scroll decorations in gilt. This portrait of Mrs. Browning, which is taken from one of the title-pages, is generally conceded to be the most truthful that can be had.

American Art.

N extrest purpose, conscientiously carried out, is a valuable characteristic of "American Ant." one of Cassell & Co.'s leading holiday works. While prepared for the holiday season, it has a higher aim than mere amusement. Mr. S. R. Koehler, the editor of the work, and one of the best authorities in this country on art matters, planned the volume, with the design of illustrating the progress made in the various phases of creative art in this country during the last decade or two He spared himself no trouble in his efforts to make the volume representative. But a little research made but too evident to him, as he reluctantly acknowledges, that American art has developed be little except in the direction of painting-sculpture and architecture embracing few really American names. Hence his work, in spite of its general title, is chiefly representative of the work of our best American landscape, figure, and portrait painters. It is no less valuable and interesting, bowever, on this account, fully covering the field, both in its illustrations and reading-matter. The latter. from the pen of Mr. Koehler, is rich in information. Going back beyond the centennial year, is traces the influences that sent our young artists abroad and that formed the present school, so rich in fruits and promise. A running commentary on the plates points out their notable qualities and gives a slight history of the artists. The plates, twenty-five in number, and executed by the best American etchers and wood-engravers, are all reproductions of paintings specially selected from famous public and private collections. Among the most beautiful are the landscapes, for it seems as if our artists specially excel in depicting nature. The following pictures represent this class: "Morning on the St. Johns," by Thomas Moran; "Morning on the Marsh," by J. Francis Murphy: "Sunset," by George Inness; "Near the Coast," by R. Swain Gifford; "The Edge of the Swamp," by W. L. Pickerell; and "A Bouquet of Oaks," by Charles H. Miller. They all possess something deeper than the trees and skies and waters they represent—the sentiment, the poetic feeling, needing the en and heart of the true artist to distinguish and interpret.

Portraiture is represented by a likeness of General Charles Devens, painted by F. P. Vinton; "A Portrait of a Young Lady," by A. H. Thayer; and "At the Piano," by Frank Fowler. The last is a portrait of Mrs. Frank Fowler, herself a painter of repute. Mr. S. A. Schoff, the etcher of these three works, evinces exceptional skill and artistic feeling. The remaining plates are examples of still-life and decorative art, or purely fancy sketches. The illustration which we give on the opposite page, "Autumn," part of a decorative panel by E.-H. Blashfield, is a fine characteristic study. It is one of the best of this group, which includes "A Hot Bargain," by F. A. Bridgman; "The Angel of Sleep," by T. W. Dewing; "Good Morning," by Walter Shirlaw; "A Glass with the Squire," by Eastman Johnson; "A Spring Idyl," by F. S. Church; "The 'Longshoremen's Noon," by J. G. Brown; "Still Life," by Emil Carlsen; "A Difficult Question," by 1. M. Gaugengigl; "A Voice from the Cliffs," by Winslow Homer; and "The Pleiades," by Elihu Vedder.

The Land of Greece.

WITH the solitary exception of Palestine there is no country on the surface of the globe read and about which are gathered so many and such impressive associations as those that belong to Greece. Here, more than two thousand years ago, some of the loftiest and most said minds the world has ever seen were busied in the consideration of social and ethical problems with still engage the attention of mankind, and with regard to many of which the whole course of said quent investigation and speculation down to the present hour has been guided by the labors of these first inquirers.

The thoughts of Homer, Hesiod, Herodotus, Thucydides, Æschylus, Aristophanes, Soming Plato, Aristotle, Phidias, and Praxiteles exercise a more important and wider influence on the world to-day than in the age of their production. The geographical position of Greece was a important factor in the development of its civilization, and one reason for the rapid spread as wide influence of that civilization. Greece was literally the centre of the ancient world, the natural channel of communication between East and West, the recipient of the civilizing influences of the Orient, and an instrument shaped by the hand of nature for the dissemination of these influences.

Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons this year add one more to the long list of works about Green It is by Charles Henry Hanson, and is an endeavor to combine, with a description of the country and of its principal sites and ancient remains, a sketch of the events which made those place memorable—to localize, as it were, something of the vast mass of traditions and historic record associated with Hellas from a period long anterior to the birth of Christ down to the present day. The statements of historical facts are based chiefly on Grote and Thirlwall.

There are three excellent maps, one of modern Greece and two of ancient Greece, giving the old Hellenic names. Besides the se, forty-fourfull-page illustrations bring vividly to the mind of the reader the sites, landmarks, and buildings the author is describing. The illustrations which makes give have been reduced somewhat to come within the limits of our page.

The publishers have made a handsome book. It is bound in cloth, with title in gilt and design of ancient sculptures, vases, and friezes in black on terra-cotta background. The book is a large of tavo, printed in clear type on excellent paper. It is full-gilt and makes a showy Christmas gilt, the can be given indiscriminately to a boy, a girl, or a lover of history of any age. The style is deal and within the comprehension of youth, but the author treats his vast subject in a way to interest even well-trained readers.

Plastic Sketches.

FEW years ago there came from the Chelsea (Mass.) potteries of Messrs. J. G. & J. F. Low. number of tiles which at once attracted attention in Europe as well as in America for their exceptional artistic beauty. These were followed presently by some even more artistic tile-panels which under the name of "Plastic Sketches," made a decided sensation among art-lovers. The number a copies of each of these panels was extremely limited, and, moreover, each one had an individual's distinctive character, because of the different effects produced by the glazing and baking of each tile. They were necessarily costly objects of art, so that while the admirers of them could be counted by thousands, the purchasers were limited to hundreds or tens. Since that time the artist Mr. Arthur Osborne, has continued his successes until he has produced about half a hundred really notable works of art, showing a versatility as surprising as it is delightful. The clever thought surprising gested itself that while these tile-panels themselves did not admit of general reproduction and wire sale, the new processes of photogravure could make them available to a much wider circle than they could otherwise reach. From this suggestion has come one of the most delightful holiday books 4 the season—the collection of "Plastic Sketches," issued by Messrs. Lee & Shepard in a charming's tasteful portfolio of a design which itself suggests the low relief but strong light and shade of tikwork. Forty-seven of these "Sketches" are included in the portfolio, reproduced as separate plate in tints corresponding to those of the tiles. They are sure to make as great a hit and be as carefully preserved as the portfolio of "Proofs" from the Century and St. Nicholas, which was so decided a saccess a few years since. To get accurately the effect of the light and shade of the tiles without perplexing reflections from the glazed surface, all these tiles were moulded in bisque and so photographe: from the dead surface. The result is indeed surprising. One might almost feel, were it not that he held a sheet of plate-paper in his hands, that he was looking at the tile itself. All sorts of subjects are represented, and there is a wide range of artistic emotion shown in this gamut. Here is delicately poetic feeling, that shows "an artist of the beautiful;" the next plate perhaps is one of a series where strong humor makes itself manifest in almost every touch; the genre tiles are veritable "old Durch masters;" strong character studies are shown in heads and individual figures; the pictures of animal life are admirable; again, the baby cherubs are full of grace and charm. Almost all the work shows a virile yet graceful imagination, interpreted by a responsive and sure hand. The reader who glances at the dreamily poetic head, "When Age Steals On," copied some years ago in the Century, at the Constable-like effect of "Recognition," at the strong Millet characteristics of the "Hayfield" figures, at the delightful birds of "The Singing School," at the effects of motion is "The Windy Day," which we reproduce on the opposite page (albeit the effect is not fully given by the transfer from photogravure to a relief plate), at the amusing sketch of hungry porkers called "Twelve O'clock," at the delightful old lady threading her needle in "Twilight," at the exquisite's classical "Alceste," must see how surprising is the many-sidedness of this artist. His work is one of the most characteristic developments of modern American art, and both the art-loving and bookbuying public have reason to thank the publishers for this very clever and adequate reproduction of Mr. Osborne's work in clay.

The Golidan Gift-Books.

The preceding pages describe and illustrate in detail several of the most notable of the holizing books. The following is a more complete descriptive summary, covering the general field, and noting the new books and some of the old standards of the several publishers, arranged in their alphabetical order. To them we are indebted for the many illustrations which adorn these pages are suggest more fully the books of the year.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY have two very pretty illustrated booklets called "Voices" and Choices," both arranged by Helen P. Strong. Each one furnishes a selection from our best poets and an illuminated Bible verse for every day of the month. Some of the decorations, fancy letters, and comments on the text are very tastefully done. The voice of pity, the inspiring voice, the voice of sympathy, the condescending voice, the voice of the King of kings, and the voice of benediction make very charming pages; and the strange choice, choosing treasure, a loyal choice, and the choice of truth show a nice sense of color-effect. There is also a valuable addition to the library ready in the new edition of the "Dictionary of the Holy Bible," completely revised, reset from new type, with new illustrations and fine maps in colors.

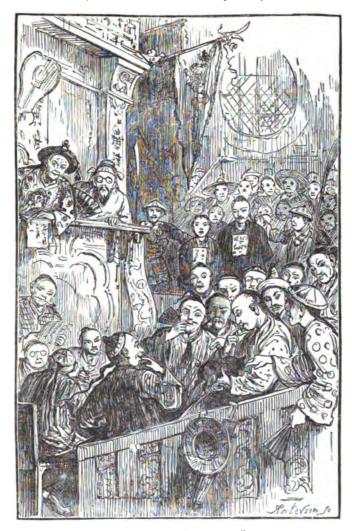

D. APPLETON & Co. have an exquisite edition of the best-known essays of Charles Lamb, to be known as "Some Essays of Elia." It has more than one hundred illustrations by C. O. Murray, showing very artistic pen-and-ink drawings. They have also "The Warwick Shakspere," a new edition of the complete works of Shakspere, in twelve volumes, 16mo, bound in cloth or in half leather, and put up in a tasteful cloth box. It is from the same type as the "Parchment Shakspere," but printed on thinner paper, making handier and more flexible volumes, at a lower price, but retaining the peculiar elegance of that edition.

A. C. Armstrong & Son have succeeded in bringing out the smallest complete Shakespeare in the market. It is to be known as the "Illustrated Pocket Edition of Shakespeare's Dramatic Works and Poems." It is carefully edited from the best texts, contains a glossary and life by J. Talfourd

Blair, has forty line-block reproductions of the well-known engravings of Westall and others 5 in eight volumes, 32mo, and is set up from a new font of nonpareil type, and exquisitely printed by the Glasgow University Press, on opaque paper. specially made for this edition. The publishers issue it in cloth, French morocco, Russia. tal calf, and Turkey morocco, each style in a box onform with the binding. Uniform with the "Bible Pauperum," that gem of antique book-making. brought out two years ago, there is now real.
"The Legendary History of the Cross," a sens of nearly one hundred full-page wood-cuts, into a Dutch work published in 1483. The ingrduction is written by John Ashton, the preise by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould. The work 5 printed in antique style, with old style types and the old spelling. Two colors of ink are used. The head and tail pieces are specially designed to be in harmony with the work is printed on paper made in Holland by almost identically the ancient method. The cover. 6 parchment with brass clasps, is embossed with a fine version of the crucifixion, borrowed free an old engraving of the year 1490. Each copy 5 numbered. In outside finish there are few books more pleasing than "Legends of the Basque Priple," by Mariana Monteiro, with illustrations # photogravure by Harold Copping. "The legens and historical traditions of a people sui generic possessing a language at once magnificent, orginal, and similar to none, a brilliant poetic imagination, fired with a love which amounts almost to idolatry for their mountains, a deeply-rooted religious faith, simple, patriarchal habits, extraordinary progress, undoubted virtues, and an admirable administration worthy of being imitated, must, I feel assured, prove of interest to the Eng lish public, which is ever ready to recognize and knowledge the grandeur and virtues of foreign ations and take an interest even in their fairy cles and popular stories." So says the author, and she has done her part remarkably well. here is also a full glossary. Good print, good aper, wide margins, and gilt top make this a cautiful book. Mary Crommelin, in "Poets in the Garden," goes alphabetically through the vo-and glossaries, illustrated by one hundred and fifty-eight steel-plates. The twenty-five volumes are printed on good paper and bound in dark blue cloth with gilt tops; this would make a showy, acceptable Christmas offering. For a friend with a taste for original editions, a neat and unique pleasure can be planned by presenting the facsimile reprints by this house of the first editions cabulary of botany, and for each flower and plant gives quotations from well-known authors. There are several full-page colored illustrations. The book is strikingly bound with gilt lettering and design of leaves and flowers in green and gold, and makes a showy appearance.

BAKER & TAYLOR have this year completed their library edition of Scott's "Waverley Novels," which could not be finished in time last season. It is a reissue of the Centenary edition, with all the valuable notes by the editor, the late Dr. David Laing, a general index and separate indices of Walton's "Complete Angler," Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," and George Herbert's "Temple"—all of which look as nearly as possible like the volumes printed two centuries ago. as regards type, the antique illustrations, the paper, and all the little technical details of book-making.

CASSELL & CO. have in their sumptuous folio.
"American Art," a work of permanent value.
The illustrations, selected from public and private collections, collections, to it twenty-five plates excited by the best vers. Mr. S. The coller, whose name is identified whose plates in the collections of the collection of the collections of the with art progress in this country, furnishes the descriptive text. The interest of the subject and the extreme artistic merit of the illustrations should make this a much-sought-after work. A full description with illustrations will be found on our front pages. "Christmas in the Olden Time," by Sir Walter Scott, is of a more popular character, though beautifully illustrated and engraved under the careful supervision of Mr. George T. Andrew. The illustrations are from designs by Harry Fenn, Edmund H. Garrett, Childe Hassam, Henry Sandham, and other artists of well-known repute. They are all of a very "Christmasy character, making the volume exceptionally appropriate for the season. "Shakespearean Scenes and Characters" is a collection of steel-plates and wood-engravings, with descriptive text, illustra-ting thirty of Shakespeare's best known plays. Mr. Austin Brereton, the writer of the interesting accompanying reading matter, has endeavored to give in a concise form an account of the stagehistory of each play, together with a note on the most famous representatives of the principal parts in those plays. The achievements of the greater American actors on the Shakespearean stage and the production here of Shakespearean works are points of interest embodied in the text which specially recommend the work to American readers. The designs are after draw-ings by Dicksee, Hart, Barnard, Selous, Fredericks, and others. The bound volume of Cassell's "Magazine of Art" for 1886 must not be overlooked in the search for something rich at rare. It is even richer than former volumes is illustrations and text devoted to the discensating of art knowledge not easily to be obtained from other sources. The volume opens with a soft photo-engraving of Jacob Van Ruyslaels "Cascade with the Watch Tower," from the oneinal in the Brunswick Gallery. Generous space is, as usual, given to American art in its men phases, a cursory glance at the contents exhibi-ing articles on American silver-work, America embroideries, and artists' homes-Harry Fem's place at Montclair, N. J., being the place of scribed in the latter paper. "A Mother's Soog" by Mary D. Brine, is a pretty tale in verse lastrated by Miss C. A. Northam, and issued in a handsome quarto. This and "Songs from Shakespeare" are seasonable gift-books with the reach of all. "Representative Poems of Living Poets," selected by the poets themselves at published early in the season, is a novel collecte of special merit. This house also calls attende to the new editions of the following seasonable books: "Etching," by S. R. Koehler: "In Thames," by Prof. Bonney: "Cathedral Churchs of England and Wales," and Barnard's third & ries of "Character Sketches from Dickens."

S. E. CASSINO has prepared several treats for losers of handsome and showy books. "The Mahogany Tree," Thackeray's popu ar poem, has been superbly illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. The illustrations are photogravures, illuminated by hand, and a fine portrait of Thackeray is given on Japan paper. The book is gorgeously bound and boxed. One hundred numbered copies have also been made, with proofs on Japanese paper with extra margins. The most popular of all Dickens' stories, "The Christmas Carol," makes one of the most fitting presents of the season. The illustrations are by Gaugengigl and T. V. Chothe photogravure methods. An edition limited to fifty numbered copies is also put up in portfolio. A beautiful holiday souvenir, whose price puts its photogravure attractions within the reach of the multitude, is "Summer," by John Town-Send Trowbridge, with illustrations by T. V. Chominski; and "Fairy Flowers from Ocean Bowers," edited and arranged by the Rev. A. B. Henry, and sketched by Jennie May Shaw, will minski, and are among the greatest successes of please any lover of sea-mosses, which are shown in their natural colors on eight colored plates, tastefully put up at most reasonable prices. "The Children" is a collection of poems on child-life that appeals to all who love children, as it is most evident the compiler, Mrs. Alice L. Williams, and the illustrator, Miss E. B. Gilman, have done all their lives. The book is gotten up in two styles, both pretty, neat, and inexpensive. For several years back this publisher has made a specialty of calendars, which are gotten up in a re-markably neat and attractive styles. The old markably neat and attractive styles. The old favorites, "Beacon Lights for God's Mariners," and "Ruling Lights Calendar" are ready once more, and the new ones are called "'Long Shore" and "Habitations of God and the Worshippers," and are also from the trained and successful pen and pencil of Miss Elizabeth N. Little. "'Long Shore" consists of texts for each day of the month, illustrated with marine views, represented on various sea-shells, lithographed in sea-weed colors and sea-green bronze. "The Habitations" have vignettes showing church steeples, little chapels, etc., lithographed in sepia and gold. All these calendars can be had tied in floss silk in neat box, or bound in the now popular "ivory" style. "The Luna Calendar" in the shape of a luna moth makes a showy Christmas card.

THE CENTURY Co., which printed a quarter million copies of the number of the Century containing the first part of the "Life of Lincoln," by his private secretaries, expect to make with this most important enterprise the greatest success yet achieved by our magazines, while the recent bound volumes, containing the famous War articles, are in every way a treasure in the household. Among the few "best books" to which they confine their publishing, "Sport with Gun and Rod," at a reduced price, is specially noticeable at this season.

George J. Coombes has one or two books as always that are suitable gifts for persons of fastidious literary tastes and appeal to the eyes of bibliophiles. The success of last year, Andrew Lang's "Books and Bookmen," this season receives a companion volume in "Ballads of the Books," edited by the versatile Brander Matthews, and having an original frontispiece drawn by S. W. Van Schaick. It contains original poems written expressly for the tempting place assigned them by Austin Dobson, Edmund Gosse, Cosmo Monkhouse, Andrew Lang, H. C. Bunner, Frederick Locker, Walter Learned, G. P. Lathrop, and others. The publishers offer the choice of a cloth or parchment finish to this literary treasure. "The Lorgnette" comprises a series of illustrated society sketches by S. W. Van Schaik and J. K. Bangs, giving fifteen original drawings, bound up in ornamental parchment. The "Impressions on Painting" of Alfred Stevens has been translated, with the author's permission, by Charlotte Adams, and is beautifully printed on Van Gelder paper and bound in parchment with uncut edges.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have nothing quite new that strictly comes under the heading of holiday literature in its now accepted meaning, but very handsome gifts may be selected from their publications of former years. "Tennyson's Complete Poems," published last season, looks as sumptuous in 1886 as it did in 1885; lovers of almost any poet can find his works in "The Red Line Poets," which last year met with such favor in the Persian leopard edition, that they have now again changed their dress to bamboo, a novelty in binding that is meeting with much favor, and "Red Letter Poems," a collection of vens from Chaucer to the present day, will again for purchasers in its illustrated holiday get-up of he season. In view of the prerent popularity of Russian literature the publishers may also expect to please many with their editions of the works of Tolstol, Gogol, and Dostoyevsky.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have a very timely book in view of the two hundred and fiftieth as niversary of Harvard, by George Cary Bush member of the American Historical Association "Harvard: the First American University." history of Harvard University, "the mother of American greatness," to which England, Russa. and Japan contribute students, includes facsing of the recently discovered John Harvard seature, 1635, and many interesting illustration. They have also "Harvard University in the War of 1861-1865," by Francis H. Brown, M.D. amord of services rendered in the army and may a the United States by the graduates and student of Harvard College and the professional school for which Dr. Brown was selected as editor byth committee of five, consisting of President Ext Dr. R. W. Hooper, Mr. Waldo Higginson, Pofessor Child, and Mr. C. E. Guild. "Two Comdies" are two plays entitled "An Ill Wind" = "An Abject Apology," giving young feminal America's views, and also cynical old backen views, and love and marriage in high life, tastfully brought out in holiday parchment style. 4 most welcome book to many will be "Westmister Abbey," which gives a detailed description of all the famous monuments and tombs, by the daughter of the present Dean, the Very Rev. & Granville Bradley, who has written the introdution to the volume. The Punch Calendar in 1887 is also ready.

DODD, MEAD & Co.'s leading holiday work s an illustrated edition of Dante Gabriel Rossett's poem, "The Blessed Damozel." Mr. Kenyoz Cox is the artist, his work in its opposite qualities of grace and massiveness strongly recalling Voder's illustrations to the "Rubáiyát," and Low's designs for Keat's "Lamia." Mr. Cox has been at work upon his designs for a year past. Before submitting them to the phototype process by which they are reproduced, he finished the carefully in oil, by which they gain the advantages of unusual depth of light and shade, and of exceptional richness in the drapery and softness and fulness in the flesh tints. He has made a series of twenty plates, fifteen of them being the full size of the volume, which is a large folio (151 x 12 in.), in which he seeks to illustrate the mystery and vagueness, the pain and sorrow of Rossetti's mystical poem. They are all studies of the human figure, depicting with equapower virile force and womanly grace. In tion to the plates illustrating the poem are a tile page, dedication-page, title-heading to list a drawings, signature, etc., and several charming little head-pieces, also the work of Mr. Cox. The work cannot fail to attract a great deal of attertion, as being one of the most important ventures in purely American art sent out this season. The paper, binding, and printing are as unique as the The paper is exceedartistic part of the work. ingly rich in quality, and the cover has a design of Mr. Cox's own conceiving. The printing is marvellous in tone and color. Appropriately the volume bears a dedication to Mr. Will H. Low. This house will also issue for the holidays ortfolio of "Ten Etchings," examples of the t etched work of Masse, Cazanova, Rhead, avesend, Jacomb-Hood, Ballou, L'Hermitte, quemart, Steele, and Veyrassat. They have o arranged to complete another one hundred sies of "A Score of Etchings," the first edition which was exhausted on the day of publication ee years ago, and for which there has been a Dream," of which they wisely issue a new edition. The grace and sensuous beauty of this work and the exquisite manner in which it is printed, make it one of permanent value, and as desirable this year as last. It appeared also so late last season that it was not made as thoroughly known as it deserved to be, hence in many quarters it will still have all the charm of novelty. Of course nstant demand. These superb examples of a rorite and popular art appeal to every true artrer. Certainly no taste need go unsatisfied, th a choice between these rare portfolios and e sumptuous "Blessed Damozel."

E. P. Dutton & Co., while offering several ely illustrated gift-books and attractive novel-55 prepared especially for the season, have noth-8 so valuable and important in the art line as in no way does this edition differ from the first containing all of the original illustrations by Harry and W. J. Fenn, W. St. John Harper, Garrett, and other celebrated artists, and the lovely decorative pages. Longfellow's "Wreck of the Hesperus" is a newly illustrated small quarto issue that will find favor at the hands of Christmas buyers. It is not only of moderate price, but well worth all the money asked for it. Garrett, Taylor, Woodward, Pierce, and other eir success of last season, Tennyson's "Day well-known American artists interpret with their pencils the pathetic story of the skipper and his little daughter, who met their death "On the Reef of Norman's Woe." "Coming to the King" and "Fulness of Joy" are handsome works in the finest chromo-lithography, made up of verses from Miss Frances R. Havergal's works, with bouquets and sprays of flowers in their natural colors encircling them or woven in with them. The first book is a small, unpretentious quarto; the second, however, is a large square book, giving evidence of special artistic skill in its designs, and special care in its printing. There are scarcely two pages alike, each one being a perfect study in grouping and color. The buyers of fringed books and cards will find a happy and novel substitute in "Season Songs and Sketches," a series of four small quartos in artistically colored paper covers fastened with ribbons. The names of the books are "Spring Songs and Sketches," "Summer Songs and Sketches," "Autumn Songs and Sketches," and "Winter Songs and Sketches." The poetical selections and sketches are appropriate in each case to the season to which the volume is dedicated. All the pages are printed in monotints, the books having been both arranged and printed by Nister. A neat little series of books selling each for ten cents is the Beauty of the King Series, Scripture texts with four decorations for one month. They are attracted miniature books for the Christmas stocking or the Sunday-school Christmas-tree. Each book so a different color and different variety of four. In the same line is their popular Forget-mont series, to which some additions have been made.

ESTES & LAURIAT have a very handsome work in "The Earl's Return," by Owen Merdith, which ranks next to "Lucile" in interest of subject, and is fully equal to it in interest and literar finish. The illustrations show the young, for saken wife in every stage of desolateness, fear, and despair, and give vivid pictures of the storn-beaten, rock-bound coast of the Earl's possessors. They are by W. L. Taylor, and are reproduct in photo-etchings and wood-engravings of real attistic merit. The photo-etchings are in unout ints suited to their subjects, and the wood-engravings are clearly printed on fine thick paper win broad, tinted margins. The publishers offer the book in vellum plated cloth, gilt edges and phote-etching design, and also in full seal moroccoad aspec morocco. Thomas Hood's well-known "Fair Ines" has been illustrated by W. St. [as of George T. Andrew, and is now for the first time brought out in holiday style in cloth, full gilt, in alligator of assorted colors and styles, and in full American seal, gilt edges. The type is large and distributed around the pictures with originality and taste. The shape is the small quarto that this house has used to such advantage in former Christmas volumes. All the former volumes have been put into patented bindings of Burmese plush, wild rose, and peach-blow, and make ornamental holiday gift-books. "Recent German Art" is a series of seventeen beautiful photo-etchings, reproduced from selected original paintings by the most celebrated German artists, with descriptive lext by Fred. H. Allen. These are printed in tints on a folio page, 12 x 17, and there is also an edition of one hundred copies with India proofs. "Foreign Etchings" is a collection of twenty original etchings by celebrated artists of France, Germany, and England, among whom are Unger, Leibb, Klaus, Paul Rajon, and Woerule, from paintings by Rembrandt, Titian, Palma Vecchio, Gabriel Max, and others, with descriptive text and biographical matter by S. R. Koehler. The edition is limited to five hundred copies; five are proofs on genuine parchment, text on vellum paper in parchment portfolios; fifteen are proofs on satin; forty proofs on India paper; forty proofs on Japan paper; and two hundred and fifty are proofs on Holland paper in cloth portfolio. Their lines of standard histories and the like are always acceptable to holiday purchasers.

THE FOWLER & WELLS Co., whose publications are devoted almost exclusively to phrenology, physiology, heredity, etc., have a standard work of unusual interest in "Heads and Faces, and How to Study Them," of which a cut worthy of careful study appears in this number. It is a collection by Prof. Nelson Sizer of short biographical sketches, with good portraits of the heads of some of the most noted literary and business men of the country. His object is to prove that the formation of the head shows the organs contained in it, and that after this has been influenced by heredity, climate, etc., it must determine the character and work of each individual. No matter how one may differ from the author, his work is absorbing and must make readers think, a valuable consideration in choosing reading-matter for enlightened friends. In "The Man Wonderful in the House Beautiful" they have a physiology of unusual merit, in the form of a fascinating allegory. There are also one or two stories which are not new, but are original and instructive in the line of the specialty mentioned above.

S. C. GRIGGS & Co. have issued in handsome style a complete edition of the poetical works of Benjamin F. Taylor, the well-known Western poet, whose "Isle of the Long Ago" and many other poems have become almost classics. The volume includes all his poems under the headings of "Songs of Yesterday," "Old-Time Pictures," "Dulce Domum," etc., together with about as much new matter as is contained in "Songs of Yesterday."

HARPER & BROTHERS have this year a showing of holiday books which surpasses even their previous achievements, among which "She Stoops to Conquer," noticed and illustrated in our first pages, is easily foremost. Mr. Abbey's reputation is now so well assured that a new work from his pencil of this importance mark an art event, and this charming book with photogravures and wood-engravings of his drawings, the decorations by Alfred Parsons, the delightful poetic introduction and farewell in Austin Dobson, and the binding m full leather after Stanford White's designs, quite surpasses his beautiful "Herrick's Poems," which were issued only a few years since. Mr. Hamilton W. Gibson, who has been popular with holiday bookbuyes now for several years, will again delight them with his new book, called "The Happy Hunting Grounds, a tribute to the woods and fields," mder which title he finds place for his delicate pencil and for the best work of the wood-engravers alike in a dry back-yard and in the wide stretches of forest. It is only necessary to my that the book has the same wali and beauty of illustration as his previous books, and is bound and otherwise gotten up so tastefully as to make every one desirous of owning i. Besides this, there is a most charaing novelty in "Home Fairies and Heart Flowers," in which Mr. Frank French, the engraver, has done his very best in a series of most charming engravings of typical heads of beautiful children, taken for the most part from real life, and with exquisite floral decorations encircling them. The pages that contain Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster's very charming poems to accompany the pictures are also decorated with delightful devices in the way of head and tail pieces and other ornamentations. Reber's "Medieval Art" is a book which will range on library shelves with his previous history of "Ancient Art," and is a capital volume as a gift for private collectors and art-lovers. "Their Pilgrimage," in which under guise of a novel Charles Dudley Warner uses his practiced pen to the delight of readers in presenting the pictures of Americanlife at summer and winter resorts, is made doubly agreeable by the clever illustrations of Mr. C. S. Reinhart, foremost among artists for catching as an illustrator the traits of our varied life of today, who came from Paris to accompany Mr. Warner on the trip which gave foundation for this attractive volume. The standard histories and literary classics issued in the handsome unform library editions by this house, and indeed the nany other lines having the time-honored imprint of Harper & Brothers, are not to be forrotten at the Christmas season. The famous periodicals of the house, the Magazine, Weekly, ind Bazar, always make an acceptable Christnas present.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co.'s chief holiday volime is "The Book of the Tile Club," to which he members of the famous Tile Club of New York have contributed such pictures as seemed to hem most characteristic and attractive. There are twenty-five of these, each selected by its artist, and they have been reproduced in phototypes which present with perfect accuracy the artists' work. This Club, as is well known, includes not few of the names most conspicuous in American art — Abbey, Boughton, Bunce, Frost, Gifford, Chase, Dielman, Maynard, Millet, Parsons, Quartey, Reinhart, St. Gaudens, Sarony, Hopkinson Smith, Vedder, and Weir; and it will readily be seen that twenty-five of the best pictures by such artists must form an art volume of rare value, 'Edward Strahan," whose untimely death this fall is widely lamented, furnishes an interesting account of the Club, and Hopkinson Smith gives a humorous description of the bright sayings and doings at its meetings, and in the letter-press are incorporatand portraits of the members of the Club. The book is an atlas quarto, like the original edition of Vedder's Omar Khayyám, printed in the best style of the Riverside Press, and bound in a noticeably fine style, with a beautiful lining designed by Mr. Maynard. and a cover stamped with a striking die drawn by Stanford White. Altogether it is a giftsumptuous book, even in the popular edition.

The deluxeedition, From Gibson's "Happy Hunting Grounds. limited to one hundred copies, has the ed scores of pen-and-ink sketches, phototypes printed on Japanese paper and signed by the respective artists, and there are sundry miracles of paper, presswork, and binding which give the book an almost fabulous value. treatment of Hopkinson Smith's "Old Lines in New Black and White" lends to the de luxe edition, likewise limited to one hundred copies, what its publishers fitly denominate a "patrician' quality which art-lovers will appreciate. The second special holiday book from the Riverside Press for this season is Hopkinson Smith's "Well-Worn Roads of Spain, Holland, and Italy." It is a folio volume containing sixteen full-page phototypes of water-color paintings of street scenes, curious and interesting buildings, noteworthy landscapes, and other pictures, admirably reproduced in inks of different tints, and supplemented by Mr. Smith's vivacious, humorous, and descriptive travel sketches, in which he has woven many pen-and-ink designs. The book is charming to read, to study, and to enjoy. Darley's famous illustrations to Longfellow's " Evangeline," which have had great popularity heretofore in litho-ly popular both for the story, the illustrations, and the low price. Bret Harte's story,

"The Queen of the Pirate Isle," would seem likely, from its title, to be sufficiently interesting; with a host of colored pictures by Kate Greenaway it will surely attract very marked attention. The new Riverside edition of Longfellow's complete works, including his Prose in two volumes, his Poems in six, and his masterly translation of Dante's Divina Commedia, in three, is fitly included among holiday books, for the volumes are works of art in shape, typography, and binding, as well as in the care with which they have been edited and supplied with all needed notes by Horace E. Scudder. The edition contains five steel portraits, including the bust placed in Westminster Abbey. The new Riverside Tennyson in six volumes is a handsome and most satisfactory edition in no way inferior to the issue of the laureate's works completed in England last year. Agassiz's Works and Life, now published in six volumes externally uniform and attractively bound, are richly worthy of examination at this season. The new issue of the Riverside Shakespeare, edited by Richard Grant White, in six tasteful volumes, and at a low price, cannot fail to be welcomed wherever known. We may also ask attention to the greatly improved and elegant style in which the Little Classic edition of Hawthorne's Works now appears, and the new style of the old Diamond edition of famous poets, now much better in form and binding and labelled Cabinet edition. Other books from the Riverside Press, excellent in themselves and altogether available at this season, are Miss Larcom's book of noble, inspiring thoughts from the best thinkers, "Beck-onings for Every Day;" Mrs. Whitney's "Holy Tides," which celebrates in thoughtful verse Advent, Epiphany, Lent, Easter, and other feast days in the Episcopal Church; and, last, but not least attractive the eight tasteful calendars which illuminate all 1887 with wise and gracious words from Browning (new), Emerson, Hawthorne (new), Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, Mrs. Whitney, and Whittier, all but the Whitney calendar having portraits.

JOHN IRELAND has published a book of texts, nymns, and prayers which he calls the "Word for the Day." It "has been compiled with reference to real, every-day needs, not fictitious, or merely sentimental ones. The endeavor has been made to touch the work-a-day Christian life." The book has blank spaces at the end, which may be used as a record of birthdays and other events of family history, or to mark down the way in which the reader has carried out the thoughts of the texts of certain days. The compiler hides under the initials A. J. A. R. She has done her work with love and care. Some of the poetical thoughts are published without the author's name, because they were all chosen for their special fitness and not for any celebrity of the writer, and sometimes it was impossible to trace them to their authors.

THOMAS R. KNOX & Co. present this year two new editions of Mrs. Brc wning's works, one a Library edition and the other the Aldine edition. The latter is in seven volumes, which contain besides her poetical works a memoir of her life and a collection of her letters, also a number of her earlier poems which, they claim, are not contained in any other American edition. They call attention to their dainty and beautiful editions of a number of favorite poets, including Bailey's "Festus," "Aurora Leigh," Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome," Burns, Campbell, Gray, Hood, Motherwell, Scott, Shelley, and Alexander Smith. These may be had with red lines and plain in vellum cloth, gilt tops, three-quarters calf, and in flexible full calf and seal bindings.

The sets are put up in leather cases to match the bindings.

LEE & SHEPARD are fortunate in having a new work for the holidays by Miss Irene E. Jerome-"Nature's Hallelujah"—which even exceeds the "One Year's Sketch-Book" in artistic merit. Like that popular work it is an apotheosis of mture—the budding trees and flowers, the bids and the soft caressing winds of spring, all singing their praises of nature and nature's God in a series of plates of strikingly original designs. Landscapes and flower-pieces are alike charming and imbued with that poetic feeling which is as expression always of rare artistic genius. The pages are arranged like those of "One Year's Sketch-Book," with selections from the poets, and the volume is bound in several rich and novel styles. It is described in detail in the opening pages. New editions are also to be obtained of "One Year's Sketch-Book," and the pretty Easter souvenir of this year called "The Message of the Bluebird." The latter appears in a dainty white and blue cloth binding. One of the most desirable of the conventional small quartos is Tennyson's "Dora," illustrated by W. L. Taylor. Mr. Taylor went expressly to England to make his sketches, and shows some delightful bits of English landscape and rural life. The spirit of the pathetic ballad has been caught very successfully, the figures of Farmer Allan, Dora, and William's boy telling the story with a graphic force quite as notable as that found in the landscapes. It will be generally conceded, we are sure, that the little book in its entirety is one of unusual merit. A genuine novelty in at is the "Plastic Sketches" of J. G. and J. F. Low. the famous tile artists, a series of designs, making 47 original bas-relief prints, 10x12 inches in a portfolio. The beauty and value of these Alberttypes will be appreciated when it is known that, although but five or six years have elapsed since the first "Plastic Sketch" came from the kila, it has been found impossible to secure copies of several of the earlier ones for illustration. also are described in detail in our front pages. Lee & Shepard have put in one volume, under the title of "The Three Gems of the Bible," the "Lord's Prayer," "The Lord is My Shepherd," and the "Beatitudes," as versified by Prof. W. C. Richards, which were published in the three years past in various editions, and which in this shape make a handsome and appropriate gift-book They also issue for the holidays their line of hymns, ballads, poems, and songs, in novel and attractive styles, comprising the following bindings: imperial antique; the petite alligator, a flexible binding; the royal plush, of the finest material and best workmanship, and the embroidered silk, for which it is claimed that it excels most handpainting in richness and beauty. They have also reduced "Curfew Must not Ring To-night," "Abide with Me," "Rock of Ages," "Home, Sweet Home," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and
"My Faith Looks Up to Thee," to vest-pocket size, but with all the original illustrations, which are issued in a series called the Golden Minis-

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. make a generous and tasteful display of holiday books this year. Their beautiful edition of "Lamia," with illustrations by Will. H. Low, achieved so brilliant a success last year, that they are again encouraged to use all the facilities of their giant establishment in the production of a volume of original idea and artistic execution. "The Book of American Figure-Painters" contains forty drawings or paintings contributed by forty of our leading figurepainters. By the improved process of photogravure printing the minutest detail of every artist's individual style is preserved and reproduced, and we regret that the use of this method throughout prevents our presentation of specimen illustrations. The work is issued in large quarto form, 16 x 20 inches, on fine plate paper, with richly decorated cloth binding, gilt top, and rough edges. Some of the designs were suggested by the passages of English prose or poetry which accompany them; and in others passages have been chosen from our best-known authors which harmonize with the artists' creations. Our limited space forbids our mentioning all the forty names that vouch for the value and beauty of these artistic figures, but they are all worthy to be in the same volume with Kenyon Cox, Elihu Ved-der, Alden J. Weir, Will H. Low, Eastman Johnson, F. D. Millet, F. A. Bridges, and Winslow Homer. Buchanan Read's "The Closing Scene" has been chosen as the poem to be illustrated for another holiday publication, and a full description of it is given in our front pages. The drawings are by Gibson, Bruce Crane, Bolton Jones, Garrett, Pyle, and other favorite artists, and the volume affords an unusually interesting exhibit of the comparative merit of our best engravers, each cut being executed by a different hand. A sumptuous and appropriate Christmas publication is a superroyal quarto edition of "The Song of Songs," illustrated with twenty-six full-page original etchings from Bida's wonderful designs, done by Edmond Hédouin and Emil Borhvin. The text is printed from the Revised Version by courteous permission of the authorities of the Oxford and Cambridge University Presses, who own the copy-The etchings are printed on fine Japanese right. paper, carefully mounted on white vellum paper of the same quality as that on which the text is printed. Three quarto volumes with designs by eminent artists have text by Washington Irving, two from the "Sketch-Book" and one from the "History of New York." The first is called "The Pride of the Village and Other Tales," and includes "The Widow and Her Son;" "The Broken Heart;" "The Wife;" "A Royal Poet;" and the "Country Church." The second is composed of the "English Sketches" from the "Sketch-Book"—" Rural Life in England;" "Westminster Abbey;" "Little Britain;" and "Stratford-on-Avon." The third is called "Knickerbocker Sketches," and contains some of the brightest of Washington Irving's writings and some of Mr. F. O. C. Darley's finest work. These are all neatly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering and designs, and make a showy Christmas gift. Last, and certainly not least, there are four volumes of "Half-Hours with the Best American Authors," selected and arranged by Charles Morris. Each volume contains a steel-engraving of a noted writer. All the publishers, notably Houghton, Mifflin & Co., have been most considerate in facilitating the make-up of this volume, by giving Mr. Morris full permission to take liberally from their copyright works. Mr. Morris has not attempted a survey of the entire field of American literature, but has been controlled rather by the literary merit and diversity of interest than by the name of the author, his desire being to please and instruct readers, and not to offer any estimate as to the comparative standing of writers. Works of technical character have been avoided, and also products of philosophy, theology, and other weighty subjects, as the volumes are designed for the general reading public. A short biographical sketch is given of each author quoted. Good subject and title indexes make the volumes useful for reference. They are substantially bound in cloth and put up in a box. The print and paper are of the best.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. offer the ideal present for a sportsman in their Badminton Library of Sports and Pastimes, edited by the Duke of Beaufort, assisted by Alfred T. Watson. Its object and scope are to supply lovers of outdoor amusements with a series of volumes written by experts, giving practical information, and also pointing out the pleasures and benefits of rural sports. The first volume of the series was "Hunting," published last season. Since then "Racing and Steeplechasing," in one volume, and "Fishing," in two volumes, have been put in the market, and the latest issue is "Shooting," in two volumes, a beautifully gotten-up book, full of vignette pictures and characteristic head and tail pieces. Every one of these volumes is edited by experts, and by English experts, which means a great deal, and every one has a bibliography of the pastime to which it is devoted. The complete twelve-volume edition of Richard Grant White's "Shakespeare" has been reduced in price, a welcome piece of news to many. The always welcome old stand-by, "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations," can be had in six styles of fac, finer, finest binding; and Bartlett's "Shakespeare Phrase-Book" has also been dressed anewforthe holidays. This house also has the large quante Edinburgh issue of the "Encyclopædia Britanica," of which twenty-one volumes are now ready.

GEORGE R. LOCKWOOD & SON, N. Y., have prepared for this season an attractive line of Christmas souvenirs in their Parchment Daisties, which comprise: "Glad Tidings," "Twas the Night before Christmas," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Poems for Christmas and New Year," by Frances Ridley Havergal, and "Christmas Festivities," by Charles Dickens and Washington Irving. They have also two novelties "Holly Leaves" and "Mistletoe Sprays," which consist of appropriate verses, bound in dainy covers, each being cut in the shape of the leaves named (so universally associated with Christmas, and richly lithographed in bright colors and hard polished silver. "Seekers After the Light," from "Ben Hur," is another souvenir that will prove an appropriate and acceptable holiday gift.

D. LOTHROP & Co., who turn out so vast a number of juveniles each year, would seem to have no time to attend to the tastes of grown readen and book-lovers, but even in the field of holiday gift-books they distinguish themselves notably this. year. Their pièce de resistance is an édition de luxe of "Idyls and Pastorals." containing accompanied by twenty-four photogravures by Kate Greenaway, Howard Pyle, W. T. Smedler. Edmund H. Garrett, F. Childe Hassam, Jessie Edmund H. Garrett, F. Childe Hassam, Jessie Curtis Shepherd, Miss L. B. Humphrey, W. L. Taylor, Joseph Pennell, Thomas Hovenden, F. H. Lungren, and others, gotten up in large folio in cloth, and also in white calf embossed in imitation of antique ivory. Of equal beauty and perhaps of even more general interest is the édition de luxe of "Youth in Twelve Centuries."

E. B. This folio is put up in vellum cloth, silk canvas, and emerald calf. "The Minute Man," by Margaret Sidney, is a stirring poem of the Revolution about the holding of Concord Bridge. The illustrations by Henry Sandham are reproduced from toned oils by photogravure hand-prints. The binding is leatherette, sprinkled with dots of red, and the odd little volume is tied with a red "While Shepherds Watched cord and tassel. Their Flocks by Night," is a collection of finely illustrated Christmas hymns by Whittier, Miss Muloch, Kingsley, Heber, Herrick, Keble, and many other sweet singers. The Artist Gallery series has some additions, and now contains Millais, Alma-Tadema, Landseer, Bougereau, and Sir Frederick Leighton, each volume giving nine facsimile photogravures of the artists' most famous and representative paintings. The new and enlarged edition of "The Intimations of Immortality" again puts the poem of Wordsworth before the public, who stamped it a success last year. Mrs. Browning's "Sonnets from the Portuguese" has been brought out as a gift-book, with introduction and notes by W. J. Rolfe, and in its parti-colored cloth and full gilt makes a showy issue of these immortal love sonnets.

MACMILLAN & Co. have prepared an edition of Addison's masterpiece, "Sir Roger de Coverley," that must gladden the eyes and hearts of all admirers of a finely made book, which has the essential quality often missed in some of our finest book-making, a worthy raison d'être in its timeseasoned and appropriate text. The illustrations are by Hugh Thompson, who has caugh, the spirit of the once ravenously read contributions to the Spectator, and rendered it in a succession of the character sketches which are his specialty, and which are attracting considerable attention in artist circles. "Old Christmas and Bracebridge tist circles. Hall," by Washington Irving, is issued in an édition de luxe on fine paper, with numerous illustrations by Randolph Caldecott; and the Jubilee edition of the "Pickwick Papers" makes two handsome volumes, edited by the great novelist's eldest son, and designed to mark the change in the manners, customs, and places described in those immortal posthumous records, which have been brought about in fifty years. This issue will contain the three "addresses" which were published with the original numbers and are now very scarce.

The volume of The English Illustrated Magazine for 1886 is also handsomely bound and makes a showy Christmas gift which will give lasting enjoyment.

6. & C. MERRIAM & Co. offer their usual line of Webster's Dictionary, abridged and unabridged, in all varieties of substantial bindings. Comments on the appropriateness of this volume as a gift is unnecessary, as it is already classed as one of the perennial standards in the line of holiday presents.

NIMS & KNIGHT have prepared a volume of "Twenty Etchings" by American artists, among whom are Henry Farrer, Thomas Moran, Smillie. Harris, and others, with biographical matter by S. R. Koehler and others. They have also a beautiful edition of Alfred Tennyson's "The Brook." The text of the poem is interworm with the illustrations, of which there are fifteen after original drawings by William J. Mozart The binding will be a novel combination of cloth and have an attractive side-stamp. There is a edition of one hundred, twice the size of the reg-ular edition, printed on India paper. An appropriate poem will accompany each month's design, followed by a page of brief selections for each day of the month. It is bound in Whatman's antique hand-made board, with ragged edges, and makes a showy, tasteful gift. This, as well as all the other calendars published by this house, is printed with great care on fine paper, and they are all now put into the "ivory" binding, which is more durable than leather, and far more beautiful, and has the advantage that when it becomes soiled it can be cleaned with a damp cloth.

THOMAS NELSON & Sons again make the new volume in the Pen and Pencil series their leading holiday book for the season. "Australian Pictures" describes the largest island in the world from the standpoint of a native. The Government of Victoria placed all its material at the disposal of the author, Mr. Willoughby, of the Melbourne Argui. and he has done good work in these pages, which give the reader much information of that vast new world where Saxons and Celts are peacefully building up another Britain. It is profusely illustrated, and has a good map and a good index. The cover is handsomely decorated with the trees, birds, and shrubs of Australia, and has gilt lettering and gilt pictures of the Town Hall at Sydney and the handsome church on Collins Street, Melbourne. "The Land of Greece," by Charles Henry Hanson, author of "The Siege of Troy, has forty-four illustrations, and gilt edges. The additions to the Favorite Hymns series this year are: "Rock of Ages," by Augustus Montague Toplady, and "Jerusalem, the Golden," by Bernard of Morlais. In their pretty daily textbooks, "Our Daily Light," "Our Daily Food, and "Our Daily Bread," are specially attractive.

The long lines of "Oxford" Teachers Bibles. Gift Bibles, and Prayers and Hymnals offer room for every variety of taste and every sum of money. The neatness, elegance, and beauty of this "specialty" of the firm has been commented upon in these columns so many times that not a new word remains to be said, but all the words already spoken are as true and timely s before.

PHILLIPS & HUNT have chosen wisely in their preparations for the present holiday season. Their books are suitable for all seasons and al-★hough they may not show brilliantly on Christmas counters, they have lasting value. "Two Thousand Miles Through the Heart of Mexico," by have "The Words and Mind of Jesus," by J. A. Macduff. The Alta Edition of "Best Popular 12mos" now numbers one hundred and one volumes, and includes the most popular and best selling books of the house. Smith's "Dictionary of the Bible," revised and edited by the Rev. F. N. and M. A. Peloubet, makes a splendid gift for Sunday-school superintendents or clergymen. "The Fireside Encyclopædia of Poetry," collected and arranged by Henry T. Coates, has now been printed from new type and is a fine specimen of book-making.

James Pott & Co. have imported an edition of Paul Lecroix's "Arts in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance," which has just been newly revised and brought out in a new edition on the "other side." There are twelve chromo-lithographic prints, and upward of four hundred wood-engravings, and the price of this superb volume has been reduced to $7.50. They have also a new edition of Cutts' "Scenes and Characters of the Middle Ages," with one hundred and eighty-two illustrations. This firm do a large business in the "Bagster Bibles," which have been extended with seventy-five pages of valuable notes for students, and at the same time have been reduced in price. No more suitable present can be found for a favorite scholar or superintendent or teacher in any Sunday-school, who is not already provided with the newest helps to Bible study.

L. Pranc & Co.'s "Homes and Haunts of the Poets" is a novel collection of original etchings by W. B. Closson, gotten up for the holidays. They are intended to give glimpses of the places made famous and interesting by intimate association with the lives of American poets and authors. Five writers are represented-Longfellow, Holmes Hawthorne, Emerson, and Whittier - to each of whom six etchings are devoted, namely: a portrait, a facsimile reproduction of a selection from manuscript with autograph and four views. The work is published either in five parts each author selling separately, or complete in a portfolio. publishers pride themselves upon the care with which the plates have been printed. They have a new and interesting work for art students, "On the Use of Water-Colors for Beginners," by Ross Tumer. an experienced and successful teacher, who offers many useful hints, both for painting in water-colors and painting in general, and special directions for painting three studies, for which illustrations are given in still life, landscape, and forer painting. Nothing more acceptable could be presented to a young art enthusiast. Prang's "Art Studies," by wellknown artists, for painting in water-color and oil, make also charming and lasting gifts.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have no new work this year that distinctly comes under the head of the generally accepted meaning of "gift-book," but they have more than one book that would be a much-prized gift to earnest readers, especially to such as make a study of American history and American literature. A very important work in the line of American history is "Documents ll-lustrative of American History," giving such douments as mark special critical epochs in this country, from the first Virginia charter issued in 1606 to the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863, and made practical for study by an introduction and references by Howard W. Pres Prof. Alexander Johnston, of the College of New Jersey, reviews the affairs of his country from 1846 to 1886 from the standpoint of a jurist and political economist under the title of "Half a Century of American History." "A History of the United States Navy from 1775 to 1886. with a Review of the Colonial Naval Expeditions and Sketch of our Present Navy," by Edgar Stanton Maclay, will probably prove one of the most important works on its subject. In American literature the house provides "Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature," edited by Edward T. Mason, covering American literature from the appearance of Washington Irving to the present day. It is in three volumes uniform with the "Prose Masterpieces" of last season. A very scholarly offering of Prof. Charles F. Rich ardson is "American Literature from 1607-1885 It is in two parts, only one of which is thus is issued. It is entitled "The Development of American Thought," and will trace the progress of American prose literature from its beginning to the present day, in its various departments of history, politics, theology, philosophy, the essiy, criticism, science, humor, etc. The second and concluding part, devoted to "American Poetry and Fiction," will appear two years hence. A complete edition of the "Works of Benjamin Franklin," in the general style of the handsome Lodge Edition of "Hamilton's Works," is also a much-prized contribution to American literature. In "The Romances of Chivalry," Sir John Ashton, who is also the author of "The Dawn of the Nineteenth Century," makes a collection of the legends and traditions of "Sir Isumbras," "Sir Degori," "Guy of Warwick," etc., and illustrates them with fifty drawings in facsimile. Edmondo de Amicis' "Constantinople" is issued this year in a Bosphorus Edition, illustrated, and admirers of his other bright books on Holland, Spain, and Morocco will be glad to welcome it. A neat little Christmas offering is the Pearl Series of six tiny volumes of poetry in gilt box, most daintily printed and made up of a series of poetical selections, making the prose selections of the very attractive Nutshell Series, in its unique case, of last year.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. always seem imbued with the spirit of the Christmas season, and almost every book they get ready is full of the "story of old," told in prose, or verse, or picture, put in every kind of handsome dress, but still having as its first thought that "Christ is born in Bethlehem." Mary Leland McLanathan and Rosina Emmet have combined their talents in producing "Three Kings," which is a Christmas legend of long ago told in the style of the ballads of the time of "Good King Arthur." It is on tinted paper with rough side and gilt-top edges, has red initial letters and wide margins, and is promised in various styles of binding. The successes of former years, "The Celestial Country," "The Holy Night," "A Happy Christmas-Time," "Centuries Ago," "The Song of the Angels," are even more beautiful for this year in their pure white rough paper cover, with the fine rough-edged paper and the perfectly finished reproductions of the chefs-d'auvre of the old masters. The titles are in silver or purple in every variety of type. "Christmas-Tide in Song and Story" has been put in 16mo shape with rough side edges and gilt top, and reduced in price, and is sure of a new lease of the far-reaching favor accorded it last season. Many of the writings of Frances Ridley Havergal, who holds so secure a place in the hearts of lovers of devotional books, have been combined in a volume published under the title of "Royal Grace and Royal Gifts." It comprises "Royal Commandments," "Royal Bounty," "Kept for the Master's Use," "My King," "The Royal Invitation," and "Loyal Responses," and has a welcome chapter by John R. Miller on the "Consecrated Life" of the author. Rose Porter has an exquisite little volume, "A Heart to Heart Diary," tastefully bound in half cloth, which she calls "In Quietness and Confidence," and dedicates to the blessed memory of her mother, whose earthly life taught

"When He giveth quietness Who then can make trouble?"

Two tempting little booklets by the undeclared author of "Rest" and "Peace" are "Confiding" and "Abiding," collections of religious poetry, put up in flexible covers, decorated with daisies, and sold at a remarkably low price. "The Wisdom of the Apocalypse," by J. H. McIlvaine, the author of "The Wisdom of the Holy Scripture," will prove a most acceptable gift to many a theological student as well as lay-reader of religious literature. Among the new editions of works that have made their mark since they were put on the catalogue of this house are: "The Alhambra and the Kremlin," treating of religious edifices in the south and north of Europe, by the late Samuel Irenæus Prime; "The Divine Origin of Christianity," as indicated by its historical effect; "The Life and Letters of Elizabeth Prentiss," and an enlarged and illustrated issue of that charming collection of verse known as "Home Life in Song," than which no more acceptable gift could be presented to mothers of every age and station. Mrs. Margaret J. Preston has poems of faith and comfort, entitled "For Love's Sake," and Miss Mary Lorina has "Siam, or, the heart of Farther India," an important volume, as the author has for many years been a resident of the country, and has had unusual facilities for getting her information.

ROBERTS BROTHERS offer two important books to holiday buyers in limited éditions de luxe: "Reynard the Fox," that curious old German poem, translated by T. J. Arnold from Goethe's version, which contains the famous designs of Kaulbach, sixty in number, and twelve full-page etchings after designs by Wolf, a very handsomely made volume, fittingly enshrining this classic old allegory; and "The Last Days of Mary Ana historical sketch by Lord Ronald toinette, Gower, with steel portrait and facsimile letter, printed on hand-made Irish linen paper, and exquisitely gotten up. In each case the edition is limited to less than 500 copies. Another book, which Roberts Brothers had announced, was in fact so limited that it had to be withdrawn from the market—"The Procession of Flowers in Colorado"—of which the text was left by "H. H.," while the illustrations are in hand watercolor painting throughout. The artist could do but two copies a week, and it was imposible to prepare a sufficient number to fill even the announcement of 100 copies. The edition is also limited of the new volume by Hamerton on "Imagination in Landscape-Painting," which is interestingly illustrated by examples of the great masters of landscape; there is a new edition also of that pleasant book by the same writer, "The Unknown River," detailing an etcher's voyage of discovery. The clever and charming book by Mr. Pennell and his wife, "Two Pilgrims' Progress from Florence to Rome," will delight all cyclists, and, indeed, every reader who has a taste for bright talk and clever illustration. Another book of travel is "India Revisited," by the famous author of the "Light of Asia," Edwin Arnold, with many illustrations after photographs selected by him. The "Sonnets and Lyrics by selected by him. H. H." includes all the poems which Mrs. Jackson had written since the issue of her first volume of verses, and will be welcomed by that great circle of admirers who lament her untimely loss. The many general and standard works of this house are also to be noted, as well as the series of "Daily Morning and Evening Com-panion Calendars," and a French calendar for the year 1887, very tasteful and fitting all of them.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS have two exquisite examples of fine color-printing in Uzanne's "Frenchwoman of the Century" and Porson's illustrated edition of Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield." The edition of the first work being limited to five hundred copies, and only two hundred having been secured for the American market, prospective buyers have need to enter their orders without delay. The popularity of the "Fan" and "Glove," by the same author, and the thorough appreciation accorded in this country to these entirely French specimens of decorative art, presage a rapid disposal of "The Frenchwoman of the Century." Albert Lynch's designs give a pictorial history of the Frenchwoman of fashion of to-day, tracing her evolution step by step, from her chrysalis-like state following the French Resolution to her present brilliant butterfly costition. The untranslatable word chic best describes their predominant quality. There is a charming frivolity and dash about them which Mr. Lvich seems to have raught from Uzanne's graceful text. The work is somewhat dissimilar in artistic conception from the "Fan" and "Glove," but no less pleasing. Not only are the larger illustrations delicately colored, but the initials and head and tail pieces, making a unique volume. "The Vicar of Wakefield" is a companion volume to Porson's successful edition of "Gulliver's Travels." Over a hundred illustrations, printed in colors with a transparency and brilliancy which rival water-color painting, retell the old familiar story. A feature of the volume is a prefator, memoir of Goldsmith, by George Saintsbury. A superbly-illustrated edition of Victor Hugos

"Les Misérables," of which the first volume.
"Fantine," has just been published, is an enterprise full of interest to collectors of fine edition. The work is so full of pictorial suggestiveness that it is not surprising that the artists have succeed even beyond expectation in illustrating this me terpiece of fiction. De Neuville, Bayard, Mora Valnay, and Victor Hugo himself, with other exinent French artists, are represented in the one hundred illustrations which adorn the first volume. The three completing volumes promise to be equally rich in illustrations, embracing, in addition to the artists named, the great Meissonier. The illustrations of "Fantine" are strikingly bold and strong, and thoroughly French in feeling and spirit, being besides accurate sketches of the places and persons Victor Hugo describes. The translation is an excellent one and well worthy this new and beautiful setting. "England, Scotland, and Wales," by P. Villars, is an elegant inperial quarto, devoted to a description both by pen and pencil of the scenery and noted people and places of the British isle. The illustrations. which are profusely scattered throughout the text. having been reproduced from photographs or from sketches taken on the spot by well-known artists, are as notable for their fidelity as for their beauty. Mr. Henry Firth, who has made the translation from the original French, presents 2 text almost as vivid and interesting as that of the author. A personal memoir of the early art career of the late "Randolph Caldecott," written in affectionate remembrance by Henry Blackburn, the English author and art critic, is another of the many art works of this house, and one that appeals directly to the general public. Randolph Calif cott's picture-books and illustrations for the London Graphic have amused such a large audience that this volume cannot fail to find many readers eager to know the first beginnings of one of the most gifted of English illustrators. Mr. Blackburn has made his text subservient to the illustrations, which profusely adorn the book, and which are in themselves a history of Mr. Caliecott's art progress. Many of them are now for the first time published, while others are delightfully familiar. The large-paper edition of the work has the rich surface and broad margin which show the designs to the very best advantage. A new series of Caldecott's contributions to the London Graphic will be ready in handsome form for the holidays under the title "More Graphic Pictures." "Routledge's Colored Language of Flowers" is a pretty little volume of poetical sentiments and floral decorations, and the "jap" nese Almanac for 1887," and the "Kate Greenaway Almanac," both in the form of tiny books, are full of quaint conceits and fancies. The Routledges have some handsome new editions of standards, such as the New Library Edition of Bulwer's "Novels and Tales;" the Copperfield Edition of Dickens' "Works," and new editions of Shakespeare's "Works," Marryat's "Novels and Tales," and "The Waverley Novels."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have ready the second volume of their "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings." This magnificent work, to be comprised in four quarto volumes, is one of the most comprehensive and luxuriously printed works of the sort ever issued from the press of this country. Embellished throughout with a wealth of illustrations, both in the way of woodcuts and etchings, which reproduce the most prominent creations of the artists mentioned, rich beyond any other encyclopædia in biographical details of the painters of the Old World and the New, and exquisite in all the mechanical parts of binding, printing, and paper, it is certainly, although not offered as such, a most seasonable presentation volume-one that may adorn the library for years to come, and be a never-ceasing fountain of pleasure and information to the art students and amateurs of the family. Among the fullpage illustrations are photogravures from paintings by Rossetti, Meissonier, Jules Breton, Bastien-Lepage, and Sir Frederick Leighton. As the edition is limited to five hundred copies, intending purchasers should lose no time in sending in their names. John Denison Champlin, Jr.'s, "Chronicle of the Coach" is a bright, clever book at a moderate price that will please any one partial to travel. On a coach-and-four the reader is whirled through some of the most famous and interesting towns of old England, which the graceful designs of Mr. Edward L. Chichester assist in making a reality Another book at a moderate price, eminently appropriate for the coming gift season, is "The Sentimental Calendar," consisting of twelve stories by "J. S. of Dale," a number of which appear in print now for the first time. The stories are specially notable for their quaintness and literary finish, the volume being ornamented by head-pieces by F. G. Attwood, and beautifully printed by De Vinne. "Our Arctic Province, Alaska, and the Seal Islands," profusely illustrated from the author's original drawings and watercolor paintings, besides being of the utmost interest to the general reader, is of great value and importance as a contribution to scientific research. Prof. Henry W. Elliott, long connected with the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, spent many years in Alaska, and writes the story of his own personal experience along with the history of the past and present of this deeply interesting country. Recent additions to the valuable line of standard works published by this house, and always acceptable gifts to cultured readers, are Henry M. Baird's "Huguenots and Henry of Navarre" "A History of the French Revolution" by H. Morse Stephens, the first volume of which is just issued. With the new year Messrs. Scribner start their long-expected Scribner's Monthly, which they mean to make a strong rival of the existing illustrated magazines, though at a lower price. Its full announcement will be found elsewhere.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD'S books are always calculated to endanger the keeping of the tenth conmandment. Art books, biographical works, historical works, theological works, fine editions of the classic gems of literature, etc., all combine against "Thou shalt not covet," and in the average book-loving heart come off victors. In art works proper the leading book is "Fashions and Follies of Our Grandfathers," one of those curious and fascinating compilations that have given Andrew W. Tuer his well-merited renown. text is taken from English magazines of note in 1807, giving amusing, characteristic insights into the aims, hopes, manners, customs, and experiences of our forefathers of that date. thirty-seven plate illustrations show ladies' and gentlemen's dress, sporting and coaching scenes, fanciful prints, portraits of celebrities, etc., as the magazine text suggested them to the pencil of Andrew W. Tuer. This text is printed on brown paper; the illustrations are mostly from copper-plates, hand-colored, and heightened with gold and silver. splendid work appears in quarto and demy octavo, many of the copies signed and numbered, and the price varies according to the mysterious reasons that determine the value of "large-paper," "earliest impressions," "numbers," and "signatures." Works of great interest and exquisite beauty are offered in "Female Costume Pictures," by Robert Beyschlag, twelve drawings reproduced in pastel and put up in handsome portfolio; and "Scenes from the Life of Our Saviour," also twelve drawings reproduced in pastel by H. The "Life and Hoffmann. Labors of Hablot Knight Browne" ("Phiz"), by David Grall Thompson, has one hundred and thirty full-page illustrations, and has received beartiful exterior advantages. The master sculptor Duprè, about whom little has thus far been given in English to English readers, is made the subject of a volume by Henry Simmons Frieze, President of Michigan University, and in it are incorporated two dialogues on art, translated from the Italian of August Conti; and Prof. A. J. Church, who has done such good work in making real "the days that are no more," has prepared a work founded on Arabian and Indian narratives, called "Stories of the Magicians," which is made even more valuable by many quaint and curious illustrations. "The Memoirs of Colonel Hutchinson," which was the first volume in the series of historical memoirs issued by the house, is followed by "The Memoirs of the Life of William Cavendish, Duke of Newcastle," by Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, a work Charles Lamb pronounced "both good and rare," to which has been appended "The True Relation of My Birth, Breeding, and Life," edited by C. H. Firth, a work which gives the Royalist side of England's great civil war as clearly as the memoirs of Colonel Hutchinson gave the Parliamentary side; and "The Autobiography of Edward Lord Herbert of Cherbury," with an introduction, notes, and appendices, and a continuation of the life from 1624 to the date of his death, together with an estimate of Herbert's place in English literature, philosophy, history, and religion. Beginning with the long line of Bibles and prayer-books to which attention is called every season, the house has many valuable religious works. Some new volumes have also been added to the Ideal Series, which contains some of the brightest short classics, made beautiful by the combined art of binders and printers.

W. J. Shuey, United Brethren Publishing House, Dayton, Ohio, has two or three books specially suited to the Christmas season. There is a new Christmas service, called "The Desire of All Nations," by Rev. E. S. Lorenz, "a missionary concert" containing a great variety of solos, quartets, and choruses for the choir, the Sunday-school, and even the infant class, and also some lively recitations and responsive services, all interesting and thoroughly practicable. For those who prefer to get up their own exercises there will be a useful help in "Christmas Selections," by the same author, containing forty-eight pages of the most charming and attractive recitations, readings, and dialogues suited to every age and talent; and "Christmas Cheer" provides a brilliant collection of Christmas music, also by Mr. Lorenz, including an easy, stirring anthem, with solos, trios, quartets, and choruses to show off the oldest and the youngest talents.

TICKNOR & Co.'s leading holiday works are among the most important art publications of the season. Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel" is brought out in the rich and finished style of "Marmion" and "The Lady of the Lake." illustrations are all new and by our most prominent artists. A description in detail will be found of this work on our front pages; also of Mrs. Browning's "Sonnets from the Portuguese," for which Ipsen has made a series of emblematical borders in his celebrated decorative style. This last work is a study for the artist, as well as a special joy to the book-lover. Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement's "Stories of Art and Artists," profusely illustrated and bound both in plain cloth and parchment, is a rarely interesting work and mess the demand for something different from thereulation holiday book. Its intrinsic value recommends it to all students. It is a complete resume of the history of art, with accounts of the various schools, sketches and anecdotes of all the great artists, with portraits and reproductions of their "Persia and the Persians," by Hon S. G. W. Benjamin, our late Minister to the court of Persia, is one of the most authentic works probably on this little known country that has ever been written. Mr. Benjamin has not confined himself to descriptions of places and scenery, and historical research and narrative, but goes into the modern literature and ancient poetry and legends of the country, also embodying his own amusing experiences as a government official. The attractive dress of the volume and its many interesting designs point to it as worthy of a place even among holiday gift-books. The real literary and historical merits of the work would make ita most valuable and delightful addition to the library shelves.

MARCUS WARD & Co. have done up their holiday gift-books into modest little volumes that are exquisitely pretty and sure to find admiring purchasers. They have chosen "Wordsworth" as the fitting addition to their Golden Poets. These little volumes are all golden except the good white paper; type, border-lines, and floral and decortive designs around the pages are all "gold that and we may be sure that anything glitters, thought worthy to be put in this shape is "all gold." In religious booklets so moderate in price that they may be used in place of Christmas cards. they have " Harps of Gold," a text-book for moreing; "Golden Lamps," a text-book for evening; and "Knocking," by the author of "Bible Forget-me-nots." These little gems of book-making it is hard to describe. The poetic thoughts, either taken from the Bible or composed upon some Bible text, are printed in gold and colors in type of beautiful variety. The illuminated letters, the designs of church symbols and plants mentioned in the Scriptures, are all modelled on the plan of the old missals, which these little offsprings are meant to commemorate. They are to be had in cloth, with appropriate covers, and also m paper.

WARD & DRUMMOND have appropriate volumes for this season in "Bible Pictures, and what they teach us," containing three hundred and twelve illustrations from the Old and New Testaments, with brief descriptions of their subects by the author of the "Story of the Bible;" and "Rest Days in a Journey to Bible Lands," a collection of sermons, by Dr. S. Dryden Phelps, reached in the four quarters of the globe. There of Botany in Harvard University, and the fifty-one handsomely colored plates by Isaac Sprague. It is oddly, but appropriately bound in smooth, dark cloth, with half-binding of light green cloth, with designs of wild flowers. The edges are bright yellow. It is put up in a box and guarded by a piece of red woollen cloth. A book of really permanent value is "Precious Stones in Nature, Art, and Literature," by S. M. Burnham, author is also a new edition of "Bridal Days," by Henry Miller, D.D., and W. D. Hedden, D.D., a timely gift-book for the wedding-day and all the following anniversaries. It is made pleasing to the eye with good print, heavy-toned paper, and neat silver and gold stamp on outside, and is protected by a box, so it can be sent to any part of the world where weddings are.

DANTE.

From "Stories of Art and Artists." (Copyright, 1886, by Ticknor & Co.)

Bradlee Whidden has a new edition of his magnificent gift-book, "American Wild Flowers," the descriptions by George L. Goodale, Professor of "Limestone and Marbles." Very few American works on precious stones exist, and thus far very meagre accounts have been given of American gems. The author has had very kind help from Mr. Geo. F. King, mineralogist and gemexpert in the employ of Messrs. Tiffany & Co., of New York City. Interesting accounts are given of stones in possession of historical collections and private individuals. The author's style is decidedly bright. A beautiful publication is "The Butterflies of New England," by C. J. Maynard, containing full descriptions of all the species, and having two hundred and thirty-two colored plates, giving every variety of gorgeous butterfly in life-size. The publisher is justly proud of this achievement in fine book-making.

WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN'S rich line of holiday books illustrates most forcibly the remarkable progress that is being made in this country in art and art printing. This enterprising young firm offer almost exclusively in their illustrated works the best fruits of our leading artists. Their books are not only notably in advance of anything heretofore sent out under their imprint, but are without exception unusually fine examples of "Notable Etchings by eir leading work. This artistic book-making. American Artists" is their leading work. comprises ten plates, folio size, with descriptive text and an essay on the etching of the past year by Ripley Hitchcock. A special purpose was kept in view in making this collection, that it should illustrate all the various phases of our current etching. Its catholicity and representative character are shown in the titles of the plates which we enumerate, which include an etching directly from nature, a painter-etching or two, and a variety of reproductive work. The subjects include landscape and figures and an example of the architecture of old New York, as follows: "Moorish Incense-Burner," by J. L. Jerome Ferris; "The White Rose," by Frederick W. Freer; "The Lily Pond," by Kruseman Van Etter; "Ça Pince," by James J. Calahan; "Old Trinity and Wall Street," by Frank M. Gregory; "The Old Bridge," by Leroy M. Yale; "The Bookworm," by Joseph F. Sabin; "After the Hounds," by W. H. Shelton; "Near Montigny," by Charles Volkman; and "St. Jerome," by W. St. John Harper. The work, it goes without saying, is elegantly gotten up. It is in the style of "Some Modern Etchings" and "Recent American Etchings," and in the same numerous varieties of proofs and portfolios. The Bird-Songs Series, illustrated by Fidelia Bridges, fulfils all the promises made for it, and more than comes up to the most roseate hued anticipations. It is a pleasure to chronick such a genuine success as these little books have made instantly. Not only are Miss Bridges birds lovely, life-like little creatures in drawing and color, but they are most charmingly grouped. The accessories to all the pictures are flowers indigenous to the birds' native place, and hence consistent and characteristic. The delicate coloring of the entire series of studies and the extremely beautiful manner in which it is printed. and the exquisitely dainty finish of the books, in their rich covers of shaded bronze with flowers and birds decorating them, place them among the most desirable souvenirs of the season. Miss Skelding, it will be remembered, edits the series, having selected the poetical studies that alternate with the plates. The numbers so far issued are "Songs of Birds," "Birds of Meadow and Grove," and "Songsters of the Branches." Like their popular predecessors, The Flower-Songs & ries, they are put up in the ivorine, sateen, and gilt-edged style of bindings. The same material embraced in these three books is used to form one larger volume bound in cloth under the name Familiar Birds and What the Poets Sing of hem." It makes a beautiful gift-book, the paer being a heavy linen with ample margins, and e binding luxurious in gold and colors. The me plates may again be had separately or in its, unbound, printed on water-color paper, to rve as studies for young artists. The new volme in The Hill and Dale Series is called "Flow-rs from Dell and Bower." It is the last volume I the series and includes the twelve plates and ading material of the later books of The Flowerongs Series. The plates of this volume-all ower studies—may also be had unbound, sepastely or in sets, for the use of art students. The uird series of "Good Things of Life" and sec-nd series of "Life's Verses" come to us uniform ith the previous volumes of the series. These ake rarely attractive gift-books, suitable for and cceptable to each and every member of the mily. The drawings in both books are clever nd spirited throughout, and uniformly refined, lough uproariously amusing. This house has later been making a specialty of etchings and phototchings for framing—always refined, desirable ifts for any season. They have issued two lovey studies, "Winter," after Auber, and a new tching, "Diffidence," by C. A. Worrall. They ave vellum and Japanese proofs besides the sual prints on etching-paper.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has borne in mind the eminine delight in calendars, text-books, etc., and has prepared some really unusually attractive presentation-books for daily reading, including a handsome line of birthday-books. Among the more noticeable are "Golden Thoughts from George Macdonald," whose writings lend themselves readily to excellent excerpt; "The Daily Renewal: being prayer, praise, and meditation for every day in the year," by Dr. Vaughan, Master of the Temple; "Flowers of Hope," a new Scripture text-book, printed in colors by the celebrated firm of E. Nister & Co., of Nüremberg; and "The Churchman's Birthday-Book," being extracts from the "Imitation." The Dickens, Shakespeare, and Tennyson Birthday-Books appear in beautiful new bindings.

THE WORTHINGTON Co., besides the various things prepared on American soil, have procured acceptable Christmas gifts in literature from the other side of the ocean. "Gems of Modern Art" is a series of engravings on steel, after works by Mulready, Leslie, Ward, J. M. W. Turner, Landseer, Maclise, Kaulbach, Rietschel, and other celebrated painters. "Examples of Recent Art" is a series of engravings after works by Constable, Turner, Aranda, Birch, Ary Scheffer, Gerome, De La Roche, Vibert, and other masters. "Studies in Modern French Art" is a series of monographs by "Edward Strahan," telling of the best French artists of the present day, and has sixty beautiful initials, head and tail pieces, facsimiles of original drawings, and steel-engravings. seems specially to centre in what is far away from home, and Russia and Japan are vying with each other in their claims on the curiosity of students. This house devotes two books to the latter country, one to its people, the other to its art. "The Keramic Art of Japan," by George A. Audsley and James L. Bowers, is illustrated with thirty chromo-lithographs, and has engravings of monograms in the text; while " Japan and the Japanese," by Aime Humbert, is illustrated by two hundred and seven drawings, and gives in excellent translation scenes in Japan as they came under the observation of the Envoy Extraordinary of the Swiss Confederation. There is also the valuable new revised Edinburgh edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia in ten volumes, than which no more suitable gift could be found for any writing friend.

E. & J. B. Young & Co. this year take Tom Hood's "The Knight and the Dragon," and Ernest M. Jessop has illustrated it in a style that makes it fully equal to the successes of former years, "The Jackdaw of Rheims," and "The Lay of St. Aloys." The fancy lettering, quaint designs, and happy conceits, seem as fresh sever. The knights that appear equal the dragon in fierceness and variety of form. The red in is used carefully and to great artistic advantage It is a work of lasting merit, of which illustrator and publisher and printer also may well be comtentedly proud. Although it would seem be every idea had been exhausted in the line of deendars, year-books, etc., there is a new one defered in the Peniel Series called "Heavenward" and it is just as pretty as appropriate, carefully selected verses, colored pictures of the delights of each season, fancy type, with tasteful borders, blue edges, and tiny square shape, can make it. The long line of Bibles and Prayers and Hymnas controlled by this house always make good Christmas gifts.

UNDER this heading is given, in the alphabetical order of their publishers, a descriptive summay of all the new books offered as specially suitable for the young.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION is no laggard in the race with books bound in the best style of the engraver's and binder's arts. For some years its issues have been characterized by neat and appropriate bindings. Now it has a line of juveniles both attractive and popular. At this season it adds to its catalogue three stories: "Changed Lives," by L. T. Rouse; "Snares and Safeguards," by C. M. Trowbridge; and "A Quiet Valley," by Agnes Giberne. With "Changed Lives" a series is completed containing "Wee Davie," "Marion," "The Sprag Boy," and "No Talent, and Phil's Pansies," all by popular authors; and with "A all by popular authors; and with "A Quiet Valley" another series containing "Gwendoline "and" No. 111 Winifred Place," all by Miss Giberne. For class use in the Sunday-school, it publishes the "Scholar's Handbook for 1887," and another "Handbook for the Junior Scholars," both by the Rev. Edwin W. Rice, D.D. The Union has departed from the severe style which commonly characterized this class of handbook or question-book. It has made them externally, especially that of "The Junior Handbook," very attractive with covers lithographed in fine colors. The scholars will prize the book and take pleasure in keeping it, and, in consequence of its wellprinted and illustrated pages, will be induced to read it.

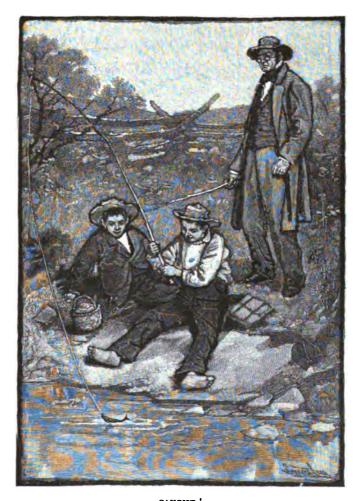

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY have published quite an array of juveniles during the year, all of which make good and suitable presents to Sunday-schools. "Hope Reed's Upper Windows," by Mrs. Henry, is the story of a young New England girl who goes bravely to work to help her mother instead of waiting for some great mission. The "upper windows the little moments of rest in her busy life. In "Dick Langdon's Career in Satan's Schools and Christ's Schools," Mrs. Herbert teaches the evils of disobedience deceit, Sabbath-breaking, prodigality, smoking, gambling, drinking, fighting, etc., and the blessings of faith, submission, truth, forgiveness, love, self-sacrifice, etc. "Duncan Kennedy's New Home" is in Scotland, and Mrs. " Duncan Rouse's aim is to inculcate the fourth commandment. Mrs. Butts tells of "Frolic Left Out," while her country friends are put into a story; Miss Hopkins' "Tall Chestnuts of Vandyke" is the history of a club of school-children and their lovely teacher; "The Foxwood Boys at School will be welcome to all who remember what bright reading the author, Mrs. Allan, put into "Vacation Days at Foxwood," published two years agr, and a very timely story is the Rev. E. A. Races "Her Christmas and Her Easter," the story of Margaret Searle, who at fourteen resolves to to her duty to others in the busy seaport town which she lives. Aunt Ruth, a confirmed invalid, is of great help to her brave little nice. For readers who like travel and description welcome books are ready in Gill's "Jottings from the Pacific;" Mitchell's "Scenes in Southern India;" and Duke's "Along River and Road in Fuh-Kien."

A. C. Armstrong & Son again offer boys a book of Gordon Stables with the promising tise "From Pole to Pole." It is a tale of the sea of course, and is prettily dedicated "to my aindear dantie Dot, by her husband and lover, the author." The voyage from pole to pole is undertaken in the good ship Albatross. She is owned by six friends who are sailing on her for a pleasant vacation. There are some ladies on board, too, the captain's wife and daughter. On ship and in port there is some love-making to break the monotony of instructive description. There are twelve illustrations, and the cover is dazzling with a silver aurora borealis, silver icebergs, an inky sky with silver stars, a black ship and silver sea-gulls, gold and black lettering, red seals etc. In "The Churchette" the young people will find a year's sermons and parables for the young, by Rev. J. Reid Howatt, who evidently remembers how hard it is for children to listen to commonplace sermons, and makes his little texts bright with illustrations from daily life and little openings for a Sunday smile. He dedicates his pretty little work "to my wife and bairns, from whom! have learned more of the ways and wants of children's hearts than from all other earthly teach-It is a good book to read to children and one that they can grow interested in themselves. "The Good Fight; or, more than conquerors. is a handsome volume by Rev. J. Hunt and others, telling the story of Christian martyrs and heroes with much vivacity. The large print, red borders, elegant initial letters, and the really fine work on the illustrations make it a showy ro-ume, which the critical London Academy pronounces " one of the handsomest books we have received this winter.

ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS have all their old favorites in new holiday dress, and add some new aspirants for favor to their well-filled list. "Richard and Robin," by Mrs. Banks, gives a delightful picture of life among children in a large family; Mrs. Tucker's "Pictures of St. Paul" gives the whole life of the great apostle, interwoven in a very good story; Mrs. Conklin's "That Quisset House" is a story teaching the evils of selfishness by a good plot and many excellent characters; and "My Pearl," by Alida W. Graves, tells about many pleasant ways to spend Sunday, which Agnes Spencer considers her venile books and nice stories for boys and girls.

pearl, and does not wish to have a lost jewel. The Gillette Series, begun this year, have been very successful. There are six volumes, each one dealing with the life of one of the members of the Gillette family, and each one intending to tell the advantages and disadvantages of certain traits of the little heroes. Mrs. Robbins, whose Win and Wear Series was so pleasing to little readers, is the author of these books. They are called, respectively, "Dick," "Nan," "Bert," "Jack," "Bab," and "Will," and are interesting to both boys and girls and very useful in the Sunday-school library. There are other libraries, "Picture Rhymes for Happy Times," by J. S. Locke, is a delightful combination of big pictures and simple, easy verses; "All Sorts of Children," by Alice Wellington Rollins, consists of page pictures of children and animals and a few lines of easy reading-matter; "Flower Fairies," by Maria E. Whittemore, is a prettily illustrated alphabetlarge letters, verses, and floral decorations, all printed in brown ink; "Album of Animals" contains a large picture on every page; "The Merry-Go-Round" is a charming collection of rhymes and pictures by Mary D. Brine; "The Little Doings of Some Little Folks." by Chatty Cheerful, is also full of pictures, and so is "Cheerful Chatter for Little Folks." Add to these "Little Folks" and "Bo-Peep," "Bright Rays for Dull Days," "Christmas Dreams," "Clover Blossoms," "Ding Dong Bell," "Wee Little Rhymes for Wee Little People," and many more that we have not space to mention. They are all quartos, having the same general characteristics of big pictures, large print, and brilliant lithograph covers. Their line of story-books is exceedingly in-teresting: "Tales of the Sixty Mandarins" re-call the wonders of the "Arabian Nights," and are imbued with a keen, trenchant vein of humor. Even grave and learned Prof. Henry Morley found them quite entrancing. Two stories writ-ten especially for girls are "A World of Girls," by L. T. Meade, and "The King's Command," by Maggie Symington; the first is a tale of boardingschool life, full of incidents, the latter verges upon a love story almost, as it does not leave its heroine until she is married. "Under Bayard's Banner," by Henry Firth, retells the romantic story of the Chevalier Bayard, and is replete with battles, marvellous escapes, and dashing episodes. "Behind Time" is a charming fairy tale by George Parsons Lathrop, and the ways of the children of the Arctic regions are narrated by Lieut. Frederick Schwatka in "Children of the Cold." Other stories of adventure and travel that Christmas buyers would probably find just the thing they want are included in their list, but those that we have mentioned are among the most important.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have just published a new "Boy's Book of Sports," edited by Maurice Thompson. All the work on this volume has been deliberately and carefully done, and a book of more than ordinary interest is the result. Many of the chapters of this handsomely and elaborately illustrated volume have already appeared in St. Nicholas Magazine. "Marvin and His Boy Hunters," by Maurice Thompson, is the longest story in the volume, and is intended to teach boys a careful and intelligent use of the shot-gun. Besides this there are stories and essays on boating and boat-building, fishing, archery, camping-out, swimming, walking, amateur photographing, skating, tobogganing, etc. All are intended to promote a taste for healthful amusement in the open air. The various sports are treated by such well-known experts as Ripley Hitchcock, Charles Ledyard Norton, W. L. Alden, Daniel C. Beard, Frank E. Clark, and many others. The Century folks have also prepared for the fall season a new edition of the "St Nicholas Songs," and have put "Babyhood" is new covers at lower prices than of old.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. provide liberally for the young people. They have quite a line of good, readable books, with all the added advantages of good type, paper, binding, and illustrations Sarah K. Bolton has written a companion volume to "Poor Boys Who Became Famous," calling it "Girls Who Became Famous." It is a garland of celebrated names-women known the world over for their literary or scientific achievements, or for their philanthropic efforts. A "Boys' Book of Famous Rulers," by Lydia Hoyt Farmer, is in the same line as the former volume, treating of the lives of Julius Cæsar, Frederick the Great Napoleon, and other heroes of historic fame. A continuation of "Birchwood" and "The Fitch Club" will be found in "The Riverside Museum."

"Jak," as the author calls himself, both instructs and amuses in these works. The latest volume gives some excellent suggestions to young people of how to make a very interesting collection of the flora and fauna of their immediate vicinity. "The Christmas Country" is a book of new fairy tales from the Danish and German, translated by Mary J. Safford. They are charming narrations of the purely marvellous, illustrated by Charles Copeland in characteristic style. "In Perils Oft" embraces stories of daring deed in the characteristic style. and adventure by such men as Sir Sidney Smith, Vambéry, Lieut. Schwatka, General Gordon, and They are told by W. H. Davenport Adams, the book being issued uniform with four other favorite boys' books, "Off to the Wilds,"
"Martin, the Skipper," "Mutiny on the Leander," and "Watchers on the Longships."

Dodd, Mead & Co. have in "Blue Jackets of '61" a book rich in instruction and entertainment "for young people." In a former generation such books were written for "boys" only, but a more polite and appreciative generation does not consider "girls" barred out, through deficiency of interest or intellect, from a work dedicated wholly to "grim-visaged war"—hence the author's courteous sub-title, "for young people." Mr. Willis G. Abbott comes of a literary family, inheriting from his grandfather, John S. C. Abbott, a love of historical research. His work is a history of the Northern navy during the late war, told in a graphic, direct way, from the bombardment of Fort Sumter to the fall of Fort Fisher. The narrative abounds in brilliant, desperate sea fights, in which the courage of North and South is equally displayed. W. C. Jackson's vigorous illustrations add to the book very much, and its novel binding attracts immediate attention. The latter is of blue and white canvas, with heavy gold lines. "The Children of the Week," a thick quarto in large print, on rich white paper, and with numerous illustrations, is for more tender years than the preceding volume. The Red Indian on a copper penny tells the stories it comprises within its covers to a lonely little lame boy, who is fancifully denominated Alexander Selkirk, Jr., by a sympathetic but poor little shop-girl. The stories are original and quite humorous, and of an order to please youthful minds. William Theodore Peters is the author, the pictures having been made by Clinton Peters.

"Two Thousand Years Ago," by Prof. A. J.
Church, dealing with the life and adventures of Lucius Marius, a young Roman boy, and the exploits of the gladiator Spartacus, appeals to thinking and reading boys who like a book full of action and not too learned. Especially for girls are the new volumes of the immortal "Elsie" and "Mildred" families, namely, "Elsie's Kith and Kin" and "Mildred's Boys and Girls," and a new novel by Martha Farquaharson, "The Thorn in the Nest." These are authors of whom the young never seem to tire; hence no mistake can be made in adding them to the school-room book-shelf, or placing them at the foot of the Christmas-tree.

E. P. DUTTON & Co.'s juveniles are all for very young children, although their color-books are sufficiently artistic to find a place on the drawing-room table. They have three new ones for this season which have been printed with unusual care by the famous Nister, of Nucesburg, while the best color and monotint artists of England were secured to make the illustrations. Naming them in the order of their importance they are: "All Around the Clock," "Under the Mistletoe," and "Christmas Roses." Harriet M. Bennett is the artist of the first and Lizzie Lawson of the second and third. It is difficult to isdividualize them, as their subjects are so similar. They all deal with the games and little pleasures and joys of child-life, each having alternate pages in bright colors and monotints. The color page are full-page pictures, of children mostly, briliantly but beautifully colored, and full of interest and action. The monotint pages are of the decorative order, encircling pretty jingling venes. Mr. Robert Ellis Mack is the writer of all the verses that appear in the three pretty quartor. He has a special gift for this style of wring, his poems being most quaint and musical and generally containing a little story. The illustrations of "All Around the Clock" are striking bold and spirited, and the cover design, a deplcation of one of the inside pictures, is of usual merit. It would almost sell a worthless book it takes the fancy so entirely on sight. It shows group of three little "tots," waiting the striking of a Swiss cuckoo clock. The tender outline of their little expectant faces, and the strength and grace of their sturdy little legs, go right to the mother's heart. Two cheaper quartos in lithographed covers are "Ingle-Nook Stories" by Mrs. Stanley Leathes, four fairy tales, illustrated in black and white by M. Irwin, and "A Sx Years' Darling," by Ismay Thom. The latters a continuous story, devoted to an account of a be country girl's first visit to London. J. Pym hes the illustrations and graphically sets forth adventures at the "Zoo," at Madame Tusffs wax works, and at the other sights of the witch in which children delight.

FIES & LAURIAT are quite up to their generized of former years in their provision for young people. Dickens' "Child's History of gland" is brought out in a new edition, with the illustrations by A. de Neuville, Emile yard, F. Lix, and others, and a most gayly decuted cover, with knights and chargers on one le and a view of the castle of Chillon on the other. The "Young Folks' History of the Netherlands" is by Alexander Young, and designed for mature as well as young readers. It gives an independent view of the researches of Dutch and Belgian scholars, although acknowledging the author's indebtedness to Motley, Prescott, Davies, Grattan, etc. It is profusely illustrated. By means of much pleasure very important information can be acquired in reading "Three Vassar Girls on the Rhine." These fortunate travellers have now reached this historic river, so famed in song and story, and the indefatigable "Champ" has again made all they see real by copious and appropriate illustrations. The cover is gay with a Rhenish castle, river view, and the Prussian eagles on reddish ground on one side, and an ivyencircled Holland windmill on the other. After travelling through Europe, Classic Lands, the Orient, the Occident, Northern Lands, the Levant, and Acadia, the restless Zigzaggers now take a "Zigzag Journey in the Sunny South" and visit the scenes and feel the associations of the early American settlements in the Southern States and the West Indies. The book is full of historic anecdotes and of pictures of the chief cities of Florida, Mexico, and the West Indies, and also of the natives and their daily occupations. For the younger children there are many highly colored square quartos, containing exciting stories of "Queer Dollies," "How a Village Full of Children Ran Away," "The Pigs' Chowder Party," "The Little Cookie Boy," "Pussie's Queer Babies," and "A Trip to the Moon." The periodicals that charm faithfully from week to week are gathered into books and bound in fetching outside covers. "The Prize" opens every month with a highly colored illustration, and takes its fascinating pictures from every kind of topic in-teresting to children; "The Nursery" gives one hundred and ninety original illustrations, and a very pretty cover trimmed with children of all ages; and "Our Little Ones and the Nursery" shows Oliver Optic's skilful editorship, and is beautified by 375 original illustrations. The authorized "Chatterbox" is fully up to its wellestablished fame and contains reading for a year.

HARPER & BROTHERS present a book for children which is an old friend and always new in the bound volume of Harper's Young People, which for 1886 has some new and delightful features. making it, if possible, more charming than ever It comprises a whole library of literature. The serials complete in the volume are "Two Arrows," by Wm. O. Stoddard; "False Witness;" and "Joe's Opportunity," by Mrs. Lucy C. Lille.
"The Flaming Feather," by Kirke Murroe, and "Silent Pete," by James Otis. The articles on sports and animals are exhaustive, especially those on boat-building and on dogs and elephants. The Post-Office Box department has proved specially fascinating to young subscribers. There is also a department for exchange, and some very good bargains have been made through its columns. Thomas R. Knox has added to his already popular Boy Traveller Series "Boy Travellers in Resia." The accomplished mentor, Dr. Brosson takes Frank Bassett and Fred. Bronson from Vienna to the Caspian Sea, and shows themeraything of historic and political interest by the way The conversations on the "Eastern Question" at excellent and make the difficulties that have are between England and Russia lucid and instructing "Silent Pete, or, the stowaways," is one d James Otis' little masterpieces. The story a the timid, impractical musician who is taken an of by two rough-and-ready, warm-hearted street Arabs, is touchingly told, and the voyage they all take to America as stowaways is graphically and comically given. All the volumes in the Young People series are just what healthy children like. In fact, nothing ever gets into Harper's Young People that is not good enough to keep up interest there, and take a new lease of life when it gets into separate covers. The child who is the happy possessor of the previous bound volumes will have another reason to bless "Santa Claus and Mr. Harper" when the new volume is added to his or her library, and those who have not yet begun a set may be very thankful to put the seventh volume first upon their pet book-shelf.

THOMAS R. KNOX & Co. have ready for the holidays a large number of juveniles; some, old favorites, which have been out of print for some time. Teachers starting out on the troublesome expedition of buying books for Sunday-school scholars would do well to take a look at the books of this house. "Elizabeth, or, the exiles of Siberia." Where fairy tales are allowed "La Fontaine's Fables," translated by Elizur Wright and brightened up by pictures by J. J. Granville; "Oriental Fairy Tales," from the German of Herder, Liebeskind, and Krummacher; and "Fairy Tales and Legends of Many Nations," by C. B. Burkhardt, will prove acceptable. "Peter Drake's Dream," and "Right and Wrong, or, Agnes and Rose," Mary Howitt's pretty stories, read almost as well as ever in their new dress; "Lucy's Half Crown, and How She Earned It," will draw tears as it used to do; and "Amy Deane, or, patient waiting," is by Virginia F. Townsend, and many, many girls think "she's just splendid." There is also a new edition of that work of an unknown genius, "Mother Goose's Melodies," with all the quaint old designs of Billings that have been explained to babies long before they could talk or walk since first this nursery treasure was ready for use. People filling missionary boxes or giving presents to hospitals and country mission churches can find good material in these new issues of old favorites.

LEE & SHEPARD'S books for the young are all by well-known and favorite writers. Any one volume on their list will be almost sure to give pleasure to a child fond of reading. "All Taut," by Oliver Optic, in The Boat-builders Seria, carries on the nautical instruction inaugurated with the first volume of the series. The Beach Hill Industrial School becomes in a measure reformatory, making the bad Topovers more tractable, but not interfering with the boys' work, which in this volume is to learn to rig a fore-and-aft schooner. J. T. Trowbridge has written two new stories for the boys—"The Little Master" and "His One Fault"—also combining instruction and amusement. The first is devoted to expounding some new school theories that older readers will find suggestive. The sister of Sophie May, the author of "Little Prudy," has written a story in the vein of the Prudy Series called "Little Miss Weezy." The little people will find that "Penn Shirley" can write stories very nearly as funny and real as dear "Sophie May." An "almost true story" is "The Young Wrecker of the Florida Reef," by Richard Meade Bache, being the trials and adventures of Fred Ransom. The incidents are drawn from real life, the book being a capital one for boys. "Young Folks' Pictures and Stories of Animals," by Mrs. Sanborn Tenney, is a series of six little books in board covers. They are designed to teach natural history to little folks, and contain over fix hundred illustrations true to nature, engrared and printed in the best manner. The books ar named "Birds," "Quadrupeds," "Bees and Other Insects," "Fishes and Reptiles," "Sea Urchins Star Fishes, and Corals," and "Sea Shells and River Shells." This house has added to its "dolar" juveniles three new sets of books—"The Live Boys Series," containing six volumes, "The Castaway Stories," six volumes, and "The Wik Scenes Library," five volumes,

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have several juveniles that seem planned on the oft-proved fat that children "want to know." "A Boy Wanderer" is a translation of Hector Malot's "No Relations," under which title it was published some years ago. This name failed to give an idea of its juvenile character, and therefore it has been thought wise to bring it out under a name that will make boys desirous to read of the advenures, trials, and pleasures of the hero founding. The original French engravings are added to the attractions of this well-made book. The materials for the tales in "Boys' Own Stories" are supplied by writers who, as mere boys or lads, have had stirring episodes of history or adventure to relate from their own experience. These stories will be appreciated by more thoughtful youngsters, who will gain a series of glimpses into the state of Europe during the lives of our grandfathers, and learn pleasantly many things that have happened to the boys who have left a name in the world. "Our Young Folks' Encyclopædia of Travel" is a combination in one volume of "Our Young Folks Abroad" and "Our Young Folks in Africa," the two books of travel that make James D. McCabe so great a favorite with readers of roving tastes. Young people always are interested in animals, and two handsome books have been provided to please them in this direction, one called "Birds: Their Homes and Their Habits," the other "Animals: Their Homes and Their Habits." Both of these are by Uncle Warren, who has not been too scientific but still teaches all the leading facts about egglaying and milk-bearing animals. The pictures are very numerous and of excellent quality. The perennial favorites by Uncle Lawrence are all gotten up in fresh covers and sold at reduced prices, and many boys will prefer to the newer aspirants for favor the time-tried "Young Folks' Whys and Wherefores," "Young Folks' Queries," and "Young Folks' Ideas."

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. call attention once more to their beautiful juvenile, "Friends and Foes from Fairyland." The author is Knatchbull-Hugessen, who wrote "Crackers for Christmas" and "Tales of Tea-Time," and who is known in English society as Lord Brabourne. "Friends and Foes from Fairy-Land" comprises three or four fairy tales of the good old-fashioned types—about benevolent and evil elves, giants and fairies, and other inhabitants of the enchanted land. Little readers will delight in it, it is so simple, and yet so imaginative and poetical. Linley Sambourne, the renowned London Punch artist, has done very successful work on the illustrations.

D. LOTHROP & Co. keep abreast of their former record as to quantity, and go a step ahead in the quality of their provision for children of all ages and sizes. A book that will fascinate boys, and many girls also, is "All Among the Lighthouses," by Mary Bradford Crowninshield (wife of Commander Crowninshield). Johnny Braine and Cortland Delano are invited by their uncle, Captain Grimes, who is government lighthouse in-spector, to go with him on one of his quarterly trips along the coast. The reader who goes with the boys, and listens to their talks about the different ingenious arrangements for lighting at the more important stations, will learn many things new and strange. The volume is profusely illustrated from photographs and original drawings, and is elegantly bound. Margaret Sidney has three new volumes, "Two Modern Princes in the Tower," "Polly," and "Hester, and other New England Stories," which tells of "Aunt Em'line's Crazy Quilt" in a way that will cheer and interest all who have ever made or intend to make a crazy quilt. Laura D. Nichols tells the story of "Nellie Marlow in Washington;" Mrs. Jessie Benton Frémont has ready "Souvenirs of My Time," a large book full of personal reminiscences of famous people, celebrated places, and notable events; and Mary E. Bamford, of California, offers "My Land and Water Friends," full of facts about animals of all kinds, told in a way to make children care to read it again and again. Young people can learn in a delightful way from "Stories of American History," and "Stories of Foreign Lands," by Pansy; "The Story Book of Science," by Mary Hoyt Farmer; "Adventures of Columbus," by Mrs. F. A. Humphrey; and "Real Fairy Folks," by Lucy J. Rider, who has succeeded in arranging a series of object lessons on chemistry that give scientific facts in a charming way, the author claiming to evolve the fairies out of the liquids, solids, and gases that undergo continuous changes in chemical analysis. "Bre-O-Baby Ballads," by Charles Stuart Pran, is dedicated to all the boys and all the girls in all the world. The illustrations; of exquisite delicacy, by F. Childs Hassam, have been reproduced in color. Children appear in every style of dress and undress, going to bed, getting up, at breakfast, driving out, playing all kinds of games. On the margius are exquisite little designs in neutral The cover is "æsthetic" and the edges green. It is a very pretty book, almost too mee for baby fingers. In "The Adventures of Am," Mary E. Wilkins relates the events of colonial times; "Golden Year" is a great quarto of short stories; and "Pansy's Sunday Book" is brisming over with good things to read to the little ones when it is nurse's "Sunday out." The various magazines published by the house have all put on their Christmas jackets, and Wide Amak, Babyland, Our Little Men and Women, and the Pansy vie with each other for the preference of fond fathers and mothers. It is well known that these magazines command some of the best and most popular talent of the day.

MACMILLAN & Co.'s juveniles are always readable and always presented in handsome shape. The ever-popular Mrs. Molesworth has a new story ready, called "Four Winds Farm," in which she has again had the advantage of having her text showed off by Randolph Caldecott's illustrations. Miss Yonge has a new historical work, called "A Victorian Half Centuy," and there are bright stories entitled "Madame Tabby's Establishment," by Miss Hughes, which has illustrations; "The Tale of Troy," done into English by Aubrey Stewart; and "The Moon Maiden and Other Stories," by Jessie Greenwood.

THOMAS NELSON & Sons have their usual generous supply for the young folks, all gotten up in tempting shape. "The Children's Tour; or, everyday sights in a sunny land," and "The Meadows Family; or, fireside stories of adventure and enterprise," are by M. A. Paull; "In the Bush and On the Trail," is a book for boys, by Benedict Revoil, telling of adventures in the forests of North America. In "With Pack and Rifle in the Far Southwest," Achilles Daunt tells of adventures in New Mexico, Arizona, and Central America; and in "The Land of the Moose, the Bear, and the Beaver," the same author describes the forest of Athalesca, in British North America. In story-books proper there are: "Thy Kingdom Come," a tale for boys and girls; "Seeking a Country," by Rev. E. N. Hoare; "At the Pastor's," by the author of "The Swedish Twins;" "Through Storm to Sunshine;" "The Little "Through Storm to Sunshine;" "The Little Ones," by Dorothy Walrond; "A Little Candle, and Other Stories," by Letitia McClintock; "Pets and Playfellows: or, stories about cats and dogs," by Mrs. Snow; and "Heroism in Humble Life," a good temperance story. The "Children's Treasury of Pictures and Stories for 1886" is full of entertainment; and there are three new series: The Emerald, containing three volumes; The Pink Sash Library, four volumes, and The Busy Bee Library, of five volumes. There are also new editions of all the old favorites. This house always makes a feature of its bindings for juveniles, and the books look as gay and tempting and durable as ever.

NIMS & KNIGHT have an excellert juvenile in "Boys" Useful Pastimes," described by Prof. Robert Griffith, principal of the Newton High School. It is full of pleasant and profitable amusements for spare hours, has chapters on the use and care of tools, and detailed instructions by means of which boys can make with their own hands a large number of toys, household ornaments, scientific appliances, and many pretty, amusing, and necessary articles for the playground, the house, and out-of-doors. Three hundred illustrations make the text clear and give brightness to the pages. The house also has two fine art color-books, "Kasper Krook's Kaleidoscope," and "Tell-tale from Hill and Dale," two books of verses specially written by Laura E Richards, illustrated by A. Hochstein, and printed in color and monotint. These books are bound in boards with handsome lithographed cover.

PHILLIPS & HUNT have a book for American boys by May A. Roe. The title is "Left in the Wilderness," a story of pioneer life in Ohio. Boys in the pleasant society of Joe and Haroli Perry and Johnny Appleseed will take delight in the account of the rude and daring life of the people and the haunts and habits of the birds and wild animals of Ohio when it was still the bome of Indians. Other juveniles are "The Amber Star," a fair half-dozen by M. L. Dickinson; "No," by Rose Terry Cooke, first published in Our Youth; "Dorothy Delafield," by Mary Harriot; a new volume in Up the Ladder Stria by E. A. Rand, entitled "Manhood—out of the breakers" and "The Daughter of Pharooh," a tale of the Exodus, by Fred. Myron Colby. They have also a beautiful quarto edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress," with one hundred illustrations by Frederick Barnard and others, engraved by the Dalziel Brothers.

PORTER & COATES have welcome volumes for boys and girls in their additions to their various series. The fourth volume of the Atlantic Series is "Helping Himself; or, Grant Thornton's ambition," in which Horatio Alger tells of a country minister's son who, finding his father has run into debt for the necessaries of life, goes to New York City, finds work in Wall Street, and has a career of almost unbroken success. The third volume of the Log Cabin Series is "Footprints in the Forest," by E. S. Ellis, giving an account of Jack's and the Indian Deerfoot's adventures in search of the German boy, whom they succeed in finding after many hardships and dangers. The new volume in the Forest and Stream Series is "Joe Wayring at Home," in which Harry Castlemon lets a fly-rod tell the story of fishing adventures in New England lakes and rivers. Margaret Vandegrift is always sure of girl-readers, who all think "she's too lovely for anything." Her new offering is "Ways and Means." It tells of a young girl whose relations were disappointed because she was not a boy, her grandfather especially. Poor Muriel suffers very much in her childhood, but finally conquers her grandfather's heart, and on his death-bed he leaves her his fortune, and she spends it in doing lasting, practical good to many unfortunate children. Every girl can learn much of interesting unselfishness from Muriel Douglas. A specially interesting book translated from the German, of Julia Sutter, and very timely in that it relates the story of the birth of Christ, is "The Bethlehemites." It is said to remind one strongly of "Ben-Hur" in its manner of treating the subject.

JAMES POTT & Co. have ready a new edition of their deservedly popular "Child's Pictorial Bible," and have this year gotten it up in various bindings, one of the most striking being a beautiful leather representing bamboo wood. In delicate tan shades this is really beautiful.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION, although publishing under a sectarian name, turn out juveniles, not only of excellent quality, but that can be safely recommended to readers of every denomination. "The Professor's Girls," by Anette Lucile Noble, who understands so well the faults, follies, and temptations of very young girls, tells the story of the daughters of a New England professor; "Roland's Daughter," by Julia McNair Wright, is an excellent temperance tale; "Uncle Seth's Will," by Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin, is made in favor of his niece, who fulfils all its peculiar conditions most faithfully; "Griffin Alley Folk," by Ernest Gilmore, is a rather sad story written in the cause of temperance; "Mabel's Summer in the Himalayas," by Mrs. Helen H. Holcomb, teaches much that is instructive about India in a style suited to very young readers; "Water Harmsen," by E. Gerdes, is a tale of Reformation times in Holland; and "Wood, Hay, and Stubble," by Kate Hamilton, tells the wretchedness of a life of shams, whether in the household or in the religious life. Ella Rodman Church has three of her charming vol-umes, entitled "Flower Talks at Elmridge,"

"Among the Trees at Elmridge." and "Talk by the Seashore." "The Chester Coterie" tells a a winning way how a circle of young people contrived in an honorable way to raise money for church purposes, and gives many useful hims about work, fairs, etc. All these books are interesting and entertaining and can safely be put a any Sunday-school library.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS' juveniles are always as attractive as they are instructive and helpful There are two new additions to the Story of the Nations Series, and by the end of the year it will contain the histories of Greece, Rome, the Jews. Chaldea, Assyria, the Saracens, Hungary, Spain, Norway, (Germany, Carthage, Moors in Span, Alexander's Empire, Ancient Egypt, the Norman. and the Persians, all told by writers who have made these countries special studies and all told in a way that shows sympathy with the youthal way of looking at such subjects, and giving the facts in agreeable shape, suited to intelligent boyish and girlish readers. Another most admirable series is The Boys' and Girls Library if American Biography, in which the first volume. "Robert Fulton and Steam Navigation," by This W. United States Medal of Honor, which was instituted by Congress at the instance of Washington, is the only authorized military decoration for valor in this country, and this volume has been planned to present some of the most stirring and dramatic incidents connected with the history of the Medal. The narratives are in many cases related by the actors. The first volume in the "Scriptures for Young Readers" has proved a decided success,

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. offer only one new juvenile, but illustrate once more the adage that "good things come in small parcels," in this "A Very Simple Story" in which Florence Montgomery writes the chronicle of the thoughts and feelings of a child, something in the very popular style of Mrs. Ewing. The pages are printed on excellent paper with wide margins within line rules. The outside is decorated with a mouse in cap and apron, watching little "Maye" gather posies. The story is in the best style of the eloquent author of "Misunderstood." Like all successful juveniles, it appeals strongly to older readers. "Bible Stories from the Old Testament" in two volumes, "The Pilgrim's Progress" for the little ones, and "From the Crib to the Cross" have been revised and put up in a neat box, and will make a handsome show as a Sunday-school prize.

ROBERTS BROTHERS' holiday books for young people are numerous and of excellent quality. Heading the list is Miss Louisa M. Alcott's latest, " Jo's Boys, and How They Turned Out." Every girl and boy who read "Little Men" will want to know how Dan and Nat, Denis, Stuffy and Teddy did turn out, and must surely have a copy of the last and concluding chronicles of the celebrated March family. If all the thousands of readers of the previous volumes of the series come to the front, it will prove almost impossible to print an edition of "Jo's Boys" large enough to supply the probable demand. Two other large and equally famous families seem likely to be forever disposed of this season, the Carrs and the Peterkins. Susan Coolidge goes on to tell the concluding events in Katy Carr's career, bringing her to the brink of matrimony in "What Katy Did Next," and telling of an eventful tour she made in Europe. And "The Last of the Peterkins," from Lucretia P. Hale, apparently loses that world-renowned family in the neighborhood of the Pyramids, not, however, before letting us into the serres of Eliza Elizabeth's commonplace book and asfording us the privilege of listening to her great essay upon the sun. It will be regretted by the friends of the Peterkins, as much as it is lamented by the Peterkins themselves, that "the lady from Philadelphia" is no longer within consulting distance. Her absence is, however, in a measure made up for by some stories of "others of ther kind." "Key-Hole Country," by Gertrude Jedon, is one of the many books "Alice in Wonderland" is responsible for. It tells of a little girl who followed a queer little old woman through a key-hole, and found herself in a wosderful country, where she met some familiar nursery friends and had a good time generally. "Uncle, Peep, and I," by Mary Cowden-Clark, is called "a child's novel," but there is nothing in it that children from twelve to fourteen could not comprehend and enjoy. We suppose it is called a novel because it trenches somewhat on the subject of love and matrimony, but this is an outside issue, there being plenty of child-talks at episodes of child-life, "Peep and I" being a limb orphan boy and girl who go to live with an oil uncle who has been a sea-captain. All these books that we have specified are illustrated and sent out in gay holiday attire. A delightful wiume, translated and adapted by Susan Couling from the French of M. Arnaud, is "One Day is a Baby's Life." It is a quarto in illumi covers, with thirty-two full-page illustrations by F. Bouisset printed in colors. The little adm and actress in this pretty comedy from real in are Jean and Jeannette, two little French children whom we follow through all the petty acts of their uncomplicated day. The artist shows then in the act of rising, bathing, breakfasting, walking, talking, dining, attending a fancy dress party. and so on. His graceful, delicate designs are exquisitely colored, the little work forming one of the most notable and desirable fine-art juveniles of the season. The three new volumes of Man Ewing's charming stories must not be for Few children that will not think any one of t a prize to be cherished and dreamed over year through. The ones most recently issued by this house are: "Melchior's Dream." "Lob Liby-the-fire," and "A Flat-iron for a Farthing.

George Routledge & Sons have their usual rich array of Christmas good things for children of all ages. Three quarto volumes by Heles Ainslie Smith are specially noticeable as combining instruction and amusement in an unusually high degree. "One Hundred Famous Americans" embraces within a bright and characterists cover brief biographical sketches of our leading men and women, which aim to be authentic and at the same time attractive to young readers. The many portraits and pictures are great additions to the text. "Animals, Wild and Tame." and "Birds and Fishes" teach young people mat-ural history through the easy medium of big colored pictures, large type, and easy words. Major-General A.W. Drayson has in "The White Chief of the Caffres" written a book for boys full of adventures and thrilling experiences in South Africa. "The Big Otter," a tale of the great Nor'west, is one of R. M. Ballantyne's famous books of sport and travel incident, illustrated with many full-page pictures by E. J. Wheeler. "Carol's Little Daughter" is of a milder type of juvenile than the two preceding, being expressly for irls. Routledge's "Every Boy's Annual for 887" and "Every Girl's Annual for 1887" carcely need any heralding. They never miss heir welcome with young readers, their wealth of hoice reading and pictures making them a contant source of pleasure to their fortunate owners. The same may be said of the bound volume, "Little Vide-Awake for 1887," now in the thirteenth year of its publication. Little maids and little boys just learning their letters have had a book made especially for them by Kate Greenaway. "A Apple Pie," she calls it, illustrating with big letters, charming figures of boys and girls, and all the colors of the rainbow, the old song of the alphabet—"A was an apple pie, B bit it, C cut it," and so on, as every child has recited in its earliest stages of intellectual development. Walter Crane's new Christmas book, "Baby's Own Æsop," is, like Kate Greenaway's, a specimen of Edmund Evans' fine color printing. It is a companion volume to "Baby's Opera," and lovely in text and illustrations. "Wide Awake Stories," "Topsy-Turvy dard. "The Book of Romps," printed in colors, and "Linley Sambourne's Alphabet," are to be borne in remembrance, as they are just the books for the season, and for the little members of the family who keep up the old traditions of the Christmas stocking.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" a work with unusual claims to popularity. Although written for young people it obtained in its course through the St. Nicholas Magazine as many mature readers as young ones. The story is certainly one of the best we have had from Mrs. Burnett's pen, and will no doubt in time take a permanent place among juvenile classics. No boy or girl who reads of the brave, spirited little lord, with his beautiful faith in his "Dearest" and in his wicked old uncle, the earl, but will be made better and happier, from the telling lessons so touchingly told, that his pure, unselfish life teaches. The story is not devoid of humor either, moving as readily to laughter as to tears—Fauntleroy's Americanisms and his firm friendship for Hobbs being full of a most charming quaintness. The original illustrations by R. B. Birch, that so graphically interpreted the text, adorn this handsome volume. We can wish nothing better for all the members of the household than that it may find a place on every Christmas-tree. Next in importance to this work, and one whose status it is equally difficult to define, is Charles F. Holder's "The Ivory King." Grown-up readers will delight in it as much as the average boy or girl. The narrative is entirely devoted to a history of the elephant, its habits and ways and intelligence, and the various specimens found in different parts of the world, and that have travelled around the world in the "big" shows. It is a delightful companion to Mr. Holder's "Marvels of Animal Life." "Children's "Children's Stories of American Progress," by Henrietta Christian Wright, is conceived on the same plan as her "Stories in American History." events of the first half of the present century, including the discovery of telegraphy, the building of the first steamboat and the first railroad, as well as the purchase of Florida, the war of 1812, and the discovery of gold, are offered to young readers in the attractive garb of fiction, while facts are so closely adhered to that the instructive element is not lost sight of. Edmund Alton's "Among the Law-makers" is the work of a gentleman who was for four years connected with the legislate branch of our Government, in the capacity of a Senatorial page. The book is addressed to be younger generation and is rich in reminiscense of the exciting period immediately following to Civil War. While Mr. Alton is at all time amusing, he also seeks to instruct, by giving pass tical examples of the workings of our various great ernmental departments. Illustrations of Goren ment buildings, the halls of Congress, etc., add the interest of the work. "Prince Peerless" in collection of fairy tales of the dear, old-fashional marvellous sort, that the little people never con craving for. Margaret Collier (Madame of Cadilhac) is the author; her brother, Mr. Jan Collier, well known in the English art world be illustrated the book most beautifully. A m edition of Mrs. Dodge's "Hans Brinker," at ball the original price, is another of the season good things. This old favorite recalls many the standard works for the young which this house sues, and to which they call anew the attention holiday buyers.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have "The Boys anual" and "The Girls' Annual" for 1886, as several other interesting volumes for young peple. "With Wolfe in Canada; or, the winner of a continent," by Geo. A. Hentz, is illustrate by Gordon Browne and tells a story founded to history; and the same author has written "By Young Carthaginians; or, a struggle for empire illustrated by C. J. Stamlard. There are as two handsome color-books, "The Land of Law People," poems by Frederic E. Weatherly, prictures by Jane M. Dealy, printed in colors and monotone; and a new edition of "Baron Machausen," illustrated from original designs to Richard and gorgeously printed in colors at the well-known juveniles of the firm have be again put into purchasable, attractive shape.

TICKNOR & Co. have only one book for the young people, and that is a new edition of an old favorite, "The Peterkin Papers," by Lucreta P. Hale. It is in entirely new form, uniform with a popular issue of last year, "Davy and the Goblin," embellished by a great number of act pictures and enlarged by the addition of a new paper, which relates the funny experiences of "The Peterkins in the Country," and how, by a most singular mistake, they became inmates of the poorhouse. The text has also been thoroughly revised and reset, making a most beautiful volume of these ridiculous but inimitable stories.

MARCUS WARD & Co. as usual have provided books that it seems a pity to put into the hands of children, although their contents are just fitted to keep every little toddler either quiet, or most unruly because Mamma cannot read and tell about the pictures from morning till night. "At Home Again" is a beautiful book, with verses Eliza Keary and illustrations by J. G. Sowerby and Thomas Crane. The pictures of children in bed, at breakfast, playing cards, in the hammock feeding poultry, reading the former volumes of the series, "At Home" and "Abroad," bathing their dolls, etc., are beautifully colored and surrounded by designs of creeping foliage, etc. The decorations of all kinds, bric-à-brac, birds, toys, slippers, etc., are very artistic. "The Romance of the Three R's" (meaning reading, riting, and rithmetic) contains "Little Queen Anne and Her lajesty's Letters (Patent);" "Pothoooks and erseverance," telling of the A B C serpent; and "Slateandpencilvania," giving the adventures of Dick on a desert island; these three gems of Valter Crane's art, bound in one. Besides each ook can be had separately in boards, with goreous cover, and "Little Queen Anne" is parcularly cute. "Pets and Playmates" also has erses by Eliza Keary, and Edith Scannel has one the pictures of all the animals likely to come rithin the reach of a civilized 19th century home arling. The coloring is quaint and the designs re after the manner of Kate Greenaway. The orders of the pictures and the little leaves, shells, utterflies, and flowers thrown here and there ipon the pages are exquisitely delicate. "Three Blind Mice" is illustrated and set to music by E. Laldwell.

WARD & DRUMMOND have several juveniles hat are specially interesting to wide-awake American boys, among which "From Tannery o the White House," by Wm. M. Thayer, being he life and memoirs of U. S., Grant made into a highly readable story, still holds the place of honor. This biography of the soldier-President dwells especially upon the characteristics which enabled a poor boy to become the head of a great nation. The boyhood, manhood, personal history, public life, sickness, and death are graphically described. "His Opportunity" scarcely falls short of the above in interest and is even healthier and more instructive reading for active, energetic boys, for they can all profit by its story. It is by Henry C. Pearson, and is pronounced by Dr. Austen Phelps, of Andover, to be deeply interesting, both in plot and style-"the sufficient evidence is that I read it at one sitting, with the exception of about twenty pages." The scene of "Caleb Carthew" is laid in Lancashire, England. It is by Silas K. Hocking, one of the most successful children's story-writers in England. It tells of the circumstances that led Caleb to become a carpenter's apprentice, his various trials and successes, and ends up with a happy romance. There are also new editions of the Red Shanty Series, three volumes, and of "Minnie and Her Pets," six volumes, which give a collection of anecdotes of animals, strung together with the fine skill that has made Mrs. Leslie so successful in the difficult work of writing stories that really entertain children.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. have been liberal in their provision for young readers, but favor the boys a little more than the girls, after they reach the reading age. For the little ones who only judge the pictures, they have several new color books that will please girl and boy gazers equally. There is a handsome edition of Captain Marryat's "Settlers in Canada," with original illustrations and a gorgeous cover of trees, wigwams, golden Indians, and settler hunters, with the title done in gilt cordage. All boys love seastories and many will hail with delight the inviting volumes prepared for them by Captain Cameron in "Harry Raymond," and Arthur Knight, of the English Royal Navy, in "Ronald Hali-Both these books are written by sailors about sailors, and are full of the stirring adventures and nautical terms that are dear to boyish boys' hearts. These have many illustrations and beautiful colored covers with many of the appurtenances of ships depicted in gilt. "Conjurer Dick" relates the adventures of a young wizard and in the form of an exciting story teaches boys to do many of the tricks that delight them when they go to see conjurers. Mothers may be sure that what Prof. Hoffmann has written will interest their boys of inquiring mind, but let them be warned to make a bargain, that experiments modelled on instructions given with many illustrations in this story shall not be tried on the best parlor carpet nor in new suits. The last tale from the busy pen of the late Captain Reid, which first appeared in St. Nicholas is now ready in book-form, and boys who had thought to get no more splendid stories from this special favorite will hail "The Land of Fire" with delight. It relates the adventures of a crew shipwrecked on Terra del Fuego, a rock-bound, storm-beaten coast, and of the efforts made to save them. There are many pitters and both outside and inside look ter In a wholesome story by T. It tells if Ethel's trials and triumphs in taking care of he younger brothers and sisters while her mobile accompanies her father to Australia in seath of health. The illustrations, initial letters and the pieces are by Edith Scannel, and show taste and talent. For the babies there is "Nosh's An" with a great big bear on the cover, animals all kinds, colored and uncolored, in its large, week pages, and explanations in big, clear type = "Quick March," written and illustrated by the nald Hallward, and printed in brown type script lettering. "George Vashington" and "Ulysses S. Grant" are the ubjects of the volumes, General Grant's life being rinted out of chronological order on account of he present great interest manifested in all conerning him. Mr. William O. Stoddard, who has rritten a "Life of Abraham Lincoln" and several xcellent boys' books, is the author. His volimes are as absorbing as any he has woven entirely rom his imagination, and should be in the hands of every thinking boy and girl. They would form noteworthy beginning for a little juvenile liorary.

THOMAS WHITTAKER offers a varied assortment of reading-matter to children of assorted sizes; also a Gem Series of Reward Books in colored wrappers, and a series of small toy-books, each in packages of one dozen assorted stories, all of which are useful as school and Sunday school re-wards of merit. "The Children's Sunday Hour," by the Rev. Benjamin Waugh, is dedicated to boys and girls, in the hope that it may help to make their Sunday hours both pleasant and useful. There are thirty-three chapters, each working up a Bible text into a chatty story, and the pictures that illustrate them are appropriate and well printed. "Through Unknown Ways" is a historical story, something on the plan of the Schönberg Cotta Family, treating of the persecutions of the times of Charles I., and told in the form of the journal of Mistress Dorathea Studley, lady in the journal of Mistress Dorathea Studley, lady in waiting to the Queen. "Her Gentle Deeds," by Sarah Tytler; "A Crippled Robin," by M. E. Winchester; "Margaret Casson's Resolve," a tale of victory, by E. C. Kenyon; "City Cousins," by Mrs. W. J. Hays; "Faithful Friends," by T. L. Meade; "That Child;" "Through the Wilderness," by Sophie Currier; and "The Master's Likeness," by Joseph Johnston, are all good Sunday-school books. Equally interesting and comday-school books. Equally interesting and com-bining instruction with pleasure are Rev. J. G. Wood's "The Back-yard Zoo," a story of natural history; and "King Frost, or, the wonders of snow and ice," by Mrs. Thorpe. As is well known, Mr. Whittaker is an adherent of the Episcopal Church, and it is well for Christmas shoppers of the same persuasion to give these really pretty books attention, since they may safely put any book published by this firm into an Episcopal Sunday-school library.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. are fortunate in having again secured Miss Mary Lathbury to give them some more of her pretty work for this season. "From Meadow-Sweet to Mistletoe," consisting of forty original designs, printed in photogravure, from the original sepia drawings, is as pretty as her "Birthday Week" of last season. The book is a quarto, printed on heavy drawing-paper, and gotten up in several styles of binding. The illustrative verses by the author begin with the early meadow-sweet of field and garden, and go practically through the year to the season of mistletoe. The joys, pastimes, little cares, and troubles of childhood are made charming by picture and werse in Mrs. S. J. Brigham's "Under Blue Skies." Forty-eight original water-color and monotint illustrations, handsomely printed, show a near and sympathetic acquaintance with the little ones, and, before these are reached, the cover of richly-ornamented boards, brilliant in color and gilt, gives promise of the good things within. Mrs. Susan E. Wallace has retold in prose, with many added and picturesque original touches, the old legend of "Genevra; or, the old oak chest," so familiar to older readers through Samuel Rogers' famous poem, which is also given in the volume, faced by a picture of the author. The book is illustrated with grace and feeling by General Lew Walker, the author of "Ben-Hur." Agnes C. Sage, the writes really child-like stories for children be a new volume called "Christmas Elves," a cell tion of tales that have appeared from the time in juvenile magazines. With the rence of the holiday season regularly or bright and handsome volume, "Worthin Annual." It quite surpasses itself this the excellence of its engravings. It is handsome book of two hundred and sistern with a brilliant cover, a colored fronts; upwards of three hundred illustrations is many full-page ones, printed in tint, and all quantity of short stories, sketches, and poe children of all ages. E. & J. B. Young have an endless list of good things for young people of all sizes and tastes. To enumerate all would be impossible. They are agents for the London Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and their catalogue embraces a long list of the Society's publications specially notable for their excellent quality and remarkably low price. In color-books proper they have "Robinson Crusoe," with large text and delightful views of the desert island, Robinson and "Friday" done by Carl Marr. "The Holy Childhood," with sixteen colored full-page illustrations, by Paul Mohn, representing scenes from the Nativity, as given in the version according to St. Luke, each page having a verse from the Bible printed beneath it. Young children are gain a pretty idea of the Saviour's birth from this handsome picture-book. "Sunday" for 18% is ready and has its usual generous allowance of stories, poetry, and pictures. "Home Subeams," a series of pictures in chromo-linberaphy, has some of Mrs. Molesworth's interesting text. "Pictures and Rhymes" is a pretty picture-book in colors with pleasant rhymes, sillar to it, but for younger children. "The Child's Pictorial Volume for 1886" also has her wrings, as well as contributions from Rev. J. 6. Wood, Miss Sitwell, and others. Many more pretty books will be found in our list of Books for the Young.

Specialtics.

AIKIN, LAMBERT & Co., strange as it may eem, have succeeded in getting some really new lesigns to add to their already innumerable kinds pens and pencils. There is a brand-new Mikado pencil, a Shakespeare pencil, an acorn encil, a jolly smoker's head pencil, and a lizard pencil, besides all the old favorites in gold, silver, and heavy-plated ware. There are also Mikado match-boxes, which are sure to meet the tastes of smokers, and will prove most tasteful and graceful little gifts for young ladies to give the escorts who took them so many times to see "the three little maids from school" and the other characters that adorn these artistic little fire-boxes. goods of this house are extremely tasteful, and much too tempting to be looked at without money to fall back on when overcome by their attractions. Gold pens always make valuable presents for everybody, and every taste can be satisfied in the varied assortment on the list of this well-known firm.

L. PRANG & Co. are fully up to their standard of excellence, and show this year a bewildering assortment of cards and novelties suitable for holiday gifts, and gifts for all seasons and occasions. Especially in the direction of fine art prints have they been doing excellent work. They are now showing reproductions of flowerpieces which it takes careful and minute inspection to distinguish from originals. Also reproductions of water-color drawings which for richness of color and accuracy of detail equal the originals from which they were taken. The prices of these prints vary from 75 cents to $25. Everything that ingenuity, taste, and artistic skill could supply has been drawn upon to produce novelties in the way of satin prints mounted on backgrounds of exquisite designs, the materials including alligator leather, kids, velvets, and plush of various hues, many of them hand-decorated, and trimmed with silk cord and swan's-down.

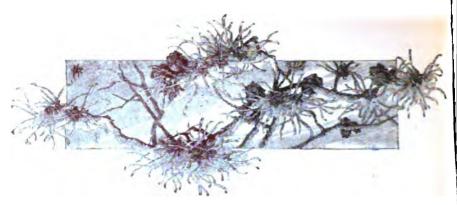

They have also issued six pretty calendars—folders and in book-form—with designs by Misses L. B. Humphrey, Rose Mueller Sprague, and Lisbeth C. Comins.

MARCUS WARD & Co. have added a number of exquisite designs to their already large assortment of holiday cards. Kate Greenaway furnishes two or three sets of designs in her usual style, and Miss Clara Paterson, Barlow Moore, and others contribute some charming landscape and marine sketches. A number of their Christmas cards have been printed this year on satin, making rich and extremely tasteful presents. They also issue their well-known block and folding calendars, comprising the "Shakespeare," "Day Unto Day," "Every Day," and "The Seasons."

THOMAS WHITTAKER, N. Y., has prepared two pretty block calendars for 1887. The one is entitled "Scripture Calendar," and contains selections (one for every day in the year) from the Bible, the other is a "Proverbial Calendar," and contains proverbial sayings gathered from profane and sacred writers. Both of these calendars are mounted on pretty mats with artistic scroll and flower designs in gold and colors. On the backs of the mats are printed a calendar for the year and the usual postal information.

E. & J. B. Young & Co. are agents for the well-known Penicl cards, and call especial attention this season to "Footprints of Jesus," a set of six cards illustrating scenes connected with the life of Christ; "Our Christmas Carols," three cards illustrating famous Christmas hymns; "Joybells," six cards with suitable verses for Christmas, by Frances Ridley Havergal; "The First Christmastide," six cards representing scenes connected with the birth of Christ; "Daybreak," six smaller cards in bright colors, representing the same scenes as the previous set; and "Blossoms in the Snow," four exquisite cards for Christmas with verses by Lucy A. Bennett.

WORTHINGTON CO., 747 B'WAY, N. Y.

HE Boys' Book of Sports and Outdoor Life," which THE CENTURY Co. has just published, is just the book every boy should have in order to learn how to enjoy himself to the best advantage. Maurice Thompson, the well-known writer on archery and other outdoor matters, has edited it, and many pens have contributed the articles in the various departments. The

Editor's story, "Marvin and His Boy-Hunters," which was published as a serial in St. Nicholas Magazine, is here first given in complete form, and it will be found admirably adapted as a textbook for boys who are old enough to use a gun. It contains probably the best rules for handling a shot-gun that have ever been printed. No more welcome gift can be made to a boy than this royally illustrated "Boys' Book of Sports." The N. Y. Times says: "It is as complete, thorough, and, above all, as interesting as a book can be."

A NEW DEPARTURE has been made by THE CENTURY Co. in reducing the retail prices on all their books on which the ordinary trade discounts have heretofore been made, to a figure from which only small discounts can be allowed. This reduces the price of "Sport with Gun and Rod" (the trade edition) from $5.00 to $4.00. At this price no such beautiful book on matters connected with the field and the stream has ever been issued. Royally illustrated, printed on heavy paper, and richly bound, it is a superb gift-book. The édition de luxe, at from $10.00 to $18.00, according to binding, is almost gone. The Spirit of the Times says: "In every respect the work is thorough and must become standard."

THE Saturday Review commends "Sport with Gun and Rod" in these words: "The whole tone of the volume proves that our American kinsfolk thoroughly understand the essential qualifications of a true sportsman; while the contents of the work show how keenly they practice them."

No lover of outdoor life should be without this handsome book.

"WE know of no book of songs that will furnish so much delight in cultivated homes," says the Journal of Education of "St. Nicholas Songs," the book recently issued by THE CENTURY CO. It contains one hundred and twelve songs, the words from St. Nicholas Magazine, the music, published only in this book, contributed by thirty-two composers, among them Leopold Damrosch, J. L. Molloy, W. W. Gilchrist, Joseph Mosenthal, Homer N. Bartlett, and J. H. Cornell. The illustrations, of which there are one or more at every opening, are a novel feature in a music-book. Last year we sold "St. Nicholas Songs" at $5.50; this season we have printed a new and large edition, and reduced the price to $2.00.

"BABY WORLD," the volume of songs, stories, and pictures for little folks, edited by Mary Mapes Dodge, is brought out this year in a new dress and at a reduced price, $1.25 in doth, and $1.00 in the new binding—boards covers with Japanese paper.

THE Christmas number of St. Nicholas, which is a royal issue—a gift-book in itself—contains a story by Mr. Stockton entitled "A Fortuna: Opening," which is somewhat similar in character of "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine," describing the adventures of a genteman and his wife who bring a deserted steams safely into port.

FRANK R. STOCKTON'S story, "The Casing Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshiz has been issued in book-form by THE CENTU.
Co., in attractive paper binding at 50 cents, as in cloth at $1.00. It is having a large sale. It paper binding is a novelty in cheap books.

THE "Life of Lincoln," begun in the November number of THE CENTURY, is receiving great praise from the press of both North and South while the leading newspapers of Great Britain join in highly commending the publication at this great biography and the vivid interest of the first instalment. The N. Y. Star says, "We shall look forward to the succeeding numbers of what promises to be the most remarkable biography ever published in the United States."

HOUSE WHERE LINCOLN WAS BORN.

THE War Articles in THE CENTURY and the announcement of the new "Life of Lincoln" have increased the interest in the events which preceded and brought about the Civil War. These events are nowhere told more interestingly that in two books recently published by THE CENTURY CO., the "Life of William Lloyd Garrison," by his children, and "The Life and Times of Samuel Bowles."

THE buyer of Christmas books will be repaid by an examination of The CENTURY Co.'s publications in the book-stores. Send for our 24-page illustrated catalogue. The CENTURY Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL.

BY DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY KENYON COX.

Large Quarto, Cloth, $15.00. A limited edition, consisting of thirty-five copies, profs on India paper, will be issued at $25.00.

The designs have been painted in oil and are reproduced by the Forbes process.

"It is a rare pleasure to find among the scores of holiday books issued at this season one so superb in concreta and execution as Dante Gabriel Rossetti's poem, 'The Blessed Damozel,' illustrated by Mr. Kenyon Cox. Not see: Mr. Vedder made his wonderful pictures for 'Omar Khayyam' has any series of illustrations appeared consensus with these by Mr. Cox. We are not forgetful of the beautiful drawings Mr. Will. H. Low furnished to Keats' 'Lan': last year. Mr. Cox's work is not only strikingly original, but it is remarkable for the amount of thought equal upon it, and not less for its masterly execution and finish, in several instances approaching very nearly to the stress and purity of the ancient Greek modelling. It is almost impossible to curb one's enthusiasm in looking over Mr. Cox' pictures; surely few artists have executed within a year or more twenty such paintings as these which are reputable to illustrate Rossetti's poem with marvellous accuracy,"—The Capitol, Washington, D. C.

BLUE JACKETS OF '61.

A History of the Navy in the War of Secession. For Young People. By WILLIS J. ABBOT. With many illustrations, chiefly by W. C. Jackson. Quarto, cloth, $3 00.

"In external appearance, in subject-matter, and in method of treatment, this is ast-tractive a volume as one often sees. The tye is caught at the first glance by the organial material and design of the cover, as appropriate as it is unconventional, and a admirable taste. Turning the leaves one finds a profusion of spirited illustrature all manner of stirring incidents in the great naval contests of our latest war. Common to the direct work of the author, the reader becomes inevitably interested in the graphs and vivid narration of sea-fights, naval expeditions, the daring of blockade-runners, the thrilling passages of personal courage, and the many deeds of heroism. In such reas as these the naval history of the War of 5t abounds, and they lose nothing in the ast-vous, vigorous, and often brilliant style of the narrator."—Christian Union.

Among the many interesting and important papers to be printed in the Magazine during the ir year are the remarkable series of the existence of which has only recently become publicly known, and concerning which the greatest expectate curiosity have been aroused. Their importance and interest will more than justify this. Nothing more characters or of greater autobiographic value has been published, and no such study of the great novelist's life has been to possible. Facsimiles of unpublished drawings will accompany the Letters.

Several articles giving very striking personal views of great historic events and periods; notable among them told by him from his papers, private diaries, and personal recollection of an experience absolutely unique, at the only member of the Diplomatic Corps remaining in the city and in communication with the changing government during this whole period. The articles will all be fully illustrated from original material in the author's possesson.

GLIMPSES AT THE DIARIES OF GOUVERNEUR MORRIS,

U. S. Minister to France at the crose of the last century, will give an idea of the interesting and piquant picture is social life and characters of the time of the French Revolution, which exist among the great unpublished portions. the Morris papers that relate to his residence in Paris.

In Fiction there will be many notable attractions. The publishers expect to begin during the present year publication of a striking novel, which has been arranged for with who will also contribute a shorter story to an early number. With the earliest numbers will be begun a very strong and original a the story form the current of each national life will be distinctly indicated, and its picturesque beworthy periods and episodes will be presented for the reader in their philosophical relations h other as well as to universal history.

t will be the plan of the writers of the different volumes to enter into the real life of the peoples, bring them before the reader as they actually lived, labored, and struggled—as they studied and, and as they amused themselves. In carrying out this plan, the myths, with which the history lands begins, will not be overlooked, though these will be carefully distinguished from the actual y, so far as the labors of the accepted historical authorities have resulted in definite conclusions. Possessing a knowledge of and sympathy with the youthful way of looking at such subjects, the swill not offer annals, arid and unconnected, nor bare chronological statements of events, however, they will not expect to include all details of minor importance, but will endeavor to not pictures adapted to leave faithful impressions of the essential facts.

ART BOOKS AND FINE BINDINGS.

A HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF VICTOR HUGO'S MASTERPIECE.

LES MISÉRABLES.

With nearly four hundred illustrations by De Neuville, BAYARD, and other eminent artists. Royal 8vo, cloth boards, 5 vols, $15.00.

No expense has been spared to make of unrivalled beauty this new edition of the greatest production of the greatest modern French author. Typographically De Vinne & Co., printers to The Century Company, have made it almost a faultless book. Some of the most eminent French artists are the designers of the nearly four hundred libratations. These by master-hands are not, as is too often the case in illustrated works, mere fancy sketches, but works of art by men thoroughly acquainted with the places and personages described, thoroughly French in feeling and spirit, and in full sympathy with the author. Last, but not least among the illustrators, is Victor Hugo himself, who contributes a specimen of his highly forcible sketches.

Of the popularity of Les Mistrables there is no need to reassert that it has been unrivalled. Its record prove that it is as popular as when it first appeared. Every language has its Les Mistrables; and its countless editions but increase a demand for more, and finer, productions, of which the present, by Routledge & Sons, is the most superb.

AN EXQUISITELY ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF GOLDSMITH'S VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.

With Prefatory Memoir by George Saintsbury, and 114 colored illustrations by V. A. Porson. Royal 8vo, handsomely bound in extra cloth, with appropriate designs in colors, and gilt top. $5.00; three-quarters levant morocco, gilt top, rough edges, $8.00; tree calf, gilt edges, gilt in the round, $10.00; full levant morocco, gilt edges, gilt in the round, $12.00.

This beautiful book forms a companion volume to V. A. Porson's handsome and very successful edition of "Gulliver's Travels," issued last season.

Goldsmith's pathos and dry humor as presented in "The Vicar of Wakefield" have been most exquisitely pictured in delicate tones and tints. A charming story is made more charming by these scenes and figures with which the book abounds. The pose of the figures, with their unique surroundings, compose a story of their own, while they gratify the eye.

THE FRENCHWOMAN OF THE CENTURY: Fashions, Manners, Usages.

By OCTAVE UZANNE, author of "THE FAN," "THE GLOVE," "THE UMBRELLA," and "THE MUFF." Exquisitely illustrated in colors from designs by Albert Lynch. Engraved by Eugene Gaujean. Printed on hand-made paper, 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, in a box, $15.00.

As only 500 of these exquisite volumes have been printed, out of which 300 have been taken up by the British market, the American market is strictly limited to 200 copies, the type having been distributed.

This book is filled with dainty and unique illustrations, engraved in colors from the water-color designs of Mr. Albert Lynch. The chief men and women of this period are graphically described, with which mingles among "chit-chat." The writer has, very happily, combined a minutize of detail with comprehensiveness of treatment.

A MAGNIFICENTLY ILLUSTRATED GIFT-BOOK.

ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, AND IRELAND.

A picturesque Survey of the United Kingdom and its Institutions. By P. VILLARS. Translated from the French by HENRY FRITH. Imperial 4to, gilt edges, with six hundred illustrations drawn expressly for this work by the best artists, from photographs or sketches taken on the spot. 650 pages. Cloth, $10.00.

A superb volume. Within handsome covers is a treat of information delightfully given, and a wealth of beautiful pictures exquisitely printed.

RANDOLPH CALDECOTT.

A Personal Memoir of his Early Art Career. By Henry Blackburn, author of "Breton Folk," "Artists and Arabs," etc. With one hundred and seventy-two full-page and other illustrations by Randolph Caldecott. 4to, handsomely bound in cloth, $6.00.

Also a Large-Paper Edition, of which only a few copies have been printed. Cloth extra, gilt top, rough edges, $10.00.

Mr. Caldecott is known to the world chiefly by his Picture-Books. Possessed of a sense of beauty, and an abundance of kindly and graceful humor, he did not lack delicacy nor quaintness. "He had a capital eye for simple character, and united in his sketches and animals the shrewdest observation with the most whimsical personal view." The text of the book claims to be but "a setting for the illustrations." The "Memoirs" contain extracts from letters and sketches, the most of which were sent to the author's family.

A Fitting Companion Volume to the "Memoirs" is:

THE LATE RANDOLPH CALDECOTT'S CHRISTMAS BOOK.

MORE "GRAPHIC" PICTURES. A new series of Mr. CALDECOTT'S contributions to the "Graphic" Newspaper. Printed in colors. Oblong boards, $3.00.

THE HISTORY OF MANON LESCAUT AND THE CHEVALIER DES GRIEUX.

By the ABBÉ PRÉVOST. With 225 original illustrations by Maurice Leloir, and 12 page-etchings, reproduced by the Goupil process. (Uniform with the Leloir Edition of the "Sentimental Journey.") In a cloth double portfolio, $20.00.

This production is the masterpiece of its author. Abbé Prévost is well known as a distinguished French littérateur, whose literary and political essays have been pronounced "the soundest, the most acute, the most scholarly, and the most elegant that have proceeded from the journalists of that country." "Manon Lescaut," Dean Swift says, "is entirely free from the licentious tendency of the works of Crebillon, with whom Prévost has been unjustly classed. There is, in 'Manon Lescaut,' nothing of the sickly sentimentality of Prévost's contemporaries, nor of the disgusting coarseness of modern 'Littérateur Extravagante.'" The English translation is clear and animated. The book is a triumph of typography and decoration. The artist, M. Leloir, has employed, in his figures, a style that is admirably matched by the richness of the tones, lights, and shadows of his etching needle in the larger cuts. Borders and vignettes adorn every page of the volume. They are delicately finished in character, beautifully designed, and engraved in a perfect manner. There are twelve full-page etchings; the vignettes and ornamented borders number more than two hundred and twenty-five. The artist has mastered the nature of Manon, her beauty, her charm, and her affectionateness. charm, and her affectionateness.

IDYLS OF THE MONTHS.

A book of Colored Designs, Emblematic of the Year, with appropriate verses. By MARY A. LATHBURY, author of "THE SEVEN LITTLE MAIDS," "RING AROUND ROSY," etc. 410, with gold, silver, and three colors in inks, in a box, $3.50; also bound with ribbon, in a box, $2.50.

Mrs. Lathbury's "Idyls of the Months" is exceedingly dainty. Verses and designs are printed in monotints. The author has produced a choice and attractive volume, not for a season, but for all time. Author, artist, and printer have united their endeavors to a successful and pleasing issue. They have made one of "the pretty books that are no books," so much sought for nowadays. All in all, the "Idyls of the Months" is beautiful, delicate, and a very desirable presentation volume.

TARTARIN SUR LES ALPES:

Nouveau exploite du Heros Tarasconnais. By Alphonse Daudet. English Translation. Illustrated by Rossi, Aranda, Myrbach, Montenard, and De Beaumont. With 150 photogravures, all of which are delicate and possess a wonderful charm. Cloth, about $2,50; paper, about $2.00. Probably ready the middle of December.

STANDARD PUBLICATIONS.

THE PRIME MINISTERS OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

By George Barnett Smith, author of "The Biographies of Gladstone and Bright," "Poets AND NOVELISTS," "VICTOR HUGO: HIS LIFE AND WORK," etc., etc. Cloth, $3.00.

This volume is a most entertaining book. It contains comprehensive sketches of the Prime Ministers and their work, beginning with Lord Melbourne, who held the reins of political power when Queen Victoria ascended the throne, until the present. The value of the book is much increased by a "List of the Administrations during the Reign of Queen Victoria," also by a list of the "Principal Acts Passed during Her Majesty's Reign."

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

By George Barnett Smith. With Portrait and Illustrations. The Jubilee Edition, published in commemoration of the Fiftieth Year of Her Majesty's Reign. Cloth, $3.00.

As fully as possible the inner life of the sovereign has been portrayed from her earliest childhood. This includes a graphic account of her accession to the throne; her happy marriage; the home life of the royal couple and their children, together with their movements and public appearances; the affliction which befell the Queen and the nation by the death of the Prince Consort. Remaining chapters describe the Queen's life and labors subsequent to the area. that event.

STUDIES OF GREAT COMPOSERS.

Being Sketches of the Lives of the Great Musicians of Ancient and Modern Times. By C. Hubert H. Parry, Mus. Doc. With portraits. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

The "Studies" deal with the men who have concentrated the labors of their good predecessors both great and small; and, with the mastery of their resource, have presented their thoughts in the greatest and most perfect forms with the deepest impressiveness. The list, as enumerated by Dr. Parry, begins with Palestrina, and closes with Richard Wagner; who, though his work may be little more than half done, his position in history is quite clearly defined, and the greatness of his music is stamped upon the very face of it. To all true lovers of his art, the book must possess a charm.

Literary World.

ONE HUNDRED FAMOUS AMERICANS.

By Helen Ainslie Smith. A series of interesting biographical sketches of the lives and attainments of distinguished Americans. With portraits and other illustrations. Handsome and appropriate double lithographed cover. 4to, boards, $1.50.

A volume filled with interest to any loyal American. The title of the book is more typical than literal. It aims to present a series of brief and interesting sketches of some of the greatest men and women of America. These are grouped by the callings in which their most important work has been achieved. What they have been to their companions, to their professions, and to the great interests of their nation at large, is graphically described. Of the consprehensive list treated by the author "Inventors" heads the table of contents, while "Business Men" come last, as a sort of climax. The author has mentioned celebrated "Statesmen and Orators," "Lawyers," "Military and Naval Commanders," "Explorers," "Divines," "Physicians and Surgeons," "Teachers." "Authors"—embracing every branch of that profession—and "Artists," The book is one of Pronounced Attractiveness to young readers as well as to older heads.

VAGRANT VERSES. By Josephine Pollard.

Gilt Edges. Square 16mo, $1.00.

"I am not unfamiliar with the writings of Josephine Pollard. I like them. She writes clearly what she has to say. She is not transcendental, and is never straining for effect by strange metres and obsolete words and forced comparisons. More and more, as it grows scarcer, I value the combination of poetic thought and fancy with common-sense and a moral purpose."—Extract from a private letter from Mr. John G. Whittier.

PHOTO-GRAVURE.

By this process, the highest artistic effects are produced. Metal plates are engraved (in interaction process) by photography and printed in copper-plate presses. The effects produced by photography are a altered by the hand of the artist, values may be increased or diminished, and almost any omisser addition made. The work may be carried on till the desired effect is produced and the clinical always uniform. The plates can be supplied when desired, or the Photo-Gravure Co. will do a printing. The results obtained by the Photo-Gravure Co. equal the best results obtained always and reference to this effect is permitted to leading Publishers and Artists who have used the plates. All classes of subjects, whether in half-tone or line, can be reproduced by this process.

The results produced by this process are similar to what is known Albertype, Artotype, Estype, Autoglyph, Phototype, Lichtdruck, etc., etc. The particular method used is that parents Mr. T. C. Roche, and is believed to give the best results at the least cost. The Photo-Graves Lhas in this department the best staff of printers in the country and a most extended experient the treatment of gelatine for the purposes of printing. All classes of subjects are suitable for specially suitable for portraits, views, architecture, art carbya scientific and natural objects, book illustration, town, county, and family histories, theatrick general advertising, reproductions of engravings, machinery, animals, and still life, copies of cost instantaneous effects, scientific records, mill labels, etc., etc.

This term is applied to a modification of the results produced by Meisenbach, Ives, and obesiles by this modification the photographic effect is produced from stone. No attempt is made to possible duce engraved plates, but the printing is done by the Photo-Gravure Co., and by this means green better results are obtained than where plates are made and placed in the hands of the ordinary printer. The results are not as good as those obtained from Gelatine or by Photo-Gravure, but by are sufficiently good for a number of purposes where the quality of the higher grades of work is an eccessary. It is applicable to all the purposes of the other processes, but is lower both in cost as quality.

PHOTO-LITHOGRAPHY.

The results of this well-established process are well known. It is the oldest of the plane mechanical processes, but is only adapted to the reproduction of original drawings or engine which are made in a black or other non-actinic color on a white or light ground. We have in a employ on this work the most skilful staff in the country, who for many years have made it specialty. Photo-Lithography is unrivalled for the reproduction of maps, plans, tracings, surest, and other drawings, engineers' and architects' designs, facsimile letters and circulars on its in law cases, miniature catalogues, copies of line engravings, reduction or enlargement of work, etc., etc.

A Book of Specimens of our various processes will be forwarded on receipt of One Dollar, all inquiries will be promptly answered.

Price, $3.00.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"... I am fully aware of the great number of works on almost every feature of the Fine Arts, but experience is suggested to me that to a student beginning the study of Water-Color Painting a work of this kind might be used, assisting him to start right, and upon such a beginning to work out, by personal study and experience, his own ay of using the materials to the best advantage. ..."

The work contains many useful hints, by an experienced and successful teacher, in water-color ainting in general, and special directions for painting three studies, for which illustrated examples are iven, viz.: Still Life, Landscape, and Flower Painting.

THE FICTILE ART BOOK.

PLASTIC SKETCHES.

J. G. AND J. F. LOW.

PORTFOLIO OF PHOTOGRAVURES, COMPRISING FORTY-SEVEN LIFELIKE ILLUSTRATIONS.

IN SATIN PORTFOLIO, $7.50.

ART-LOVERS and cognoscenti in general will doubtless remember the first appearance of the series of pictures, six years ago, from LOW'S ART TILE WORKS, CHELSEA, MASS. They achieved an instantaneous success, leservedly, for they rivalled the productions of the Old World in fictile art. No complete collection of the series existence. In order, therefore, to give the art-loving public a correct idea of the rare beauty and spirit of these pictures, we now issue a portfolio containing phologravures of the series, forty-seven in number, 10 × 12 inches ze, under the title of "PLASTIC SKETCHES." The portfolio is destined to find friends everywhere, not only ze studios of artists, sculptors, and designers, but in home circles generally, for they exercise a fascination lizely their own, upon young and old alike.

NATURE'S HALLELUJAH.

By the author of "One Year's Sketch Bock."

From original designs by IRENE E. JEROME, author and artist of "One Year's Sketch Book," In Message of the Bluebird," etc. Presented in a series of nearly fifty full-page illustration in 14 inches), engraved on wood by GEORGE T. ANDREW. Elegantly bound in gold delay gill, gill edges, $6.00; Turkey morocco, $12.00; tree-calf, $12.00; Spanish calf, $12.00.

ONE YEAR'S SKETCH BOOK.

BY IRENE E. JEROME.

prising 46 full-page pictures, 912 × 14 inches. Elegantly bound in gold cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $6.00; Turkey morocco, $12.00; tree calf, $12.00; Spanish calf, $12.00.

Miss Jerome is a young artist with a decided individuality, an unaffected feeling for nature, and a preference for a straightforward way of expressing it. Her studies were made, apparently, out-of-doors, or directly from the object; and, taving been engraved without any attempt to give them a look of finish, they furnish vigorous representations of character-stic American landscapes and blossoms and buds. It is quite a relief to turn to such a volume after looking at pictures of nature made with the help of the camera, or of European engravings. Yet the evident naturalistic leaning of the artist does not prevent her from having a taste for ornamental disposition of her material. Witness the wreath of spring blossoms which frames in a tender little landscape, and other novel and ingenious arrangements. Yet the drawings of flowers, taken just as they grow, are the best things she has done. Nobody can better represent the grace of the anemone or of the maidenhair, the rich color of the violet, the fragility of the rose. Clematis, mayflower, hepatica, and others of our most beautiful wild flowers, are portrayed with the snowy or leafy woods, the pastures and roadsides where they were found. The publishers are to be congratulated on having had the good taste and the boldness to bring out such a volume. We should add that each picture is accompanied by an appropriate extract from some well-known poet, the lettering forming part of the design. — The Critic.

The illustrations are full of poetry, and show a true artistic touch in the drawing, while he of the engraver and printer has been admirably done, so that the full beauty of the work has brought out. Specially appropriate are the graceful verses which accompany the engraving. Irene E. Jerome, the author, is known to fame by her "Sketch Book," published last Christian which took such a high rank among illustrated art work, and this new contribution to that list ork is fully equal in a modest way to that splendid effort. — Salem Observer.

DORA.

ALFRED TENNYSON. With twenty illustrations by W. L. Taylor, engraved on wood by Andrew, from sketches made in England expressly for this work, comprising charming bits of English landscape and ife. Uniform in style with LEE AND SHEPARD'S

ILLUSTRATED SERIES OF FAVORITE HYMNS, BALLADS, AND POEMS.

Cloth. Full gilt. Gilt edges, $1 50. Royal plush, $2.50.

ALERED TENNES

The inspiration which poetry gives to the drama and to art is well illustrated in the career of Tennyson's poem, "Dora." It has been retold in a charming drama; is one of the favorite selections for reading in the parlor and on the platform; the heroine has been idealized by the brush of the artist and the skill of the graver, and now one of the foremost of American artists gives in this volume twenty illustrations of the story, original in conception, graceful and powerful, as the theme demands, and with all the accessories of English farm and landscape, costumes, scenery, and interiors, reproduced from sketches of well-known places. The book is superbly printed, and bound with exquisite taste.

BABY'S KINGDOM,

Wherein may be chronicled by the loving mother the story of the events, happening a cunningness attending the progress of "My Baby," as a memento for grown-up days.

Designed and illustrated by Annie F. Cox. Printed in colors. Bound in elegant or gilt edges. Cloth and gold, $3.75; Turkey morocco, $7.50; tree calf, $7.50: Spanish calf. $3.

The author was certainly inspired when a designed this beautiful book. Who the had a baby did not long for some commi and beautiful repository of baby's bian Baby's birth, baby's christening, baby's lies baby's first tooth, baby's first step, and all other turning-points of baby's first wat a more momentous to the mother's har tall Presidential election is to a rising pulsar This book is all this and more. The colors to the eye, solid, embossed gold: the iss tions in colors are a panorama of babys demiment, and the poetry with which it is interest is brimful of motherly love. All is in the style of literary and pictorial art. Ammi woman who could have such a history of help year of his life, written in mother's out let writing, would find it a benediction to the of life, especially after that mother hid med away. - Chicago Evening Journal.

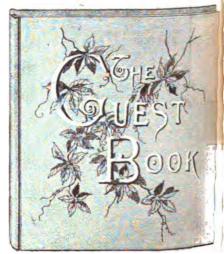

THE GUEST BOOK,

In which may be recorded the coming and the going of guests, with pages for authorized incidents, and sketches pertaining to pleasant visits, social circles, and other gathering companion to "BABY'S KINGDOM."

Invented and illustrated by ANNIE F. Cox. Printed in colors. In rich binding. Cloth and gold, gilt edges, $3.75; Turkey morocco, $7.50; tree calf, $7.50; Spanish calf, $7.50.

The "Guest Book" is a happy thought. The illustrations are exquisite, and the work is in the best style of the enterprising publishers, who have published more of the really beautiful than any firm in the country.—

ORCHIDS.

'HE ROYAL FAMILY OF PLANTS.

Illustrated from nature by HARRIET STEWART MINER, comprising twenty-four magnificent specimens in colors, each 10 X 14 in. This volume is over fourteen inches in length, cleven inches wide, one and one-half inches in thickness; gilt edges, bevelled covers, and richly adorned in black and gold.

Gold cloth, portfolio, $15.00; Turkey morocco, $30.00; tree calf, $30.00; Spanish calf, $30.00.

The plates are the finest specimens of art printing ever produced in any country. There isn't a shade of tint in the original flower that is not faithfully reproduced, not with a mere mechanical nicety of imitation, but the life and spirit of the flower is given. It is a bouquet which is nature itself, in everything but the odor. What the cost of the volume is, only the publishers and printers know; but to make such illustrations, so full and complete,—they being simple reproductions of the flowers in all their life and beauty,—must have required an outlay of capital that would frighten any one who had not full faith in the love of the people for the beautiful.

lay of capital that would frighten any one who had not full faith in the love of the people for the beautiful.

The process is the French lithographic, which is done in Boston more successfully than in Paris even, when a publisher has nerve enough to pay for it. Evidently the artists and printers were given carte blanche in this volume, for nothing so beautiful was ever before attempted. The lovers of flowers, and those who are not, but who desire to do the best thing possible in gift presentation books, will eagerly seek this exquisitely beautiful volume; for certainly there is nothing in the whole range of a taste-satisfying literature that can equal it. The descriptions are in harmony with the plates, and the binding and the general style of the book are in full harmony with the illustrations. It is a thing of beauty, and consequently a joy forever.—Toledo Blade.

THE LADIES' CASKET

OF FLOWERS AND JEWELS FOR HER ADORNING.

With original designs printed in colors. By ELEANOR W. TALBOT. Oblong quarto. Cloth, gold and silver lors, full gilt edges.

Price, $3.75; Turkey morocco, $7.50; tree calf, $7.50; Spanish calf, $7.50.

Whoever desires to make a truly satisfactory holiday pres it will find great satisfaction in this selection, and the for mate recipient will be ever proud to have it grace her centre ble in parlor or library. It "takes the tassel from the cap f climax." It is unique in design, captivating in style, deliate in sentiment, and faultless in finish. The illustrations resupremely beautiful. Figures of poetic ideality stand out om the pages so seemingly real as to invite the manual rasp. The artistic conceptions, too, which accompany the earlies of compassion's Tears" declares this the "Best Eye-Water," saying:—

"These drops the poor and wretched can supply; They add fresh lustre to the brightest eye."

While under a gracefully shapen cruse, holding the salve of "Moderation," is inscribed:—

"Your lips, if you this precious balm apply, Will redden, and breathe sweeter melody."

So "Innocence" and "Modesty," in two beautiful cases, are declared to be the best genuine "Rouge," and the advice is given:

"Touch with this compound the soft, lily cheek,
And the bright glow will best its praises speak." — San Francisco Post.

OR, THE TRIALS AND ADVENTURES OF FRED RANSOM.
By RICHARD MEADE BACKE. Illustrated, $1.00.

The Florida Wreckers are not demons, luring ships to destruction with false lights, as has sometimes been erroneously believed, but brave, hardy men who peril life to save, and whose adventures, as recorded in this book, are thrilling and surprising. It is a fine story, and the author's geographical and historical facts are as interesting as the story is entertaining.

OTHER NEW BOOKS.

The Family: An Historical and Social Study. By Rev. Charles F. Thwing and Carrie F. Butler Thwing. Cloth. $2.00.

Thwing. Cloth. $2.00.

The work is the first historical and philosophical study upon the important subject of divorce and other social problems. It is a strong, thoughtful, timely book. The style is calm and judicial; the historical survey broad and thorough; the discussion of present phases of this important subject, bold, incisive, suggestive. It is the result of a great deal of reading and earnest, courageous thinking, and will deeply stir the minds of thoughtful readers. In these times, when family life is being destroyed and divorces are rap'dly multiplying, the need of wise words on this subject is urgent. Mr. and Mrs. Thwing are reformers of the right kind. They have done a good work, which, we trust, will go far to arouse the church to its duty in the matter, and lead to better and uniform legislation as to divorce.—

Golden Rule.

The Book of Eloquence. A Collection of Extracts in Prose and Verse from the most famous orators and poets. Intended as exercises for declamations in colleges and schools. By CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER. New edition. 12mo. Cloth. $1.50.

One may judge of the richness and abundance of the contents from the fact that there are 166 pieces under the title "American Eloquence," 89 under "European Eloquence, Ancient and Modern," and 109 selections of poetry, making 364 in all in this book of 452 pages. The preponderance of American selections we like, and we trust every scholar or committeeman in search of such a book will examine this one. The name of its editor ought to warrant as much as that.—Salem Gazette.

SKETCHES OF WESTERN LIFE. Cloth. $1.00.
PIONEERS OF THE WESTERN RESERVE. New edition. Cloth. $1.25.

Exceedingly graphic pictures of the early days in the Great West.

The Monarch of Dreams. By Thomas W. Higgs son. Cloth. 50 cts.

"THE MONARCH OF DREAMS" will attract attentions indicating a reversion from the current realism to the sminaginative school of Hawthorne. It is based on a cards study — perhaps through the Society for Psychical Reseas — of the phenomena of dreaming. The hero, a loneit main a farm-house among the hills, is possessed with the as bitton to connect his dreams, and thus lead two separate estences, and this he carries out with a success that case a tragedy. A well-known literary man in New York who of the story: "It reminds me of some of Hawthorn's heaving the story in its style, and the theory advanced must be assisted to the story of the story advanced must be assisted to the story of the story and the theory advanced must be assisted to the story of the story and the story advanced must be assisted to the story of the story of the story advanced must be assisted to the story advanced must be assisted to the story advanced must be assisted to the story of the story advanced must be assisted to the story of t Haphasard Recollections of Noted Men, chisty Americans. By Charles Lanman, author of "Pivate Life of Daniel Webster," etc. Cloth. $1.50.

This is one of the most striking and interesting took which has come to our table for many a day. It may side glances at the lives of a large number of passed men in modern times, and the fact that the author does attempt a consecutive biography makes the impressed the book more vivid and, in some instances, thrillag. We are glad to welcome it to an exalted position in most a cratture.—St. Louis Baptist.

A Winter in Central America. By Miss HELES! SANBORN. Cloth. $1.50.

"One of the pleasantest books of travel we have realist long time. The book is written in a bright and intensity style, and the search after coffee was made anything at tresome business. There is so little known comments somewhat out-of-the-way corner of our contined the many readers will find the descriptions of country also ple of greater interest than sketches of more distant and might create,"

THE

For 1886 (Fourteenth Year).

A large 8vo, over 3000 pages. With Duplex Index. Cloth, $2.

The improvements of recent years in the Trade-List Annual have given such general satisfaction that there will be no change in the forthcoming volume (fourteentic year) as to the essential features, which are:

- 1. The latest Catalogues of American Publishers and Manufacturers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm names.
- 2. A complete reprint of the "Publishers' Weekly" full title RECORD OF BOOKS published (inclusive of all the descriptive notes) from July 4, 1885, to June 26, 1886. In order to facilitate reference, it will be accompanied by a full INDEX, by which every book on record can be found, whether it is looked for under author, title, or subject.
- 3 The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1886, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase and sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we have decided to apply it in the future to all copies of the "Annual" Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 80 cents per copy extra.

OF THE

Literary News. 1886.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS.

THE LITERARY NEWS for Christmas, 1886, will embrace thirty-two pages of reading matter and illustrations, and we intend to make it of a higher interest and artistic attractiveness than last year, and to issue it promptly.

Its sole aim and object is to increase the sale of books; and every book-seller who distributes it may be sure of being benefited thereby.

A chief attraction of the forthcoming issue will be the numerous specimen illustrations from the most prominent and popular new holiday books.

The most valuable feature, besides the Literary Notes, will be a special price-list of the Books of the Season, in all the departments of Holiday Literature.

To those who desire to reach a wider public than they feel they can afford to seek through the more expensive Christmas Number of the Publishers' Weekly, the Christmas Number of the Literary News is recommended as the best possible medium to cultivate a holiday trade.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HENRY HOLT & Co. expect to issue this month the American edition of the last two volumes of Symonds' "Renaissance in Italy," which is to be entitled "Catholic Reaction."

ROBERTS BROS. will issue this month "Carving and Serving," a valuable little manual, by Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, author of "The Boston Cook-Book." They have in preparation "Some Chinese Ghosts," by Lafcadio Hearn.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have in press a volume entitled "Shall We Know Them Again? thoughts on the subject of recognition in a future state," and a sketch of "James Hannington, D.D., First Bishop of Equatorial Africa," by E. C. Donson.

WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN will publish shortly of a generation that is past Sir John Suckling's "Poems," with a memoir and terest and historical value.

notes, edited by Frederick A. Stokes. The edition will be uniform with Locker's Poems, issued last year, and will contain a new etching of the soldier-poet, by J. S. King, after a portrait by Vandyke.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to-day "The Queen of the Pirate Isle," by Bret Harte, illustrated by Kate Greenaway; volume I. of Dean Plumptre's translation of the "Commedia" and "Canzoniere" of Dante, with notes, essays, and a biographical introduction; part IV. of Professor Francis J. Child's "English and Scotch Popular Ballads;" and Longfellow's "Dante," uniform with the poems and prose works already published in the new Riverside Edition.

T. B. Peterson & Brothers will issue immediately an autobiography of Mrs. B. Beaumont, of Woodville, Miss., to be entitled "Twelve Years of My Life." The author is widely known in her native State, and her book is said to be written in crisp, attractive style, her life having furnished incidents enough to make it interesting. This firm also have in press "Iphigenia," by Hugo Furst, announced as "a domestic love story of American life, showing much scholarly information pleasantly imparted;" and a new edition of Habberton's "Helen's Babies."

CASSELL & Co. announce that the next two and final volumes of Matthews' and Huttons' popular series, Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States, will be issued this month. In the first will be found Mr. Lawrence Barrett's paper on Edwin Booth, which will prove only second in interest to Mr. Booth's essay on his father, Junius Brutus Booth, which appeared in the third volume of this series. The large-paper editions of these books are now on the press. They are handsome folios prepared in the interests of those fortunate beings who have the time and the money to devote to "extending' and "extra illustrating." This large paper edition is limited to one hundred signed copies of each volume.

G. P. PUTNAM'S Sons will shortly publish, under arrangement with the author, a translation of the new work by Prof. Emile de Laveleye, entitled the "Balkan Peninsula," which comprises a narrative of a recent journey through Croatia, Bosnia, Servia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Roumelia, and Turkey. The distinguished Belgian economist always travels for the purpose of observing, and the results of his observations, as presented in the present volume, possess a special and timely interest, and give fresh and important information on the actual status of the countries whose relations with Europe and with each other are exciting such widespread attention. They have also nearly ready, "The Recollections of a Private Soldier in the Army of the Potomac," by Frank Wilkeson; and a curious autobiographical narrative by Georgiana Bruce Kirby, entitled "Years of Experience." Mrs. Kirby, who was in 1844 a teacher in Boston, joined the Brook-Farm Community, and remained with it until the close of the undertaking in 1846. After the close of the Brook-Farm experiment, the young teacher associated herself with the philanthropist, Eliza W. Farnham, who was at that time working among the women convicts in Sing Sing. From Sing Sing she went as a governess to one of the Southern States, and had her first view of slavery. pictures presented by her of the men and events of a generation that is past are full of personal in-

Alton, Edmund. Among the law-makers. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1886. 12+308 p. il. D. cl., $2.50.

When quite a small boy Mr. Alton was for four years a page in the U. S. Senate. It is from this experience he has obtained a large part of the material embraced in this volume. It consists of anecdotes about public men and descriptions of the pranks of himself and his page associates. This side of the book, however, is secondary to the instructive element which pervades it. The writer digresses, continually going out of his course "to introduce peculiar specimens of legislative action, and to illustrate characteristics of the respective Houses; and he has, at times, sought to do more—to exhibit, by practical examples, the constitutional relations between the three departments of the General Government, as distinct, yet ples, the constitutional relations between the three departments of the General Government, as distinct, yet interdependent, parts of a mighty and harmonious system; to emphasize commanding principles of civil liberty and public law; and, in general, tostimulate in the minds of American youth an active and patriotic interest in the political history and destiny of their country." A greater part of the volume appeared originally as a serial in St. Nicholas. Modifications and additions will be found in the present form the present form.

Barr, Amelia E. Between two loves: a tale of the West Riding. N. Y., Harper, [1886.] 176 p. S. (Harper's handy ser., no. 102.) pap., 25 c A quaint romance, which is for the most part escated amidst the din and clatter of a Yorkshire mill. There is very little plot to reveal, and the story depends for its interest on the wooing of Master Burley and the decision of pretty Sarah Benson, who is loath to desert her loom and choose an easier life at the expense of duty.

Belt, Harriett Pennawell. A mirage of promise. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887 [1886.] 3-354 p. D. cl., $1.25.
The time of this narrative is sixty years ago, the locality is "Fordyce Co., in one of our Middle Statis." The hostile feelings existing between Federalists and Democrats, and the efforts of the earlier Abolitionists are introduced as historical elements. The "mirage" is supposed to be the distant, fascinating glimpse of the "promise" of abolition. The thread of the story is slight, but almost impossible to condense. Some of the leading characters, especially the women, are very well drawn.

Besant, Walter. Children of Gibeon: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1886.] 87 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no, 551.) pap., 20 c.

A modern English story in which some of the charactes resemble the "Gibeonites" of Biblical fame, hence the title. The adoption of a child results in a case of mixed identity, and is the principal incident in a number of seastional ones which make up the plot. The scene alternates from Hackney Marsh to London and Hoxton. The characters represent three grades of society: the aristo-racy of London, the respectable working class of Hack-ney Marsh, and the poor of Hoxton slums.

The present volume is intended as a sort of supplement, covering the same ground, and illustrating the use of precious stones in decoration, more especially as personal ornaments. In preparing the work use has been of various writers from general literature discoursing upon this topic, and from works exclusively scientific.

Cameron, Mrs. H. Lovett. Pure gold: a novel.

Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887 [1886.] 8+405 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The events of the story incline to the sensational, and revolve around a miser's wealth, which is inherited by Valentine Eyre conditionally: these conditions get noised abroad, and almost work the hero's undoing before they serve him, by testing his friends and enabling him to select a wife whose nature is to him as "Pure gold."

Cameron, Mrs. H. Lovett. Vera Nevill; or, poor wisdom's chance: a novel. Phil., J: B. Lippincott Co., 1887 [1886.] 8+344 p. S. cl., 75 C.

Vera Nevill is the daughter of an English colonel and his Italian wife. Both her parents die while she is very young. She is taken care of by a sister, who has married an Italian prince, and when the latter dies she comes to England to live with her oldest sister, who is married to a sedate country clergyman and has her mother-in-law to make her life miserable. Proud, spirited Vera engages herself to the rich man of the place to escape from the tiresomeness of the parsonage. She finds out her love for another before her wedding-day, and the remainder of the book shows her earnest struggle to do right and be a good woman. Her rival's jealousy brings the story to a tragic end.

Clarke, Eliza. Susanna Wesley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1886. 2-301 p. S. (Famous women ser.)

Bros., 1886. 2-301 p. S. (Famous women ser.) cl., $1.

This life of Susanna Wesley, the mother of John Wesley, the founder, and of Charles Wesley, the poet, of Methodism, differs from previous ones in not being written from a sectarian nor even from an eminently religious point of view. The author says: "Having been much associated with those who had been in familiar intercourse with Charles Wesley's widow and children, and having heard Susanna Wesley continually spoken of as a woman 'who underwent and overcame' more difficulties than most, the ideal of her life early aroused my imagination. I was delighted with the opportunity of writing her memoir, and have done so with the sympathetic admiration natural to one in whose veins runs some of her blood, however much diluted."

"Many of the poems have long been favorites, and a reperusal of them increases the favorable opinion with which they were first regarded. They are the outpourings of a woman's warm heart and have that spontaneous quality which we all admire in the verses of our best minor singers. The sonnets are clean cut, artistic productions, and the lyrics sing themselves into the memory like strains of delicious music. The shorter pieces are delightful, but Mrs. Hunt showed that she was capable of higher flights in 'The story of Boon.' This is told in flowing numbers, and with a felicity of description and richness of coloring that reproduce the tragic features that underlie all the glowing beauty of Eastern life."—Boston Gazette. Bessie Lansing, the heroine, is the daughter of a West Point general of the old school. Upon leaving boardingschool she goes with her father to the far West and spends five years of her life among the soldiers of various border stations. Upon her father's death she comes East again and marries a good man, but finds him too much taken up with business to give her the devotion to which she had always been accustomed. Bessie is a fine character and the Western scenes are full of life and interest.

A charming description of the events of a ride made on a tricycle by Mr. and Mrs. Pennell "from fair Florence to the eternal city of Rome." They saw more than average travellers do of the people and their simple lives and the lovely scenery. All this is depicted in a most graphic manner both with pen and pencil, Mr. Pennell furnishing a number of sketches from life. Mr. Charles Godfrey Leland, to whom the book is dedicated, furnishes "a friend's apology for this book," in verse; a second titepage is given in imitation of the "Pilgrim's Progress," and the chapters are headed by extracts from that book.

Rankell is a rich business monopolist. The story is told in three sections. First, Rankell is described; second, toid in three sections. First, Rankell is described; second, the different people whose lives were influenced by him; and third, a great political convention, in which Rankell was wirepuller. The ending of the history would seem to be based upon the facts about the death and burial of A. T. Stewart, but Rankell is not intended for a portrait of Stewart. The book has led to much discussion.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE will publish, about April, at the University Press, Edinburgh, a catalogue raisonné of the Dutch and French Loan Collection made by R. T. Hamilton Bruce for the late International Exhibition. It will contain a preface by W. E. Henley and some fifty etchings and croquis by Messrs. W. B. Hole, A.R.S.A. (who is illustrating "Kidnapped" for the Cassells), and Zilcken.

The Publishers' Meekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 4, 1886.

PUBLISHERS are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the solitor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenence and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

OUR CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

For the first time in some years, and for the first time since the Christmas number of the Pub-LISHERS' WEEKLY attained its present dimensions, we have been able to make publication on publication day, and although the breaking down of a press carrying one of the most important forms has delayed a portion of our supply, we trust to have dispatched all the imprint editions by the end of the current week, in time to be of full effectiveness through the entire Christmas holiday season. The Literary News is also issued in good time, and the entirely new plan adopted for it has made it possible to present a number much more attractive and useful to booksellers than those of previous years. We have to make our first acknowledgment for this result to the Lithographoid Printing and Engraving Co., 34 and 36 North Moore St., New York, which handled the Christmas issues both of the Publishers' Weekly and of the Literary News, and for the first time. The paper for both publications comes from the Jessup and Moore Co., the ink from J. H. Bonnell & Co. When it is remembered that in the Christmas issues cuts from all publishers and of all kinds, light and dark, fine and coarse, are brought together to be printed on the same press, and that everything must be done at the last moment, the difficulties of the work will suggest themselves even to such as are not practical printers, and that good work should be produced at all under these conditions is sometimes a surprise to ourselves. The growing use of photogravure and other processes, by preventing the transfer of illustrations from many of the finest book, has been an added difficulty, but notwithstanding we hope the trade will find that the Christman issues are quite up to the standard of previous years.

The comparison of the issues of this year with previous years suggests also a comparison of the general work of this office in this and previous years, which is perhaps not out of place towards the close of one year and the beginning of a new one. The exhibit which we recently printed of the "American Catalogue," showing the diffculties under which the work was done and is great cost, which in that instance was not even covered, illustrates the constant difficulties and limitations of this office in all its work. When the Publishers' Weekly was started years ago by Mr. Leypoldt, and during the early years of association with him of the present writer, it seemed probable that with the growth of general trade, the development of the book business. and the increasing importance which a periodical should attain with years, there might in the near future be an adequate return for the early work which was so largely an investment for the future. Unfortunately that promise has not been realized. The volume of the book trade be doubtless grown with the growth of population, but its methods have gone from bad to worse, so that there is less margin for a living than before While this office has gone forward in its development, quietly endeavoring to do good work for the trade, it has met with new rivals, which have prevented the returns of which there had been in early days such sanguine hopes. Our Christmas issues, for instance, have now the rivalry of Christmas numbers of the American Bookseller. the Book Buyer, Book News, and other enterprises of less importance. We trust, however. that our endeavors to present a Christmas susmary fair to the whole trade, comprehensive of all the leading books, and practically systems tized, will enable us to hold our own in the goodwill of the trade, nothwithstanding later comers. Like competition existing more or less throughout the year and, in some instances, taking up features which the WEKKLY itself originated and to which it had looked as a source of profit, iss prevented that increase of returns which might fairly have been expected to come with the increased work and outlay which the growing manber of books annually published entails upon this office. We are further at the disadvantage of having no great organization directly or indirectly at the back of our periodicals, and of having no great retail book-stores which can by a system of exchanges offer to advertising publishers inducements which we cannot. Whether, in the distant future, the then proprietor of the Pur-LISHERS' WEEKLY will be reduced to the necesity of opening a cheap book-store in Alaska for he sake of increasing his advertising patronage rom the publishing trade we fear to contemplate.

This competition is, however, one of the features of modern business, and we cannot complain that this business is an exception to the general rule. We can only ask the trade to recall that nowhere else is the work of bibliographical record so thoroughly and we believe so accurately ione, and beg them to give all the support which they can to the publications of this office.

THE edition of the Christmas Publishers' WEEKLY, which this year reaches 20,000 copies, is so nearly exhausted that we can only fill orders for individual copies; for the Christmas Literary News we can yet fill a few imprint orders. This year's issue will be found, we think, an extremely good method of attracting readers to the bookstore' whose imprint it bears, and we have arranged to keep the forms intact for a few days longer so that fresh orders can be honored. We invite the attention of dealers also to the desirability of beginning with the new year an imprint subscription to this periodical; if they cannot do that, we desire to ask them to interest themselves in interesting their customers to become subscribers to the subscription edition issued directly from this office at the moderate price of one dollar yearly. The bookseller who obtains a score or so of subscribers in his own town to this publication will be serving his own purposes in serving ours, and as this is a help to the trade which has been somewhat overlooked of late years by many of its older patrons, we should be glad, in cases where imprint orders are out of the question, to have at least this much co-operation from our friends.

A NEW LAW PUBLISHING ENTERPRISE.

THE BLACKSTONE PUBLISHING Co., Philadelphia, of which Mr. Reis Welch is President, propose to furnish to subscribers at $10 a year a reprint of the leading English text-books applicable to the United States, with an occasional translation from the German and French, and where deemed necessary American notes will be added by competent lawyers. The reprints will be verbatim, in clear, legible type, printed on good paper, and will include all important works issued after the 1st of January. The first book of the series is nearly ready and contains nearly a thousand pages. It is a "Treatise on the Law of Master and Servant," by Charles Manley Smith, and includes the law for master and workman, in every description of trade and occupation. next issue will be "Wright on Criminal Conspiracies." This proposed series will constitute of itself a complete collection of the freshest, most authoritative, and most valuable text-books in all the leading departments of the law, and will in a short time furnish for an almost nominal sum a working library of the most desirable recent litature of the profession. The company has a large capital and will undoubtedly make a success of their useful enterprise.

IMPORTATION OF BOOKS FOR COL-LEGES AND LIBRARIES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1, 1886.

The Hon. Daniel Manning, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

SIR: We desire to call your attention to a regulation now in force in connection with the importation of books for colleges and incorporated libraries, which regulation appears, in its present application, to defeat the intention of the law and to work injustice both to the importer and to the institution.

In our business as library agents we have for a number of years had occasion to make importations of books for incorporated institutions which are, under the law, entitled to receive their imported books free of duty.

Books purchased abroad for institutions must, as a rule, be included with other goods in a miscellaneous invoice, for the reason that there often are not enough volumes for any one institution to make up a separate shipment or a distinct invoice.

The fact, however, that certain items on an invoice are "duty free" for B Library or C Library is distinctly specified on the invoice, and forms part of the statement sworn to before the consul by the London representative of our house.

The institution sending us an order for books adds an instruction, signed by its President and Secretary, to import free of duty, for the use of the institution, such of the works as are foreign (see Blank "A," enclosed).

A year or more ago it was ordered that, in addition to the above form, a certificate must be sworn to by an official of the institution, in which certificate should be respecified the articles imported and the vessel by which the importation was

The difficulty in carrying out these regulations, in connection with the importation of books, arises from the fact that it is not usually practicable to fill any one order for miscellaneous foreign publications in such manner that the volumes shall all arrive at one time and by the same steamer. The necessity of applying, after the arrival of a steamer, to distant colleges and libraries for the several certificates for the several volumes or lots of volumes belonging to each, entails most annoying and expensive delays.

A London invoice of 1000 volumes may contain ten volumes for a college in Wisconsin, two or three for a library in Kansas, and another lot for an institution in Texas; and until the arrival of the vessel we have no means of knowing for which of our customers duty free lots are included in our invoices.

Under the former practice, we should, in any case, have been permitted to use in clearing these invoices the college orders previously filed with

Under the present instructions, we are informed that the oath of the college officers can be taken only after the entry of our invoice at the Custom-House. We are, therefore, obliged to leave the entire invoice in bond or in "general order" until we can send reports to customers in different States, and can secure from them the certificates required.

It may easily happen that rather than to subject ourselves to the loss entailed by leaving in store for an indefinite period goods for which we have present need, we are forced to pay the duty on college goods which are under the law nondutiable, and that the intention of the law is thus defeated.

We respectfully submit that if the privilege of importing books free of duty for the educational purposes of incorporated institutions is to be continued in form, it ought not to be rendered nugatory in fact by restrictions such as those now in force.

If the Custom House could be instructed to receive in the charging of duty-free books certificates from institutions sworn to at the time of the original ordering of the books instead of after the arrival of the books in port, the most perplexing of the present difficulties would be removed.

Respectfully submitting this suggestion for the consideration of your department, we are your obedient servants, G. P. Putnam's Sons.

CASSELL & CO. NOT TO GO TO SCOT-LAND.

In October the following statement was cabled to this country: "The shareholders of the publishing firm of Messrs. Cassell & Co. met to-day in Glasgow and advised the directors to remove the works of the company from London to Glasgow. They also advised them to consider what steps are necessary in regard to American contracts and the making of calls." Inquiry at the New York house at the time confirmed our suspicions that the statement was either just a trifle wild or had no foundation at all. It is now learned that the firm referred to was not Cassell & Co., the publishers, but the Cassell Gold Extracting Company, Limited.

OBITUARY.

SYLVANDER HUTCHINSON.

Mr. Sylvander Hutchinson, who has carried on the book and stationery business in New Bedford, Mass., for over eighteen years, died Nov. 25. 1886, after an illness of over three years. Mr. Hutchinson was born July 14, 1815, at Braintree. He afterwards went to Massachusetts, where he taught school for nearly twenty years. The last portion of the time in New Bedford, Mass., where he resigned his position and established himself in the book and stationery business, which he carried on up to August 18, 1883, when he was struck down by an attack of paralysis, since which time he has been unable to attend to business. H. S. Hutchinson, who has had charge of his father's business the past three years, will continue to manage it.

WILLIAM A. LEARY.

WILLIAM A. LEARY died at his home in Philadelphia, November 15, aged seventy-three. He was the founder of Leary's Cheap Book-store, and his place of business was the rendezvous of many of the famous men of the country, who, while stopping in Philadelphia, would spend hours in his establishment.

E. T. FARNES, of the firm of Farnes & Rothie, booksellers and stationers, Minneapolis, Minn., is dead.

JOHN RIVINGTON died at his residence, Babbicombe, Devon, October 30. Mr. Rivington, who for many years was a partner in the house of business at Waterloo Place, retired from business about twenty years ago. His father, of the same name, who died about forty years ago, was among the original founders of the Publishers' Circular.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

ANOTHER "CHATTERBOX" DECISION.

In the suit brought by Estes & Lauriat against Frank Leslie Publishing Co. to restrain them is the use of the word "Chatterbook," Judge Shyman, of the Circuit Court of the U. S. for the Southern District of New York, on November 22 gave the following opinion: "The name 'Chatterbook,' as printed upon the cover of the defendants' books, is, in my opinion, an imitation of the used upon books of a juvenile character points' distinctively to the origin of ownership of the books to which it is applied, and the use by the defendants of the name 'Chatterbook' upon the books which are represented by the exhibits in the case, the same being books of a juvenile character of the general appearance, style and manner of cover of the complainants' books, should be enjoined pendente litte.

ESTES & LAURIAT on the 1st inst. served as injunction on George A. Leavitt & Co., restaining them in the sale of the Worthington "Chaterboxes." A hearing in the case was ordered for the 3d inst. (as we go to press), the details of which will be given in our next issue.

It is stated that Austria has not yet signed the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary Copyright. Her reasons for drawing back and two: Firstly, that the literary convention between Austria and Hungary, although anthorized by the Council of the Empire, has not yet been ratified; secondly, that the existing law of copyright is quite antiquated, and does not tally with the modern development of literary production, more particularly in the domain of music and art. It is therefore in contemplation to reconsider the whole subject with a view to the drafting of a new law which will shortly be laid before the Reichsrath.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co., late publishers of The Century in England, will publish Scribner: Magazine in that country.

REV. EDWARD EVERETT HALE has written a new serial story which makes its initial appearance in the December number of his magazine, Lend a Hand. It is entitled "Mr. Tangier's Vacations."

ELIOT STOCK, London, is about to issue, under the title of Book Prices Current, a monthly record of the prices realized for rare books at auctions in town and country. The list will give the titles of the books, their prices, purchasers, and the date of sale.

Mr. Howells' next novel will be printed in Harper's Magasine during the coming year. The title originally selected for it was "An Open Question." It was found, however, that this title had already been used for a book, and a change was accordingly made to "April Hopes."

MRS. LAMB announces two notable series of personal sketches to appear in her Magasim of American History during the coming year. One will describe the rise, progress, and development of journalism, including biographical notes and portraits of the chief editors of the century, and the other will give accounts of "The Benefactors of New York," the term benefactor being applied to men who have devoted themselves to trade, art, and learning, as well as to charity.

THE Athenaum understands that an important idition will shortly be made to the list of our onthly periodicals. The readers of Lord Bynknow well how much interest the poet took, hen abroad, in literary matters, especially in sything connected with his old friend and publier in Albemarle Street, and will remember the ell-known lines:

Upon thy table's baize so green
The last new Quarterly is seen;
But where is thy new Magazine,
My Murray?

le hear that the present Mr. Murray is going carry out his father's project, and that in January next will be published the first number of furray's Magazine, to be issued monthly, and lited by Mr. Edward A. Arnold, a nephew of lr. Matthew Arnold.

THE December (Holiday) number of the Engrish Illustrated Magazine contains, among other tractive features, nine full-page illustrations from drawings of L. Alma-Tadema, R.A., Clara fontalba, W. Biscombe Gardner, George Du faurier, Hugh Thomson, and J. Buxton Knight. Toetry is represented by Mr. Swinburne and reorge Meredith, who each contribute a poem, and the author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," paper under the suggestive title of "Colonial apers Please Copy." In lighter literature there is the continuation of Mr. Farjeon's novel, "A lecret Inheritance," and short stories by D. Thristie Murray and the author of "John Hering." The most distinguishing feature of the nagazine—the illustrated articles—comprises papers on "Venice," by H. F. Brown, and "In the Heart of London," by D. Rice Jones, both elabrately illustrated; together with illustrated articles on "Surrey Mill-Wheels," by Grant Allen, and "Hops and Hop Picking."

BUSINESS NOTES.

Anniston, Ala.—W. E. Sorsby has succeeded H. A. Binford in the book and stationery business

Boston, Mass.—Mr. Charles C. Soule, law bookseller, now occupies the whole of Freeman Place Chapel, with entrance at 15½ Beacon Street, opposite the Boston Athenæum. The chapel has been refitted as a law-book store, and renovated under the supervision of Mr. Frank Hill Smith. The main room is about seventy feet long, sixty feet broad, and fifty feet high. Alcoves, with shelving for books, have been carried from the pillars to the walls, on each side, leaving the rest of the floor, with chairs and tables, for the use of customers. In this commodious salesroom is displayed an attractive stock of law-books, and of books connected, nearly or remotely, with the law.

New York.—The firm of Baker & Taylor was dissolved by mutual consent, November 24. The business of the late firm will be continued at No. 9 Bond Street, as heretofore, by "The Baker & Taylor Co."

PORTLAND, ME.—W. H. Stevens & Co. have succeeded to the business of Hoyt, Fogg Donham.

SALINA, KAN.—Whitehead & Seaman, booksellers and stationers, have sold out.

WARSAW, IND.—George W. Kilmer, bookseller, has sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Belford, Clarke & Co. have in preparation a 12mo edition of "Manon Lescaut," with the Leloir illustrations.

R. WORTHINGTON has imported 5000 English Chatterboxes, published by Wells, Gardner, Darton & Co., London.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SON announce a new edition of Bulwer's novels, to be called the Pocket Volume edition.

It is said that "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is a portrait of the author's son, Vivian Burnett, now some thirteen years old.

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT are bringing out a new edition of Bryant's "Library of Poetry and Song," which contains about 2000 selections from nearly 700 authors.

WARD & DRUMMOND, N. Y., and Jas. H. Earle, Boston, will publish on the 15th a new story by Rev. Emory J. Haynes (pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston), entitled "Dollars and Duty."

JOEL MUNSELL'S SONS, Albany, will undertake a work having for its title "American Ancestry," and for its aim the exhibition of the male lineage of ever citizen of the United States who can trace his descent from families settled in America previous to 1800.

WILBUR B. KETCH., N. Y., has in press a book by George Lansing Taylor, the well-known clergyman and poet, entitled "What Shall We Do with the Sunday-School as an Institution?" It is calculated to create considerable interest among churches and Sunday-schools everywhere.

THE friends of scientific temperance education have scored a triumph in Canada, where the Province of Quebec has passed a compulsory Scientific Temperance Act. The text-books on this subject, published by A. S. Barnes & Co., have been adopted there for exclusive use in the schools.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIV. PUBLICATION AGENCY will publish early next year the second extra volume of their Studies. It will be a "History of the Government of Philadelphia," based upon the Acts of Assembly, the city ordinances, the State Reports, and many other authorities, by Edward P. Allinson and Boies Penrose.

James H. Earle, Boston, will publish on the 15th inst, "Selections for Children," a charming collection of poetry, religious and secular, grave and gay, for school and home use, designed especially for the younger children. He also desires to inform the trade that, in order to avoid confusion of titles, the title of Dr. A. P. Peabody's new work will be "Building a Character," instead of "Character Building," as at first announced.

The J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. announce the Autobiography of Mrs. M. J. Coston, under the punning title "A Signal Success." It will recount the author's adventures in introducing the Coston Signal Light. They will also issue a series of studies of modern literary celebrities, by William Henry Thorne, under the title, "Modern Idols," and a volume of "Recitations," by Mrs. J. B. Potter, so well known both in this country and in England.

D. LOTHROP & Co. will publish about the 15th inst., the "Young Folks' Golden Treasury of Poems," a large and choice of gift-books for young people, containing original poems contributed by the best American and English poets, with about 200 fine illustrations by American artists. They have also nearly ready a sweet and tender story by Miss Belle C. Green, called "A New England Idyl," in which the character drawing is said to be true to life.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have just ready a new edition of their "Red Book for 1887," containing the addresses of the litte of Boston; also, a pamphlet entitled "The Effect of Military Drill upon Boys," by Dudley A. Sargent, M.D., a well-known Professor of Gymnastics in Boston. They have in press "Selections from Buddha," compiled from the translations of Max Müller; also, "How We Saw the Far West," by E. G. H., being a young lady's letters home.

GINN & Co. will publish about January 1, 1887, a "Dante Handbook," by Giovanni A. Scartazzini, translated from the Italian, with notes and additions by Thomas Davidson. The work is divided into two parts, the first treating of Dante's life; the second, of his works. In neither is there omitted any really important fact. To every section is appended a valuable bibliography, and these bibliographies, taken together, form an excellent catalogue of a Dante library.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in preparation "Methods in Education" by Antonio Rosmini Serbati, translated by Mr. Wm. Grey, the work being an "exposition of the method of presenting knowledge to the human mind in accordance with the natural laws of its development;" also, Compayre's "Lectures on Pedagogy: theoretical and practical," translated and annotated by Prof. Payne, of the University of Michigan. The work is regarded by eminent authorities as the best extant on the theory and practice of education.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish immediately "Sermon Briefs," a series of suggestive outlines for every Sunday of the Christian year, by an experienced English preacher. Also, a fifth edition, revised and enlarged, of Dean Plumptre's "The Spirits in Prison and Other Studies on the Life after Death." He has just published a work of timely and special interest, entitled "Future Probation," a symposium on the question, "Is Salvation Possible after Death?" by Stanly Leathes, John Cairns, Edward White, Stopford Brooke, R. Littledale, and a number of other leading minds of England.

Some time before his death the late Mr. H. Stevens arranged for the publication of the first volume of the Court Minutes of the East India Company. "It interested him on other accounts," says the London Athenaum, "but especially from the mention of the 'Mayflowre,' which he believed to be the ship of the Pilgrim Fathers, for the description of Waymouth's Voyage, etc. Mr. Stevens intended to compose an introduction, but failing health prevented him; and Sir George Birdwood has kindly written one. The book will be issued by Mr. Stevens' son under the title of 'The Dawn of British Trade to the East Indies.'"

The Essex Institute has begun the publication of a series of etchings of old houses and places of interest in and about Salem, Mass. These etchings are 3½x5 inches in size, and are for sale at the rooms of the Institute. The set comprises the following: Roger Williams' House, built in 1635, as it appeared in 1828; Pickering House, built about 1650; Turner House, a favorite haunt of Hawthorne's, and sometimes called the "House of Seven Gables;" Peabody House, described by Hawthorne in "Dr. Grimshaw's Secret:" Birthplace of Hawthorne; Gallows Hill; Custom-House; Rebecca Nurse House; First Church in Salem, built in 1634; Gen. Gage's Headquarters. Orders may be sent to George M. Whipple, Secretary.

CASSELL & Co. have now ready a portfolio of "Character Sketches from Thackeray," by Frederick Barnard, whose "Sketches from Dickers" have done so much to bring the living, breathing men, women, and children of that immortal noelist before us. In this new work we have the pathetic "Little Sister," from the Virginian and her opposite, the volatile, reckless, fascina-ting, "Becky Sharp." Pendennis has furnished the artist with some of his best material. There is a portrait of the Major himself in all his glory, and of "Capt. Costigan," beery and loquacious, sitting among the lares and penates of his danghter's profession. Then we have the dignified and elegant Col. Newcomb, prayer-book in hand, just leaving the church door, and the gentle Major Dobbin with the baby on his knee. Mr. Barnard has worked with an appreciative spirit, and per more of the novelist than of himself in these admirable sketches. The photogravure process is seen at its best in these reproductions, which form a portfolio that no lover of Thackeray can afford to be without.

CHATTO & WINDUS will publish immediately a new prose work by Mr. Swinburne, "The Literary Record of the Quarterly Review."

THE first volume of Lady Burton's edition of "The Arabian Nights" has appeared. All applications for the same should be made to her at 23 Dorset Street, Portman Square, W., and be marked outside, "Lady Burton's Edition."

SAMPSON Low & Co. will shortly publish "The Memoirs of Robert E. Lee; his Military History and Campaigns," by his military secretary, A. L. Long. It will be issued in one large octavo volume of 700 pages.

"An exceedingly charming and well-told story. The characters well drawn, complete, and lifelike, and the story one which keeps the interest unflagging from preface to finis."—

Sunday News. Buffalo, N. Y.

"The subject is thoroughly, intensely American; the book is right out of the soil, it is like a block of New England granite, or one of the big trees of California; it has large stature, reserve force, abundant play of power; its intellectual endowment is marked; it has character, incident, sentiment, and passion; it is virile, natural, lifelike, dramatic, absorbing."—Literary World, Boston.

The famous Tile Artists.

Being a series of designs making forty-seven original photogravures, 10 x r2 inches, in satin portfolia

In consequence of the difficulties attending the production of this novelty in book-making the great care requisite in reproducing the sketches, and additional expenses attending the manufacture over illustrated works in general, we find our original estimate falls short of the cost; therefore, we are unable to continue to furnish at the price at which they have been advertised. In future the prix will be $10.00, we reserving the right to further increase it, the edition being limited.

WHIST SCORES, AND CARD-TABLE TALK.

By RUDOLPH H. RHEINHARDT. With illustry tions, and a Bibliography of Whist. 12890. gilt top, $1.50.

This attractive little volume is unique in Whist institute. It owes its origin to the author's observing that record of past games in a family or whist party is simply a matter of peculiar interest, yet seldom accessible. In means of a cleverly constructed score-blank, this volume enables a full record of points, games, etc., to be supported by the point of points games, etc., to be while upon the right-hand page is given a great rarely entertaining matter connected with cards and card-paining. Nothing like an original treatise on whis sucception. We have the rules and points of the game are coming given, with many odd and curious facts, the results of extensive research.

Many Infallible Proofs.

By Rev. Arthur T. Pirrson, D.D. A series of exceedingly practical chapters on the Evidences of Christianity or the Written and Living Word of Christianity or the Written and Living Word of God.

In "A Word Preliminary" the author says: "The writer of these pages once found himself getting into the deep darkness of doubt. Beginning at the foundation, he searched for himself until he found the proofs ample that the Bible is the word of God. It was like finding one's way out of a dense wood into the full light of day. Others are still in the dark, and these chapters are the blazed trees that mark the path by which one man got out of the forest. Perhaps some one else may try the same route with a like result."

and Muscle—Co-laborers.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness, its common-sense, its impartiality, its lucidity, and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind, if not the best that we have seen. While it is scarcely possible for it to be put into the hands of all our wage-workers, we wish it could be read by every one of them."—INTERIOR.

Biblical Theology of the Old Testament Based on Oehler.

By REVERE FRANKLIN WEIDNER. Ochler's work has deservedly been regarded as the most important work on this subject ever published; but it is a work for scholars, and so voluminous that it is used more as a book of reference than as a text-book or book for continuous perusal. The attempt has here been made to rewrite and reproduce this valuable work for use in the class-room, and for the studytable of pastors, and for that large class of intelligent students of the Bible who are teachers of the Bible-classes in our Sunday-schools. WILL PUBLISH DEC. 14th:

Study of Mexico.

By DAVID A. WELLS. Reprinted, with Additions, from "The Popular Science Monthly." 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50 cents.

"The results of the 'Study of Mexico' were originally contributed, in the form of a series of papers, to 'The Popular Science Monthly.' . . . The interest and discussion they have excited, both in the United States and Mexico, have been such, and the desire on the part of the people of the former country, growing out of recent political complications, to know more about Mexico, has become so general and manifest, that it has been thought expedient to republish and offer them to the public in book-form—subject to careful revision, and with extensive additions, especially in relation to the condition and wages of labor and the industrial resources and productions of Mexico."—

ESSAYS ON EVOLUTION. By Professor E. D. COPE, Member of the National Academy of Sciences. With numerous illustrations. One vol., 8vo, 19 x 467 pages, cloth, $3.00.

CONTENTS.—Part I. General Evolution. Part II. Structural Evidence of Evolution. Part III. Mechanical Evolution. Part IV. Metaphysical Evolution.

Probably no scientist in the United States is of higher anthority in the field covered by this volume than Professor Cope, whose paleontological discoveries have made him famous in scientific circles in Europe as well as in America. The twenty-one essays which constitute the work present the whole subject of evolution with great fulness.

Notes on the Parables of Our Lord. Notes on the Miracles of Our Lord.

By the late Archbishop Trench. New revised editions. 12mo, cloth, $1.50 each.

The present are entirely new editions of books that enjoyed great popularity during the lifetime of Archbishop Trench. The text has received the author's latest emendations, as made by him in his own copy during the last years of his life, and the notes in Latin and Greek are translated, carrying out an intention which had long been in the author's mind, thereby bringing the volumes within the reach of a large circle of readers.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HARPER & BROS. will publish at once Andrew Lang's new book, entitled "In the Wrong Paradise, and Other Stories," a collection of nine short stories.

CHARLES B. WEBSTER & Co. publish this week, in one large octavo volume, the late Gen. Geo. B. McClellan's own story of his connection with the civil war.

CHARLES SCRIENER'S SONS publish this week a "History of the Second Army Corps in the Army of the Potomac," by Francis A. Walker, illustrated with portraits, maps, and plans; also, a neat little volume, entitled "Talks with Socrates About Life," being translations from the "Gorgias" and the "Republic of Plato."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS publish this week Mrs. Bruce Kirby's autobiography, "Years of Experience," described in our last weekly issue; "Story of the Moors in Spain," by Stanley Lane Poole, in The Story of the Nations series; and two volumes of poetry, "The Poet's Praise," by Henry Hamilton, and "Lines and Interlines," by Julia P. Boynton.

P. Blakiston, Son & Co., Philadelphia, announce as nearly ready a complete and exhaustive text-book on "Skin Diseases," by Professor T. McCall Anderson, of Glasgow University, illustrated by lithograph and steel-plates, and numerous wood-engravings. They have just ready a "Hand-book of Materia Medica, Pharmacy, and Therapeutics," by Professor Samuel O. L. Potter, M.D., in their "New Series of Manuals."

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY have ready a fascinating book for young people, entitled "How?" full of interesting examples, teaching children to make the magnetic circus, the wind-mill puppet, the snake infallible barometer, the balancing doll, the magic telescope, a siphon, magic cards, counter puzzle, balancing pin, set of cars, toy locomotive, boat puzzle, how to break a string, the xylophone, the Æolian harp, the triple bridges, the toy steamboat, camera obscura, the aquarium, etc., etc. It contains many new and novel tricks, games, puzzles, and 300 illustrations.

Funk & Wagnalls publish this week a volume of short stories, by Avery MacAlpine, entitled "Teresa Itasca;" "The Trial of Gideon, and Countess Almara's Murder," two short stories in one volume by Julian Hawthorne; "My Lodger's Legacy," by Robert W. Hume, a story of temperance work and labor and social reform, dedicated to members of the White Cross Army; and "An Unfortunate Woman, and Assiga," two short stories in one volume, by Turguenief, translated from the Russian by Henry Gersoni. The three last named volumes are neatly bound in library style—cloth with marbled paper sides.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish on the 14th David A. Wells' "A Study of Mexico," reprinted from The Popular Science Monthly, carefully revised and with extensive additions especially in relation to the condition and wages of labor and the industrial resources and productions of Mexico; a volume of essays on evolution, entitled "The Origin of the Fittest," by Prof. E. D. Cope, a scientist of high authority, whose paleontological discoveries have made him famous in scientific circles in Europe as well as in America; new editions of Trench's Notes on the Parables and on the Miracles, the price of which has been reduced to $1.50 per volume; and "The Witching Time," a volume of stories by Marion Crawford, W. E. Norris, Vernon Lee, and others.

LEE & SHEPARD have just published "The Monarch of Dreams," by Thomas Wentworth Higginson, a work which is based upon the careful study of the phenomena of dreaming, and "The Nation in a Nutshell," by George Makepiece Towle, a rapid review of American history, affording a complete survey of the main features and landmarks of the country in a limited space. They will publish next week "Foes of Her Household," by Amanda M. Douglass, a work which, by its ingenuity of plot and finish of composition, ranks well with her previous productions; "How Shall My Child Be Taught? practical pedagogy, or, the science of teaching illustrated," by Louise Parsons Hopkins, of the Swain Free School, New Bedford, Mass.; and "Young People's History of Ireland," by George Makepiece Towle. The diction of the latter volume is pleasing and direct, and the earnest and eloquent introductory preface by John Boyle O'Reilly will add to its interest and value. The publishers announce that they have advanced the price of "Plastic Sketches" from $7.50 to $10.00.

This delightful little work had an immense sale in the original French. It has lost none of its charm in its excellent translation. It is divided into seven parts: Asimals; Plants; Stones and rocks: Physics; Chaminy; Animal physiology; Vegetable physiology. All that can be learned regarding these subjects is given in a sacciast attractive style. The American editor has made only such changes and additions as were necessary to Americanize the book and adapt it to the requirements of palse and private schools as well as to the home instruction is this country. Natural history has been slightly calared by the introduction of several American species, and a few inaccuracies concerning other species met with in the U. S. have been corrected.

"Unmistakably a romance and none the less so because based upon an historical episode.

Passion and pathos, the wild luxuriance of courtly licentiousness, and the simple but strongly marked affections of primitive people are interwoven in effective contrast. Sir Henry Frankland brought with him from the easy-going London of the eighteenth century a Bohemian spirit, which was emphasized by being seen against the background of New England Puritanism and was as far removed from the character of its surroundings as from the tone of the quaint fishing hamlet of Marblehead. As the story moves from these shores to the London of 175- and the rural counties of Nottingham and York, and still again to the fair but Babylonian capital of Lisbon, it is seen that the material with which history supplied the author was rich in romantic and dramatic opportunity."—Boston was rich in romantic and dramatic opportunity."-Boston

The guilty river is the "ugliest, muddiest stream in England." It runs back of an old mill, inhabited by the miller, his beautiful daughter, and a lodger, who is deaf and almost insane with jealousy if any one notices the miller's daughter. The rich young man of the place, after being absent for years, comes into his property—and by accident meets this lodger and learns his strange story. The details of mystery are worked up in the author's skilful way. The denouement is a surprise. The question of heredity is finely handled.

Designed to aid the student in getting a clear idea of the animal kingdom as a whole, by the careful study of a few typical animals. He is first told how to collect and preserve the material for his study. He is then given detailed directions for its examination and dissection. It is not described to him, thus robbing him of the opportunity to develop his own powers of description, but its parts are named, giving barely enough of description that he may be sure to recognize and apply the proper name to each. He is thus led to observe and describe for himself. All the animal sub-kingdoms are represented, more attention being paid to those forms which the student is likely to find.

Copley, Josiah. Gathered sheaves; from the writings of the late Josiah Copley; with an introduction by Rev. S. H. Kellogg, D.D. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1886.] 20+370 p.

por. D. cl., $1.50.
Josiah Copley was born in 1803, and was known for half a century as an editor and writer on religious subjects. He was a Presbyterian, and had joined the Church early in life, but was very liberal to all Evangelical denominations. He died in November, 1884. The papers now offered to the public were originally contributed to the Presbyterian Banner and other periodicals.

They include essays on upwards of sixty subjects and show the deeply religious mind of their author.

Mrs. Marthal. Coston, the wife of F. B. Coston, U.S.N., was left a widow with two boys at the age of twenty-one, and absolutely without any means of support. Looking over her husband's papers she found "a large envelope containing papers and a skilfully drawn plan of signals to be used at sea, at night, for the same purposes of communication that flags are used by day." Mrs. Coston immediately set systematically to work to bring these signals to the notice of the U.S. authorities; then with the money received from the government she travelled all through Europe and gained personal interviews with all the potentates and influential men of the day, and brought her husband's invention to the attention of every nation. By her effort the "International Code of Coston Signals" was established. She describes her adventures in detail.

"A most entertaining volume, written when past seventy by one who in his day has known many of the most eminent Englishmen. Sir Francis was a friend and schoolmate at Eton of Gladstone and Arthur Hallam, and gives many recollections of their great debates together. He was also with them at Oxford, and afterwards a Fellow there. Then he became a barrister, and he sertates many of his adventures while on the circuit. Being comparatively poor, he was forced soon after his marrisge to enter the civil service, and thus was cut off from active Parliamentary life. He was and is a strict Tory in his opinions. In 1867 he was elected Professor of Poetry at Oxford, and some of his lectures there have been published. At the close of a long life he frankly asserts that he has lacked that definite aim and steadfast purpose which, with his natural abilities and education, might have secured him a high place in literature or politics."—New York Eversing Post.

"It pictures life in the Russian provinces about forty years ago-that is to say, long before the emancipation of the serfs, and even before the Crimean war. Gogol's the serIs, and even before the Crimean war. Gogol's theme was not so much of a plea for the serIs, nor a tirade against the middle class, official and private, of provincial Russia, as a picture of Russian life. In fact, a free reproduction of 'Dead souls' was published in London in 1854, with this title, 'Home-life in Russia.' . . . The characters are what we in America should call the local aristocracy. In Russia, where they have many 'excellencies' and 'eminences,' and some 'majesties,' the characters might be described as the middle-class—land-owners, Government officers, and Tchitchikoff. Tchitchikoff. and of mean birth is a modern schemer. owners, Gövernment officers, and Tchitchikoff. Tchitchikoff, a man of mean birth, is a modern schemer.

Tchitchikoff's stock in trade, the idea on which he travels and succeeds, is the purchase of 'dead souls'—that is, of serfs nominally enumerated in the census or official reports, but really not living. Of course, this idea of buying dead souls, and making money in the bargain, is bitter sarcasm, Gogol wishing to expose the hollow pretexts on which certain shrewd managers obtain money first, and respectability afterwards. The matter, in fact, is treated as a mere incident or by-play, the kernel of the story lying in the delineation of the central personages."—Boston Beacon.

Randall, D. A., D.D. Ham-mishkan, the wonderful tent: an account of the structure, signification, and spiritual lessons of the Mosaic Tabernacle erected in the wilderness of Sinai;

Tabernacle erected in the wilderness of Sinai; with por. and sketch of the author. Cin., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1886. 44+420 p. il. D. cl., $2. Dr. Randall, divine, traveller, writer, and lecturer, was a painstaking and patient student, and spent much of his time for many years in the preparation of this work. He made an extended tour in Egypt, the wilderness, and release of the places. In simple, easy language the volume gives an account of the sojourn at the foot of Mt. Sinai of a party of travellers, consisting of a Christian, a learned rabbi, and other Biblical scholars. In imagination the Tabernacle is rebuilt and accurately studied. Its entirety and detail, and all of interest that pertains to it, are brought out in a series of delightful discussions held by the company during their encampment beneath the rugged, barren peaks of Sinai. By this method the author succeeds in adorning his subject with the variety and fascination of conversational narrative and interests his reader from first to last. Biblical knowledge, Hebrew lore, historical incident, and theological theory are interwoven in a manner as pleasing as it is instructive.

The Publishers' Weekly

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 11, 1886.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

The trade are invited to send "Communications" to the editor on any topic of interest to the trade, and as to which an interchange of opinion is desirable. Also, matter for "Notes and Queries" thankfully received.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications,

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenence and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT AND THE TRADE.

THE recent rulings of the Treasury in relation to the book trade show the same tendency to close construction, based on the most literal view of the statutes, that has already called out some protests from other lines of business. There is wisdom in one sense in inviting the repeal of unjust or too stringent laws by enforcing them literally, yet when such enforcement would result in considerable hardship to useful and innocent members of the business community, there are certainly two sides to this question of policy. The letter which we printed last week from a leading house of publishers and importers will doubtless have the endorsement of the entire importing trade, and will appeal to the good sense of the publishing trade as well. Every restriction which is not based upon common-sense and sound principle which is enforced against good houses is almost sure to play into the hands of less scrupulous dealers at no gain to the Government.

The circular letter in regard to the steps necessary to be taken by publishers to procure the forfeiture of imported copyrighted books is of the same tone and temper, and has already called out wide protest from the trade. We sincerely hope that the Treasury Department will reconsider the rulings which are causing so much unnecessary trouble to the trade, while gaining nothing for the Government, and in behalf of the trade we heartily second the protests which have already been made to the Secretary.

WE are glad to note that the Presider = again called attention to the need of legislative in behalf of international copyright, although to very general recommendation may have a effect than a more specific recommendation mer have. We regret to learn that the projectors of the current Copyright Bill have less hope of is passage than they had at the close of the last sssion. If the Copyright League would take host to help along a bill which can be passed, instal of standing out for a measure which is not like; to be passed, there would be much more likelihou of some effective legislation now, and more con-We give elseplete legislation in the future. where the report of the annual meeting of the Copyright League, but this gives no indication a to whether the policy of the League will be more helpful than heretofore. While we sympathe heartily, as we have often said, with the ultime object of the League, we should be very gize. it would recognize the force of the old proven that "half a loaf is better than no bread." More over, a less hostile attitude on the part of the League-more in line with that of its President Mr. Lowell, and of others of its members wh spoke at the hearing at Washington, would give it better opportunity to shape modifications & the present bill.

THE AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LEAGUE —ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Copyrist. League was held on December 2d, at the Presinterian Church parlor, Fourth Avenue and 22 Street, at 4 P.M. There were present R. W. Gilder, Joseph B. Gilder, Poultney Bigelow, Frederick Mather, J. B. Holder, Alfred R. Coskling, R. U. Johnson, Howard Crosby, D.D. Arthur G. Sedgwick, Professor H. H. Boyes. Bronson Howard, Brander Matthews, Dr. A. S. Isaacs, Mrs. L. W. Champney, Col. Thomas W. Knox, Charles Barnard, E. C. Stedman, Dr. Titt Munson Coan, and George Walton Green. Sedgwick, as Chairman of the Executive Committee, called the meeting to order, and on motion of Col. Knox was made permanent chairman.

Mr. Green, as Secretary, stated what had been accomplished by the League during the past year in the matter of stirring public opinion throat the newspaper press and by the publication of pamphlets on the question. He referred to be visit which Mark Twain, R. U. Johnson, and him self made to the President last fall, and the result of that and previous calls upon him. He referred also to the President's interest and attention to the matter, evidenced by his asking for a short summary of the facts and the laws which were subsequently furnished him in a sort of brief The Secretary's report also touched upon the hearing at Washington, the manner in which the topic was presented, and the attention of the Serator and the representatives of the press, and called attention to the fact that the opposition to the Hawley bill by the typographers, who were represented by Mr. Welch, who claimed to speak for 25,000 associated typographers, was clearly of the sort which would listen to argument, reson and common-sense, as was shown by Mr. Welch atement to the Secretary, that a fair Copyright II which provided for manufacture in this untry would receive the support of his people.

After this the report of the Treasurer, Joseph. Gilder, was read and referred to an auditing

After some discussion relating mainly to the nestion of ways and means, plans were then iscussed for the extension and strengthening of the League, and the Executive Committee were, n motion of R. U. Johnson, instructed to strive a secure a full discussion of the subject in the oming Congress.

On motion of Mr. Bigelow the Chairman appointed a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Bigelow, Matthews, and Boyeson to report nominations for the Council for the ensuing year. The committee retired and reported the following list:

Hon. John Bigelow, Professor H. H. Boyesen,
Robert Collyer, D.D., Howard Crosby D.D., R. W. Gilder, Lawrence Hutton, Brander Matthews, Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, D.D., Arthur G.
Sedgwick, Edmund Clarence Stedman, Charles
Dudley Warner, S. L. Clemens, Poultney Bigelow, R. U. Johnson, E. P. Roe, Charles Barnard, Titus M. Coan, Colonel Thomas W. Knox, Hamilton W. Mabie, Professor E. Munroe Smith, Joseph
B. Gilder, Bayard Tuckerman, Professor E. L.
Youmans, Morgan Dix, D.D., Henry M. Alden,
W. H. Bishop, H. C. Bunner, Bronson Howard,
George W. Folsom, George Walton Green.

On the announcement of the report, Professor Boyesen moved that the Secretary be requested to cast a ballot for the meeting. No objection being raised, the motion was declared carried and the Secretary cast a ballot, and declared the ticket elected as given.

On motion of Dr. Crosby, the meeting adjourned at 5 o'clock.

COPYRIGHT AND ON THE TARIFF ON WORKS OF ART.

(From President Cleveland's Message, Dec. 6, 1886.)

THE drift of sentiment in civilized communities toward full recognition of the rights of property in the creations of the human intellect has brought about the adoption, by many important nations, of an International Copyright Convention, which was signed at Berne on the 18th of

September, 1885.
Inasmuch as the Constitution gives to Congress the power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries," this Government did not feel warranted in becoming a signatory pending the action of Congress upon measures of international copyright now before it, but the right of adhesion to the Berne Convention hereafter has been reserved. I trust the subject will receive at your hands the attention it deserves, and that the just claims of authors, so urgently pressed, will be duly heeded.

Representations continue to be made to me of the injurious effect upon American artists studying abroad and having free access to the art collections of foreign countries, of maintaining a discriminating duty against the introduction of the works of their brother artists of other countries; and I am induced to repeat my recommendation for the abolition of that tax.

AN EXPERIMENT IN CO-OPERATION.

LAST August we had occasion to refer to the successful effort in co-operation, or rather profitsharing, made by Messrs. George W. Crane & Co., the extensive publishing and printing firm of Topeka, Kansas. At the same time we printed their "Circular to Employés—No. 2," full of suggestions and good example. Mr. Crane permits us to publish a third circular issued by his firm, as a result of the condition of the business developed by the balance-sheet of October 1.

CIRCULAR TO EMPLOYÉS-NO. 3.

TOPEKA, KANSAS, October 5, 1886.
Since the issue of Circular No. 2, on the 5th day of April, you have probably been waiting to hear from the October statement with a considerable degree of interest, to learn the result of the nine-hour experiment.

The inventory and comparative statement just completed shows a prosperity to the business nearly equal to the last six months under the tenhour system. The profits for the past six months, as in the previous term, have come largely from the sale of publications and articles that have not passed through the mechanical departments, but I am disposed to allow the profits of the whole business to count the same as though made entirely by the mechanical departments.

The first thought was to grant a half holiday on Saturday afternoons, but as that would make two holidays in succession, it would seem more desirable to avoid the dreary drudgery of hunting this office on dark, cold winter mornings before it is time for chickens to leave their roosts; so, from next Monday, until the first of April, our hours will be from eight to twelve in the morning, and from one to half-past five in the afternoon, thus reducing the time equivalent to throwing off the Saturday afternoons. On Saturdays, quitting time will be half-past four, unless a rush of business makes it necessary to ask that hour of you without extra pay. That is the rule now; but I believe it has never been asked of you. At other times the same rule as now observed will govern when overtime is necessary.

The office hands and Superintendents (who, by the way, have the hardest work and most responsibilities) will observe the same hours for business as heretofore.

I desire to acknowledge to you that the hearty response you have made to the experiment of ten hours' pay for nine hours' work has been encouraging. All who have had many years of experience in work know that any one can do ten hours' work in nine hours or less, by trying; the only experiment about it is, can it and will it be kept up? As a rule, we do not have enough recreation. If short hours will keep the mind bright and cheerful and the body healthy, the quick, active motions and steady application resulting therefrom are liable to become habitual, and this will be the secret of the success of the experiment.

I think I have noticed a decided change in this matter of quick movements; and also less waste of stock; fewer spoiled jobs; less paper trampled under foot that could be utilized for something; gas turned off more promptly when not needed; less resting of weight on the elbows; and all hands promply at work at first sound of the whistle.

Let each one try to continue the improvement and it will become habitual, cause pleasure, and be a source of satisfaction and profit through life. Any one, from Superintendents to Apprentices, is invited to make suggestions or complaints, at any time, either personally or by letter, and they will have cheerful and proper attention.

GEO. W. CRANE.

A CYCLOPÆDIA OF AMERICAN BIOGRAPHY.

D. APPLETON & Co. will begin the publication this month of an important "Cyclopædia of American Biography," edited by James Grant Wilson and John Fiske. The work will include the names of above 15,000 native and adopted citizens of the United States, including living persons, since the earliest settlement of the country; also the names of several thousand eminent persons of Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Chili, Peru, and all the other countries of North and The great aim has been to in-South America. clude all noteworthy persons of the New World, and to give biographies which shall embody with sufficient fulness the latest result of historical research. It will include biographies of all the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the United States, as well as the many candidates for those offices; of every member of all the Cabinets, every United States Senator, every Speaker of the House of Representatives, and every member of the Supreme Court since the formation of the Government; all the Signers of the Declaration of Independence; the most prominent Governors of States and Territories; all the most eminent clergy, judges, and lawyers of the land; all the Admirals and other distinguished officers of the American Navy, and all the Generals of the Army. No name eminent in literature, art, music, science, or invention will be omitted. The work (which is to be sold by subscript on) will be completed in six volumes, of 700 or 800 pages each, similar to "Appletons' American Cyclopædia." Each will be illustrated with at least ten steel portraits; and these will be supplemented by between one and two thousand smaller vignette portraits made by a new process from original drawings by Jacques Reich, accompanied by facsimile autographs, and also several hundred views of the birthplaces, residences, monuments, and tombs of distinguished Americans.

OBITUARY.

JOSEPH W. HARPER.

MR. JOSEPH W. HARPER, the American consul at Munich, Bavaria, died in that city on the morning of the 8th inst., after a long illness, of Bright's disease of the kidneys, at the age of 60. The deceased was the eldest son of Fletcher Harper, the youngest of the four original members of the Franklin Square publishing house. He was born in this city in 1826, and graduated in the class of '45 at Columbia College. He then went abroad for study aud travel. In London he met and married his first wife, Miss Ellen Urling Smith, with whom he returned to this country, and took a position with the firm of Harper & Bros. This he held for several years, but never became a partner, his ill-health preventing much steady work. Mr. Harper had spent most of the last ten years abroad. It was while travelling on the Continent that President Hayes made him consul at Munich, to which office he was reappinted by every succeeding President.

Mr. Harper was twice married, and his second wife was with him in Munich when he die! E-his first wife he had seven children—three whom are still living. They are Mr. Josephenry Harper, junior partner in the firm Harper & Brothers; William D. Harper, member of the firm of J. H. Bonnell & Co., in dealers, on Nassau Street, and Mrs. Theodore Haighthe body will be brought home for interment.

BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROV-IDENT ASSOCIATION.

At the last regular monthly meeting of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, the following were elected to membership Andrew A. De Lang, Glen Ridge, N. J.; Thomas L. Dancer, Bloomfield, N. J.; Frances Burderz, Bloomfield, N. J.; Wm. J. Donovan, 6 Rutgers St., N. Y. City; Martin S. Cohen, 475 E. 1152; St., N. Y. City; C. F. F. Begar, 230 E. 75th St. N. Y. City; Isaac Reger, 252 Bridge St., Broxlyn, N. Y.; Granville Yeaton, Jamaica, L. I.; George C. Boorum, 28 Reade St., N. Y.; Edward H. Lapham, South Evanston, Ill.; John G. Belder, 321 First Ave, N. Y. City; Frederick W. Crocker, 265 Broadway, N. Y.; Robt. Dinwiddir. Jr., 232 W. 126th St., N. Y.; Stephen R. Johnson, 11 St. Mark's Place, N. Y.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

A NEW novel by George Ebers, entitled "Dr Nilbraut," is announced for immediate publication.

MR. F. H. Cushing is reported to be engaged upon a grammar and dictionary of the Zufii language, with the help of three Pueblo Indians of the Zufii tribe.

THE author of "Margaret Kent" has written a new novel, which is now in the press of Ticknor & Co. It is entitled "Sons and Daughters" and is said to surpass "Margaret Kent."

THE life of Oliver P. Morton, edited by his son is to be issued next year. Generals Wallace and Carrington, and Senators Ingalls, Allison, McMulan, and Hoar have engaged to contribute to the work.

MICHAEL DE MUNKACSY is a poet as well as a painter. A volume of his poems has recently been published in Buda-Pesth by the National Society for the Maintenance of the Magyar Language.

A BIOGRAPHY of Edmund Randolph, Attorney-General, and afterwards Secretary of State under Washington, will be written by Mr. Moncure D. Conway, in whose hands the descendants of that statesman and others have placed a large number of unpublished documents and letters, covering the years from 1782 to 1813, when Randolph died.

MRS. F. B. PLIMPTON, of Cincinnati, will publish at once a volume of poems by her husband, the late Florus B. Plimpton for a quarter of a century connected with the Cincinnati Daily Commercial as dramatic and musical critic, with an introduction by M. Halstead, of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette. The book is illustrated, sumptuously printed, and neatly bound in cloth. (Price. $2.)

Miss Jean Ingelow has been plunged into deep affliction by the sudden death of her beloved brother, William Frederick Ingelow, with whom she has resided for many years in London. Writing to a friend, "she hopes her many correspondents in all of the States will not feeling hurt by her apparent neglect in answering letters received from them."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE proprietors of the Brooklyn Magazine at that their periodical has outgrown its local sme, and beginning with the January number ey will give it the title of the American Maga-ne.

A STATISTIC fiend has calculated that the curnt edition of a quarter of a million Century lagasines would fill six freight cars, piled up ould be fifty-five times as high as the Statue of iberty (not counting the electric light), placed do to end would reach thirty-nine miles, and the parate sheets so placed would reach from New ork to a point in the middle of Missouri.

THE January number of Lippincott's Magazine ill be a gala number, with such names as Julian lawthorne, Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, Walt Inhtman, Edgar Fawcett, Austin Dobson, and idney Luska among its contributors. Julian lawthorne contributes the complete novel, "Sinre," which is said to be as strange and weird as is "Archibald Malmaison." Miss Cleveland has long satirical poem on the Woman Question, ntitled "The Dilemma of the Nineteenth Cenary." Walt Whitman talks about himself and is poetical theories under the title of "My Book and I." Edgar Fawcett takes the opportunity to it back at his critics in a truculent article, entitled Should Critics be Gentlemen?" Austin Dobon has a poem. Sidney Luska contributes "The itery of Angela," a touching and beautiful tale of New York life.

PERSONAL NOTES.

On the 2d inst., Mr. Henry Holt was married o Miss Florence Taber, eldest daughter of Mr. has. C. Taber, of New York City. We add our congratulations and best wishes to those of the whole trade.

MR. E. C. SWAYNE, of the firm of E. P. Dutton & Co., sailed on the North German Lloyd teamer Fulda, Wednesday, December 8th, to ze gone about four months on business for his irm. This is Mr. Swayne's tenth annual trip.

Mr. John S. Lockwood, senior member of the late firm of Lockwood, Brooks & Co., book-ellers and publishers, Boston, has returned from the West, and continues his office at the Equitable Building of Boston, as an agent and buyer of books on a commission basis, both in home and oreign markets. He makes a specialty of promoting the formation of private, special, or public libraries. He has prepared manuscript lists of books of a standard character in all departments of literature, from which selections can be made covering any desired expenditure.

MR. WILLIAM GRAHAM, who from his boyhood has been employed in the Periodical Department of the Methodist Book Concern, and who for many years has managed that department with rare ability and tact, has severed his relations with Phillips & Hunt. In partnership with Mr. C. W. Slauson he is about to establish the Morningside Publishing Co., of Chicago. Before his departure a number of his friends in the Book Concern presented to him a beautiful gold watch and chain as a token of love. By request of Mr. Phillips and others, Bishop Harris made the presentation speech. Mr. Graham carries with him the esteem and friendship of all who did business with him, whether as employés, associates, or customers.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE President of the Blackstone Pub. Co., Philadelphia, is Mr. Rees Welsh. We mention this because no one would get that idea in reading our notice of that fact in our last issue.

MACMILLAN & Co. will have ready soon Mr. Freeman's second course of lectures at Oxford, which discuss the chief periods of European history as grouped around the Roman power as a central point.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA PUB. Co., 730 Broadway, N. Y., are to publish the cheap edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" announced by us a short time ago. The price has been fixed at $2.50 for the cloth volumes. Publication will be begun in February next, and will be continued at the rate of two volumes per month. It will be sold exclusively by subscription.

T. B. Peterson & Bros. announce as nearly ready "Christine, the Model; or, studies of love, being the struggles of Nana's artist brother, Claude Lantier, in a new school of art, wherein Bohemianism and artist life in Paris among the beautiful models in the studios are graphically described and vividly and truthfully depicted," by Émile Zola.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. have in preparation "Veronica and Other Friends," from the German of Madame Johanna Spyri, by Louise Brooks; "The Sunday Law," by Judge Putnam, of Uxbridge, Mass. They also expect to issue shortly "Rambles About Boston," by Rev. E. G. Porter, which has been in preparation for some time. It will be illustrated by George R. Tolman.

It is reported that The Century Company protest that Charles Scribner's Sons are infringing on their rights in taking a name for Scribner's Magazine so like the former name of The Century. The Century Co. claim that they always had a perfect right to the title Scribner's Monthly. No legal steps have as yet been taken, and it is to be hoped that the matter can be satisfactorily settled without resorting to such measures.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & Co., in a letter to Science for November 12, report that, as publishers of geographies and atlases, they felt it incumbent on them to settle the question of the ultimate source of the Mississippi. They accordingly despatched an expedition to Lake Itasca, which has made a thorough exploration of that body of water and Elk Lake, with their tributaries, noting drainage, areas, and elevations. The publishers in question are already convinced that they have exploded the baseless figment of a "Lake Glazier."

CHARLES H. KERR & Co., Chicago, will issue this month a volume of eight sermons on "Burden-Bearing and Burden-Sharing," four of them by Jenkin Lloyd Jones and four by William C. Gannett. They will publish shortly a literary curiosity for students of Shakespeare in "The Legend of Hamlet," prepared from original researches among old manuscripts, by the late George P. Hansen, formerly consul to Elsinore. Mr. Hansen's researches show that the original of Shakepeare's character was somewhat of an untamed savage, who lost very little time in deliberating on questions of philosophy.

TICKNOR & Co. have just ready, "The Minister's Charge," by W. D. Howells, a story of rare and singular beauty, full of kindliness and tenderness; "Liber Amoris, being the book of love of Brother Aurelius," by Henry Bernard Carpenter, a romance of rhythm of the period of the Minnesingers, with scenes laid at Padua, and in the Rhineland and Auvergne; also "Goethe's Faust: a commentary," by Denton J. Snider, a learned and valuable treatise giving its history, critical standard, and outline, and careful analyses and explanations of all the scenes and situations, as seen from a philosophical point of view.

HILDESHEIMER & FAULKNER, 41 Jewin St., London, have again issued a series of Christmas and New Year's cards which for artistic beauty and delicacy of finish cannot be surpassed. The cards used are remarkably flexible, having an ivory-like surface, and gilt bevelled edges. The designs are the work of many different artists, among whom are Sigmund, Barraud, Drummond, Hines, Fraser, Wilson, Dealy, Maguire, Edwards, Tiddeman, Skipworth, Faulkner, Simmons, Havers, and others, and are chiefly landscapes, ideal and real, among the latter being Lynmouth, Clovelly and views on the Thames and Wye. There are also several charming children's figures and faces. Their New York agency is at 292 Broadwav.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY Co.'s publications for the coming season include the third volume of Mr. Joseph's Gillow's "Literary and Biographical History of the English Catholics from the Breach with Rome in 1534 to the Present Time;" "Dante's Divine Comedy: its scope and value," from the German of Francis Hettinger, D.D., edited by H. S. Bowden, of the Oratory; "Souls Departed," being a treatise on Purgatory and prayers for the dead, by Cardinal Allen, edited by the Rev. T. E. Bridgett; "The Life of Father Champagnat, Founder of the Order of the Marist Brothers;" "Notes in Remembrance of Augustus Law, S.J.;" "A Young Philistine, and Other Tales," by Miss Alice Corkran; "The Life of Père Muard," translated by Edward Healy Thompson, M.A.; a new and revised edition of "The History of the Scottish Reformation," by A. Wilmot, F.R.G.S.; "Texts for Children," compiled by Miss Ward; "St. Alphonsus on the Psalms," by the Rev. Thomas Livius, C.SS.R.; and a translation of Frassinetti's "Treatise on Prayer," by the Rev. Dr. Hutch.

THE PRANG EDUCATIONAL COMPANY have in preparation a little work on "The Use of Models in Primary Schools," said to be based upon a careful psychological study of the manner in which the mind is developed through the senses. It will furnish suggestive exercises as to the use which may be made of models in the school-room. These exercises will aim to develop in the minds of children complete mental images of the type forms with details of surface, contour, face, edge, corner; to give them ideas of location, position, direction, size, proportion, distance, and appearance; and to lead them to see, to enjoy, and to produce beauty of form and of arrangement. These ends are to be reached by direct exercises with the models and objects based on them, accompanied by practice in moulding in clay, cutting, folding, and drawing, as well as by the free use of language. This book is designed to accompany the "Prang Primary Models," and will cover the use of twelve models: sphere, cube, cylinder, hemisphere, square and triangular prisms, ellipsoid, ovoid, cone, pyramid, and vase form, and will be fully illustrated.

A UNIQUE CHRISTMAS BOOK.

HE THREE KINGS. A Christmas Legend of Long Ago. By MARY LELAND McLANATHAN. With four full-page illustrations from Pen-and-ink Drawings by Rosina Emmet. Small 8vo, exquisitely printed, with ornamental title-page, bound in antique paper, novel style, $2.00; in parchment, $3.00; in cloth of gold, $3.00.

"This legend of the days of King Arthur tells, ostensibly from monastic records, the story 'of how the message' the Christ child found at Christmastide three men of gentle will, and how each is won to try, in his own way, to tpress in good deeds the newly aroused enthusiasm of his heart."

Small Editions of Attractive Christmas Books, Printed by the University Press, on Hand-made Paper.

CENTURIES AGO. THE HAPPY CHRISTMAS-TIME. THE SONG OF THE ANGELS. THE HOLY NIGHT.

Four Distinct Compilations of Christmas Poems. 4to. Each with three photographic illustrations from the great masters. Put up in etching paper. Each, $1.25.
"The selections have been made with taste and judgment, and the dainty make-up of the books is artistic and charming.

THE CELESTIAL COUNTRY. rhythm of Bernard of Cluny. Translated by JOHN MASON NEALE, D.D., with four photographic illustrations from original designs. Put up in Whatman paper, tied with silk cord, $1.50; or in full cloth, $2.00. "An exquisite edition of this wonderful hymn."

CHRISTMASTIDE in Song and Story. A compilation in Prose and Verse, in two parts: I. Pars Sacra; II. Pars Secular. 16mo, bound in half vellum, $1.50; or in Japanese cloth, of a unique design, $1.50.

"The best Christmas literature is represented in this volume. Many old favorites in verse and prose, as well as other selections less familiar but equally beautiful, will be found in it." be found in it."

THE LADY OF LA GARAYE. A Pcem by the Hon. Mrs. Norron. With engraved portrait and illustrated title-page. 16mo, bound in half vellum, $1.50; or in vellum paper, $1.50.

"An exceedingly dainty edition of a poem little known to the younger generation of readers, but which may, nevertheless, be commended to all, not only for its artistic beauty, but for the story of the beautiful life which it contains."

A New Edition of the Immortal Classic Work.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS. With 100 illustrations by Fred. Barnard and others; engraved by the Dalziel Brothers. One volume, 4to, beautifully bound in cloth, gilt edges, $4.00.

"In this edition of Bunyan's immortal work," says the London Times, "the figures stand out distinct. One can see Mr. Worldly Wiseman, Ignorance, Pliable, and the lonely pilgrims toiling along the narrow way in the flesh. It is this feature of the book that Mr. Fred. Barnard has seized on, and with so much success, in the present edition. His strong point is his character-sketching, and he has never been more fortunate in his methods or more happy in his expression."

The London Telegraph says that "this is an edition of the great Puritan Allegory which every lover of tasteful took-making should place upon his drawing-room table."

NOTES IN SEASON.

THOMAS R. KNOX & Co. publish to-day "The Matrimonial Agent of Potsdam," a humorosocial romance, by A. von Winterfeld, translated by "El Rapha" (Dr. H. Raphael), the translator of "Enthralled and Released."

LITLLE, BROWN & Co. have just ready, "A Nomenclature of Colors for Naturalists, and Compendium of Useful Knowledge for Ornithologists," by Robert Ridgway. The work is embellished with ten colored plates and seven plates of outlines.

ROBERTS BROS. have just published "Carving and Serving," by Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, author of "The Boston Cook-Book," a handy little manual, giving just the information needed in a clear and practical way. It is bound in illuminated board covers.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in press an historical monograph entitled "The Fall of Maximilian's Empire as Seen from a United States Gun-boat." The work will be by Lieutenant Seaton Schroeder, and is believed by the publishers to be the only American account of the great Mexican campaign.

GINN & Co. have in press Cebes' "Tablet," edited with introduction, notes, vocabulary, and grammatical questions, by Richard Parsons, Professor of Greek, Ohio Wesleyan University. This little volume has arisen from a belief that Cebes' "Tablet" deserves a higher recognition than it has received from educators. In confirmation of this claim, editions edited from more modern data and research have recently appeared in Germany and England. In its preparation the works of Schweighaltser, Simpson, Drosihn, Büchling, and Jerram have been consulted, besides some minor editions prepared for school and gymnasium use.

JOHN WILEY & SONS have now ready Prof. . Howard Gore's "Elements of Geodesy." In this work every instrument described has been used by the author. The adjustments are those that have been found the most satisfactory, and all improvements in observing, building signals and reducing observations, the author claims, have sustained a practical test before adoption. The formulas have been carefully developed, step by step, and the results given in two shapes -one for accurate computation, and the othe. for approximate determination. A valuable feature of the volume is a complete collection of tables of geodetic factors, all computed upon "Clarke's Spheroid." Also, a compilation of constants, formulas, and auxiliary tables for converting metric measures into those in common use that will make the book welcomed by all computers. The publishers claim this to be the first work on Geodesy issued by an American house.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

IT is stated that Mr. Gladstone is at work on a book dealing with Homeric religion.

It is said that the author of "Madame Tabby's Establishment," a children's book lately published by Macmillan & Co., is a daughter of Mr. Thomas Hughes, of "Tom Brown" fame.

In the course of some literary explorings connected with the life of Charles Brockden Brown, which he is preparing, Mr. E. I. Stevenson has discovered the complete MS. journal of Dr. Elihu H. Smith, of New York, one of the most brilliant of our post-Revolutionary men of letters, who died during the yellow fever epidemic at the close of the last century. These journals are said to constitute a history of the literary life of the day, and are full of references to the notable men of the date. Mr. Stevenson hopes to ultimately edit this discovery.

Tennyson's new book of poems, "Locksley Hall Sixty Years After," was published abroad on the 14th inst. It contains the three-act play, "The Promise of May," produced in London some years ago. The greatest interest in the volume centres in "Locksley Hall," in which the poet reviews the life of mankind during the past 60 years, and comes to the conclusion that its boasted progress is of doubtful credit to the world in general and to England in particular. A cynical vein of denunciation of democratic opinions and aspirations is said to run throughout the poem. in marked contrast with the spirit of the "Locksley Hall" of the poet's youth.

the year with the poets.) cl., 75 c. With the present volume this admirable series is brought to a close. Like the issues which have preceded it, a feature of the present volume consists of the contributed original poems. Mr. Samuel Longfellow is represented by a sonnet on "Indian summer," and Frank D. Sherman by a charming poem with the same title. The other poems are "Summer's visit to autumn," by William Morton Fullerton, and its antiphon, Andrew Bice Saxton's "Winter to autumn;" "A November grave," by James Benjamin Kenyon; "In November," by Biss Carman; and Ernest Whitney's gracefully turned lines upon "The Midnight of the year."

The time of the poem is, generally speaking, the four-eenth century. But the work is not intended to be his-oric, except by accident. Its object is the glorification of love. There are parts of the poem designedly of a somewhat philosophic or gnomic character. The transition from a pure but lower love into a still purer and higher love is a simed at in the main character, who is a lover, a roset and additionally who is placed in sharp contrast to one er love is aimed at in the main character, who is a lover, a poet, an Idealist; who is placed in sharp contrast to one who is materialistic by nature and by choice. His name is Brother Aurelius, who for many years has been the about of a monastery in one of the wild, mountainous regions of Auvergne. He is the inheritor of a volume entitled "The book of love," which he received as a last bequest from a young Provençal knight, Sir Dorian, of Chateau d'Or. He it was 'says Aurelius' "who died that I might live who brought me to these walls, who left me Chateau G Or. He it was 'says Aureius') "who died that I might live, who brought me to these walls, who left me the book and the story of his life." Seated before the midnight fire, in company with Basil, a brother monk, Aurelius depicts the character and career of the young dreamer.

Time, about eighty years ago. Scene, the southwestern coast of England. A farm known as Zion Farm is supposed to be situated on the ruins of an old city, built by the Phœnicians, and covered centuries ago by shifting sand. The hero, of wild, wandering tastes, neglects his mother and cousin and leaves his affairs in the hands of his uncle, the banker of the place, who ruins him and disappears, having been found out to be a wrecker and a smuggler. The hero is wrecked one night, and while struggling in the water discovers buried treasures under the cliffs near his home. A string of "golden bells" is among them. All ends well. In some parts the story is very exciting. very exciting.

Mr. Plimpton, who died in April of this year, was for over 20 years connected with the Cincinnati Daily Commercial as one of its literary editors. In this volume, carefully edited by his wife, are the poems of his youth and the compositions of his mature years, gathered from the columns of various periodicals and magazines. A number of graceful tributes to his worth as a man and as a writer from his associates precede the poems. In one of these Murat Halstead says: "There was something in the poetry of Plimpton that was rare and precious." Another fellow-worker adds this tribute: "His poetry is graceful and gentle, the reflex of happy moods, or of tender seriousness. It is characterized by an intense love of natural scenery, especially far-reaching pastoral or forest loveliness. His lines are very musical and owe their melody to an inborn sense of rhythm." The work is ignued in very handsome style, with all the attractions of fine paper, wide margins, and graceful initial letters and head and tail pieces. Also contains a number of full-page pictures, made especially for the work, by well-known artists.

Gen. Walker served through the war with the famous Second Army Corps, and writes, therefore, from personal Gen. Walker served through the war with the famous Second Army Corps, and writes, therefore, from personal knowledge; but, aside from this qualification, he was to an unusual degree fitted for the task of preparing this historical and personal account of the corps by his gift for vivid and powerful writing. In the first pages of the volume he says: "At the request of my surviving comrades I write this history of the Second Army Corps—the one of the five original corps organized by President Lincoln, in March, 1802, which maintained its existence unbroken until the conclusion of peace, in May, 1865, and whose history is thus, in an unparalleled degree, the history of the war in the East; that corps which, in fair fight with Lee's great army, had captured forty-four Confederate flags ere first it lost a color of its own; that corps which, under the command of Sumner, Couch, Warren, Hancock, and Humphreys—illustrious roll!—left nearly forty thousand men killed and wounded upon the battle-fields of Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania; that corps among whose generals of division were numbered Sedgwick, Richardson, Howard, French, Barlow, Birney, Miles, Mott, Gibbon, Webb, and Alexander Hays." Excellent full-page portraits of each of the corps commanders in succession are given, and portraits in groups of the brigade commanders. brigade commanders

Relates the adventures of a party of fictitious characters who made the tour of the most noted of American watering-places, describing also the scenery, hotels, and environs of the latter. The places visited were Fortress Monroe, Cape May, the Catskills, Newport, Narragansett Pier, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Isles of Shoals, Bar Harbor, White Sulphur Springs, Long Branch, Saratoga, Lake George, Richfield Springs, Niagara, the Thousand Isles, and White Mountains. Mr. Warner writes with his usual humor, Mr. Reinhart interpreting his text in a number of characteristic and clever little sketches. The book is printed on tinted paper, uncut edges, top gilt.

The writer enlisted in 1863, and served until June 25, 1864, as a volunteer; then entered the regular army. He thinks the reports of the war thus far written are inaccurate and fargely biased by jealousy, etc.; and that, being generally written by officers, they do not give a correct idea of the private soldier's duties and sufferings. He praises the work of Gen. Grant, but is very critical about most of the books thus far written, and feels that he has a duty and mission to correct false impressions. He is bitter. duty and mission to correct false impressions. He is bitter against those in authority, whom he calls "commanders, not soldiers."

Pub., [1886.] 2-334 p. map. D. cl., $1.25.
The story opens in a little obscure fishing hamlet—Kill Eda. There has been a wreck, and the brave fishermen go out to the dismantled hull, where one of them finds a baby tied to the rigging. In the little hamlet every house is so crowded that the waif at first seems likely to find no home; but a place is made at last for him by a good couple. On the breaking up of his home by death the lad sets out or Glasgow to find Mr. Murdock, a scientific gentleman, whom he had served one summer, helping him in his geological researches. The story of the long journey is full of pathetic interest. In London, to which city he finally drifts, he is strangely reunited to his mother and sister.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

F. A. BROCKHAUS, Leipzig, has issued the third part of the Catalogue of Richard Lepsius' Library, comprising Orientalia. To this is added the library of Dr. Jul. Theodor Zenker, of Thum.

THE MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY have issued a catalogue, which, in all its particulars of engraving, printing, letterpress, color printing, etc., is a high work of art, and the cost of making which, it is said, was $75,000.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have ready a "Holiday catalogue of recent importations suitable for presentations, comprising the latest English art publications, éditions de luxe, standard editions of English authors (classic and modern), in elegant bindings, books adorned with engravings, and many historical and biographical works enriched with extra illustrations," etc.

S. ZICKEL, 19 Dey Street, New York, has issued a handsome catalogue of books, etc., which he will have in stock during the holiday season. The catalogue is an edition of the one prepared by F. Volkmar, of Leipzig. It is handsomely illustrated, the advertising pages are set with taste, and the whole book is neatly printed and bound. (216 p. O. pap.)

holme's "Domestic Cyclopedia of Practical Information." It contains three pages of poetical and prose quotations, and is neatly printed in black and red. This firm is also sending out for the use of their patrons a neat card on the front of which is printed in red "With compliments and best wishes of ——," and on the reverse of which is printed an appropriate quotation.

THE Catalogue of the "Harris Collection of American Poetry" is now ready, and copies can be procured of the compiler, Dr. J. C. Stockbridge, Providence, R. I. The volume contains, in addition to the catalogue, biographies of Albert G. Greene, who commenced the collection, Caleb Fiske Harris, who continued it, and of Hon. Henry B. Anthony, who bequeathed the collection to the Brown University. Biographical and bibliographical notes have been freely added to the titles, which are given quite fully. The edition is limited, and nearly one-half of the copies have already been taken. The price of the octavo edition is $5, and of the quarto edition $10, in paper covers.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ASSOCIATION.

THE Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, an institution which has steadily grown in favor since its organization in 1879, because it realizes a very general desire for a single instrumentality broad enough to serve as a common channel of benevolence for every form and shade of religious or social opinion, is about to approach the public for another annual contribution. Last year the total receipts from religious and secular sources amounted to $46,085 (or nearly $20,000 more than in 1879, the first year of the existence of the Association). This amount was distributed among twenty-one hospitals, and a few institutions outside of the Association for whom amounts had been bespoken. Towards this fund the various trades contributed $10,719.53, the drygoods trade leading with $4350, the toy trade bringing up in the rear with $9.85. The book trade stands somewhere in the middle with $205, or with about $134 less than it contributed in 1883, and with a falling off of eight contributors.

As the enlargement of the field of work open to the Association lies in the direction of the trades, by the organization of additional auxiliaries, and especially in the screngthening of those already in existence, we trust that the book trade -always in the front rank in humanitarian projects-will this year come up to the quotas contributed in former years, if it does not exceed them. We feel sure that the deficiency resulted from oversight, rather than through any other cause, and it is to give the trade timely notice that we have dwelt a little longer on the subject than we otherwise should have thought necessary.

We are not sure that it is generally understood that the sum contributed through any makes iliary constitutes a "pool," or common in against which any contributor may draw or a half of any sick person recommended by him h hospital treatment, at an average of about a day. It is a right, not a favor, that sta accorded. The effect of this is that it opens 1 w for employers to create in the easiest possis manner a permanent hospital fund for the best of their employees, and the union of sentimes and business is thus effected upon what appear to us a perfectly reciprocal, and, therefore is ural basis.

Mr. F. F. Cook, in charge of the general agent at 79 Fourth Avenue, New York, or Mr. E. & Barnes, of A. S. Barnes & Co., are ready a receive contributions from the trade.

Though this is at present, we believe, can sively a New York enterprise, we give this o tended space to the subject, hoping that it may a time become a National institution, and that is trade throughout the Union may take the may in hand, and co-operate with others in former similar Associations in every large city. Went the liberty the more readily because we have in evidence that parties outside of New York # both willing and anxious to co-operate in such: movement.

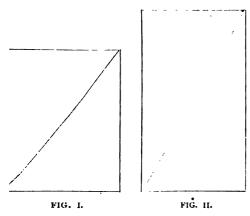

TRUE THEORY OF THE PAGE-FORM

From the American Bookmaker.

Were any one asked to describe in exact term the shape of an ordinary page-form he would size ply reply that it was a right-angled parallelogras. that is, a quadrilateral figure which is longer than it is broad and with right angles, having our a its lesser sides for a base, that is, in usual parlant, standing upon its end. It was quite natural that in the very earliest days of printing from morals type the forms should have assumed a parallely grammatic shape, for the first printers were a tremely desirous that their printed pages show bear a close resemblance to the Ms. books of ther day. In their turn the transcribers, when the had abandoned the use of the volumen, or contruous roll, for quadrate pages superimposed uper one another, very naturally gave to their writer pages about the same width as formerly, and the a liber quadratus, or square book, was simply 1 series of sections cut from the volumen. There eve guided them in determining how long those sections should be, and thus are we enabled to trace the evolution of the commonly printed page, is outline of which gives the shape of the right angled parallelogram standing upon end.

But take, however, fifty books, 8vos, 120018 and 16mos, and make a critical examination of their page-forms, and it will be found that while they all adhere more or less closely to the proportions of the parallelogram, still there seems to be no fixed rule to be followed for the purpose of arriving at geometrical exactitude of relations between the greater and less dimensions of the parallelogram. Let us at this point define a rightangled parallelogram. A right-angled panllelogram is a quadrilateral figure, which is larger than it is broad, with right angles, and its day oisects it into two right-angled triangles. The geometrical figures represented below are angular parallelograms with diagonal bisec-

A glance at these two figures is sufficient to deect the lack of proportion in Figure 1. and the orrect dimensions in Fig. 11., and yet Fig. 1. epresents proportions very frequently occurring n page-forms. Upon applying the dividers to .he two figures it will be found that their less sides are equal, but in Fig. 11., in which correct proportions are present, the measurement will demonstrate that the diagonal is exactly equal to the sum of the top and base, and herein lies the secret of determining correct proportions for page-forms. Naturally, in eccentric departures from the standard dimensions, there is nothing to control the bookmaker. The proportions of the page become a matter of fantasy entirely. He may choose the exact square or he may depart slightly from it, or he may so exaggerate the parallelogrammatic form as to give a book that measures seven and a half inches in height and only four and a quarter inches in width; or he may take the longer line of the parallelogram for its base, as is often done in religious song-books, albums, etc.; but if he desires to give his form the true proportions of a rectangular parallelogram he will follow the rule as exemplified in Fig. 11. It should be borne in mind that in testing the proportions of a printed page the upper line of the parallelogram should rest upon the running head; or if the page have no running head and be numbered on the lower margin, then the base of the parallelogram should accurately inclose the page number.

BOOKS FOR PRISONS.

THE PRISON ASSOCIATION of New York has undertaken to put a library of not less than one hundred volumes in every one of the sixty-six county jails in the State. Eighteen hundred prisoners are confined in these jails and kept in enforced idleness, depending for reading-matter on their friends, who furnish it often of a most sensational and pernicious character. To take the place of this trash, good books are needed. Those wishing to contribute may send money or books to the office of the Corresponding Secretary, 65 Bible House; or, if preferred, the donations will be sent for if the Secretary is notified. The books will be carefully handled and will be under the supervision of the local committees of the Association.

POSTAL MATTERS.

LENGTH OF ROLLS OF "PRINTED MATTER" IN POSTAL UNION MAILS.

NICHOLAS M. BELL, Superintendent of Foreign Mails, has issued the following circular:

"The International Bureau at Berne, Switzer-land, has advised this Department that the conditions applicable to packets of 'printed matter' in mails for countries of the Universal Postal Union (as announced in paragraph 7, page 20, of the Postal Guide for July last) have been modified so as to admit to said mails printed matter in rolls, which, although exceeding 18 inches in length, could be contained within a cube of 18 inches.

"Postmasters will, therefore, receive for mailing rolls of printed matter addressed to any country of the Postal Union (except Canada) that could be inserted in a box measuring 18 inches on each side, even though said rolls measure more than 18 inches in length.

"The length of such rolls will depend to a certain extent upon their thickness, but in no case can it exceed 27 inches."

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, so widely announced, and expected with so much interest, has appeared. The outside of the periodical is buff, with large lettering, encircled by a delicate design in black. The Roman lamp, which has already become familiar as a Scribner trade-mark, is here placed in the middle of the cover, surrounded by a wreath of laurel. The table of contents offers a great variety. The number opens with the first of a series of papers by the Hon. E. B. Washburne, entitled " Reminiscences of the Siege and Commune of Paris." "It gives," says the N. Y. Tribune, "afresh and graphic description of the events preceding and attending the dechéance and closes with Gambetta's proclamation of the republic. It is well illustrated by portraits of Gambetta, Jules Favre, Jules Simon, Garnier-Pagès, and others, together with facsimiles of documents, sketches of places, incidents, etc." The first chapters of Mr. Harold Frederic's novel, "Seth's Brother's Wife," deal with farming life in Central New York. H. C. Bunner's novel, "The Story of a New York House," deals with the neighborhood of Chambers Street when it still contained country residences. An interesting paper is devoted to "Glimpses of the Diaries of Gouverneur Morris," and relates to life in Paris at the period of the Revolution. Captain F. V. Greene, of the U. S. Engineers, discusses "Our Defenceless Coasts;" the Rev. William Hayes Ward contributes a learned and well-illustrated article on "The Babylonian Seals;" and Gen. Francis A. Walker has a practical treatise on "Socialism;" "A Violin Obligato" is a pretty novelette by Margaret Crosby; "Sonnets in the Shadow" and "In a Copy of the Lyrical Poems of Robert Herrick" represent the poetical element; and "In Mexico," by Thomas A. Janvier, is a short story of savage subject. As will be seen, the new magazine starts out to be a literary periodical in the best sense of the word, keeping the illustrations, with which nearly every article is adorned, in close association with the text. The emblematic headings of some of the articles may be mentioned as novel and appropriate. As the Tribune states, "the new aspirant for public favor enters the field cool, confident, capable, relying upon the ample resources and full experience of a long-established and prosperous house, and plainly content to be judged by its development."

CHARLES SCRIBNERS SONS NEW YORK-

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

THE CHATTERBOX INJUNCTIONS.

On the 15th inst. Judge Wallace, in the U.S. Circuit Court, granted the following order in the suit of Estes et al. against The Worthington Co. et al. A further hearing of the case is to be had on the 20th inst. The trade should bear in mind that these preliminary orders of various sorts are in the nature of legal skirmishing, and have little bearing upon settled law until final decision is rendered:

Ordered that until the decision of the motion for a preliminary injunction now pending and undecided, so much of the order granted herein exparte on November 30, 1886, as restrains the defendant, The Worthington Company, its attorneys, agents, servants, and officers, from selling or offering for sale books of a juvenile character having the word "Chatterbox" printed upon the cover, and bearing such a resemblance in general design and appearance to the plaintiff's publication as is calculated to mislead the public, be continued until the decision of said motion, but shall be deemed to apply only to the following-named books published by the defendants or either of them, entitled "Baby Chatterbox," "Sunday Chatterbox," "American Chatterbox," "Golden Chatterbox," "Chatterbox Junior," and "Chatterbox Picture-Book," and that said order is not "American Chatterbox," "Golden deemed to apply to the following-named books: "Royal Chatterbox," "Chatterbox Quartette,"
"New Chatterbox Quartette." "Chatterbox
Stories of Natural History," and "Chatterbox Hall.

It is further ordered as a condition of granting such order that the complainants within five days file a bond herein in the penal sum of five thousand dollars ($5000), approved as to form and sufficiency of the surety conditioned to pay any damages which may be adjudged to have been sustained by defendants by reason of granting of said order ex parte, or by the granting of this order, if at final hearing it shall be decided that complainants were not entitled to the restraining order formerly or now granted either in whole or in part, such damages to be ascertained by reference to a master in this cause, whose report, when approved by this court, shall be conclusive as against the complainants and the sureties in said bond.

P.S.—Mr. R. Worthington asks us to state that the above proceedings do not affect him in his individual capacity as the owner and publisher of the "Chatterbox" books, which have never belonged to The Worthington Co., but are personal owned by him, and that no injunction or restriction ing order has been served upon him in the maze except as an officer of the Company. Bookseles will observe that the imprint is that of R. Worthington personally.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE office of The Art Age (Turnure & Gillss) has been removed to 74 W. 23d St., N. Y. Cir,

From the beginning of the new year Blubwood's Magazine is to be permanently enlarged to 144 double-columned pages.

The Standard, "a weekly newspaper for all who work with hand or brain," is the title of a new journal edited and published by Heary George.

THE first half of George W. Cable's two-part story, "Garancro," a story of the Louisian Acadians, will appear in the January Contury, it illustrations by Kemble, who recently visited Louisiana to obtain sketches for the work.

A COURSE of Shakespeare historical reading will be begun in the January number of Shakesperana, with suggestions for reading and study based on "King John," and successively on the remaining plays of Shakspeare bearing on English history.

THE publishers state that the sales of The Contury Magasine have gone up over 30,000 copies in six weeks, since beginning the life of Lincola. A second edition of December will be issued on the 15th. A veteran New York publisher predicts that the permanent edition of the magazine will go beyond 300,000 before the completion of the Lincoln history. The January instalment. the Lincoln history. which is said by the editors to be of most surpass ing interest, occupies thirty pages of the magzine, and treats of Mr. Lincoln's settlement in Springfield; his practice of law in that city; the Harrison campaign; Lincoln's marriage; as friendship with the Speeds of Kentucky; the Shields duel; and the campaign of 1844. illustrations are numerous, including portraits of Joshua Speed and wife, of Mrs. Lucy G. Speed. Milton Hay, President Harrison, General Shields. William H. Herndon (the law partner of Mr. Lincoln), and Mr. Lincoln himself, from the photograph presented by him to Mrs. Lucy G. Speed. in 1861. Pictures are given of the house where Lincoln was married, also the house where he lived after his marriage, etc., etc.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE Huguenot Society of America have put on sale with Thomas Whittaker, Bible House, N. Y., one hundred copies of their "Collections, Vol. I."

THE annual dinner of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travellers will be held at Morelli's on December 29. Look out for a good time.

THE TROW CITY DIRECTORY Co. have just issued a new edition of their "Metropolitan Directory of Selected Names," arranged by streets and suburban towns within a radius of twenty-five miles of New York City, for the year ending November I, 1887—the second volume of the series.

M. & R. Burgheim, Cincinnati, have just published a sumptuously illustrated book entitled "A Trip Around the World," by George Moerlein. The lithographs with which the book is illustrated are reproduced from photographs, and are colored in the tints of the original costumes or scenery. The largest number relate to Japan and are pleasingly realistic.

FIELD & TUER, London, have published an interesting book entitled "One Thousand Quaint Cuts from Books of Other Days." It contains impressions of illustrations from children's story-books, fables, chap-books, etc., pictorial initial letters and curious designs and ornaments from original wood-blocks belonging to the Leadenhall Press.

HARPER & BROTHERS filed suit in the United States Court of Louisville, Ky., on the 14th inst., against the Franklin Square Library Company, a Louisville corporation, asking for $10,000 damages, and that an account of profits be rendered and turned over to them. A perpetual injunction is also issued against the corporation printing the words "Franklin Square Library" on their publications. The Harpers claim an infringement on their trade-mark.

The success of Part I. of the "Buchholz Family" in America has encouraged the publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, to undertake the publication of Part II., which is now in press. Two more volumes are included in the series, "The Buchholzes in Italy," aud "The Buchholz Family in Switzerland." The American publication of these two latter books of the series will depend upon the recognition accorded Part II. It is important in this connection to state that the book recently published under the title "The Buchholz Family in Paris" was not written by Julius Stinde, but proves to be the work of an imitator.

BRYAN, TAYLOR & Co., N. Y., have nearly ready Dr. Thomas Armitage's "History of the Baptists, traced by their principles and practices from the time of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, to the year 1886." In the first part of the work the author points out "the deep and firm foundations of the distinctive faith of the Baptists as they are laid in the New Testament." Historically it covers, with more or less fulness, the rise and progress of the Baptists in the lands of early and mediæval times. Then follows an exposition of the tenets and practices of the Waldensians, the Petrobrusians, Henryists, Mennonites, and of the so-called "Anabaptists." The English, Welsh, Scotch, and Irish Baptists are also fully treated of, with a full recital of their wonderful spread in America. The work has an introduction by Dr. J. L. M. Curry, American Minister to the Court of Spain, and will be illustrated by 175 engravings.

TWO IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS.

R ARCTIC PROVINCE, ALASKA HISTORY OF THE SECOND ARMY AND THE SEAL ISLANDS.

vol., Svo, $4.50.

This is the first comprehensive work on Alaska, which, i ing from a competent and thoroughly informed writer, ts at the same time the requirements of the special stut and the general reader. It is an encyclopædia of fied facts concerning the most interesting because it known part of the United States territory, and it is a k to read continuously-a fascinating succession of rative, description, and adventure. It is profusely iltrated with facsimile reproductions of sketches of ani-I and human life, and with plates representing typical ws of Alaskan scenery. The admirable pictures and : clear, straightforward text afford the material for a tter and fuller understanding of Alaska than can be de-'ed from any other single source." - New York Sun.

HENRY W. ELLIOTT. Profusely illustrated. | By Frances A. Walker, late Superintendent of the Census, Adjutant-General U.S. Volunteers, with many portraits and maps. I vol., 8vo, $4.00.

8vo, $4.00.

General Walker served through the war with the famous Second Army Corps, and writes, therefore, from personal knowledge; but aside from this qualification he is to an unusual degree fitted for the task of preparing this historical and personal account of the Corps by his gift for vivid and powerful writing. The Second Army Corps was one of the five original corps organized by President Lincoln. It remained in service during the entire war, captured forty-four Confederate flags before it had lost a color of its own; numbered among its commanders Sumner, Couch, Warren, Hancock, and Humphries, and among its Generals of Division Sedgwick, Howard, Miles, Webb, Gibbon, French, Barlow, and Birney. The history of the Corps, by virtue of its extraordinary activity and achievements, is really the history of the war in the East; and the exceptional value of Gen. Walker's work is self-evident. evident.

"Mr. Alton was four years a Senatorial page. In this volume, which is the first record of veritable Congressional experiences ever made by a boy for boys, he conducts his readers through the rooms and corridors of the Capitol into the halls of Congress, to witness the memorable scenes which are enacted there.

"He tells everything so cleverly, and with so much vivacity and good humor, that the reader, old or young, who begins the book will be certain to read it through."—

Sets are left of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE of 1876, the last having been sold at $60, over double the original price.

Take warning, and order, before it is too late, the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876–1884, of which the edition is also limited, now priced at $12.50 paper parts, $15 half morocco. It is worth twice its cost each year in any library or book-store.

We have some extra copies of the Subject-volume only of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1876. This contains, classified by subjects, all but the Novels, Poems, etc., and is very useful by itself. Price, $15, half morocco.

We could complete five sets of the 1876 catalogue if we had the first paper part (p. 1-224. A-Edwards). We will pay $10 each for copies of this part, and register orders to be filled if sets are completed, at $60 for the 2 vols., half morocco.

NOTES IN SEASON.

ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS announce "Father Aldus: a water story," by Agnes Giberne, with thirty-two illustrations.

F. WARNE & Co. will add to their series of Notable Novels "Two Old Men's Tales," by Mrs. Marsh, author of "Amelia Wyndham,"

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have in press a volume entitled "The Mystery of God," by Tymms; and "The Life of Jesus Christ the Saviour," by Mrs. Watson.

GINN & Co. will publish next month "A Primer of Botany," by Mrs. A. A. Knight, of Robinson Seminary, Exeter, N. Y. This book is designed to bring botany to the level of primary and intermediate grades. The elementary forms of plant life are especially taught, with an abundance of tests and reviews. Blights, smuts, ferments, and moulds are much used for illustration. Low plants devoid of stems, leaves, and roots are made prominent, partly because they are common and easily obtainable, but chiefly because little people need this sort of training in order to be able properly to rank and value these ill-known orders,

THE TRUTH-SEEKER Co. will publish at once a book for children by Mrs. E. D. Slenker, entitled "Little Lessons for Little Folks." Each chapter is a lesson about something which the children see every day, and about which their curiosity is excited. The chapters are: Stars; Monkeys; Items about Fishes; Fresh Air; Matter and Life; Life and her Children; Books; Clover; Water; Stones; Animals and Vegetables; Little Leaves; The Nerves; On the Sense of Smell; Heredity and Natural Selection; The Camel; The Frog; The Cow; Dolls; Grass. The book is handsomely printed in large type, and bound in boards, with illuminated covers.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in press "Creation or Evolution?" by George Ticknor Curtis; "On the Susquehanna," a novel, by Dr. W. A. Hammond; "Miss Churchill: a study," by Christian Reid; "Brazil, its Condition and Prospects," by General C. C. Andrews, formerly U. S. consul to Rio Janeiro; "The Rise and Early Constitution of Universities," with a survey of Mediæval education, by Prof. S. S. Laurie, in the International Education Series; "A Zealot in Tulle," a novel, by Mrs. Wildrick; "The Poison Problem, or, the cause and cure of in-temperance," by Dr. Felix L. Oswald; "The Master of Ceremonies," a novel, by George Manville Fenn.

Vm. S. Gottsberger has in press "The Martyr of Golgotha," by Enrique Perez Escrich, from the Spanish by Adèle Josephine Godoy, in two volumes; "The Bride of the Nile," a romance by Georg Ebers, from the German by Clara Bell; "Leon Roch," a romance by B. Perez Galdos, from the Spanish by Clara Bell; "La Baigneuse de Brousse," by Leila-Hanoum, translated by Gen. R. E. Colston; "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," by Octave Feuillet, a new translation by J. Henry Hager; "Tales of Hellas," by P. Mariager, from the Danish by Mary J. Saf-ford; "The Invalid's Own Book," a collection of recipes from various books and various countries, by the Honorable Lady Cust; "The Cossacks," a tale of the Caucasus in 1852, by Léon Tolstol, translated from the Russian by Eugene Schuyler; 'The Story of Jewad," a romance by 'Ali 'Aziz Efendi, the Cretan, translated from the Turkish by E. J. W. Gibb; and a new and revised edition of Poems, by Rose Terry Cooke.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

GENERAL LEW WALLACE'S "Ben Hur" is soon to be published in German, having been translated by a Catholic priest living at Lafayette, Ind., General Wallace's home.

A NEW work by Mr. Edward King, the wellknown American journalist, will soon appear simultaneously in England and the United States, so that the copyright in both may be secured. It will be entitled "A Venetian Lover," and will be a modern romance told in blank verse and interspersed with songs and ballads.

THE report that a London newspaper was to raise funds for Walt Whitman and that the old poet was poor caused that gentleman to say to a representative of the Associated Press: "I have received many tokens from English admirers and a number of substantial gifts, and would gratefully accept more, but I am not so poor as some people think I am. The one thing that annoys me most is the talk of the papers, which are continually printing exaggerated reports of my alleged financial straits. Say for me all these stories are untrue."

Blart, Lucien. The Aztecs; their history, manners, and customs; from the French; authorized translation by J. L. Garner. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887 [1886.] 4-343 p. O. cl.,

McClurg & Co., 1887 [1886.] 4-343 p. O. cl., $2.

The author of this work ranks as the best living authority on the subject of the Aztecs. He is a distinguished French scientist, who spent twenty-five years in Mexico, and to his own studies has added the testimony of all available authorities—those who saw Mexico in its splendor, as well as the more modern writers who have treated that interesting and romantic region. The book thus presents the results of all investigations to the present day. Although of great value to scholars who have specially studied the subject, the work is more especially intended for the general reader, imperfectly acquainted with the history and character of the Aztecs. To this end it is written in an easy and attractive style.

A work giving evidence of long researches and investi-gations. It is concise and to the point in every instance, and possesses, the author hopes, "the merit of authen-ticity and reliability." The author makes clear, and establishes beyond controversy, it appears to us, many facts heretofore vague and obscure in the early history of facts heretofore vague and obscure in the early history of St. Louis. He presents the facts in all cases as he found them derived from the original official Spanish and Presch documents, most of them translated by himself, some of them yet in the archives, and others placed into his hands by descendants of the original participants therein. Some of the most interesting portions of the volume are those relating to the treaty of the purchase of Louisians by the United States from France, in 1803, and the transfer. An appendix gives brief notices of some of the most prominent of the early families of St. Louis, particularly of those whose names have been continued through said descendants to the present time. The publishers deserve special mention for the sumptuous book they have smade of this work. The mechanical part reflects as creditably upon them as does the literary part upon the author. The edition is limited to 100 copies.

The heroine is not the majestic queen who found the infant Moses in the bulrushes of the Nile, but a later princess, who is referred to but once in the Old Testament, as the wife of Mered, an Israelite. The story aims very successfully to give a picture of human life as it existed in Old Egypt thirty-three centuries ago. The manner and customs prevailing at the time, the style of dress, the tone of thought, the religious sentiments of the people, both high and low, both Egyptian and Hebrew, are depicted with much care. The characters are largely fictitious, a few however, being historical. few, however, being historical.

Written expressly for use in class-room instruction, the author being assistant professor of philosophy in Michigan University. He aimed in preparing his book "to avoid all material not strictly psychological, and to reflect the investigations of scientific specialists in this branch." He has also endeavored to arrange the material in such a way as "to lead naturally and easily to the problems which the student will meet in his further studies, to suggest the principles along which they shall find their solutions, and above all to develop the philosophic spirit." An excellent feature is found in the notes at the end of the chapters, wherein is given the whole literature of that special part of the subject, for reference or further study on the part of the pupil.

A strange story of shipwreck and adventure opening in the White Mountains near the Franconia Notch, shifting to Rome, Italy, and returning again to this country; the concluding scenes taking place in New York city and in the mountains. The "amber star" is the means of finding the mother of a little girl, who has numerous vicissitudes after being separated, through accident, from her mother, after arriving at New York on a foreign steamer. The child becomes the charge of an Italian organ-grinder, and suffers many hardships before she finds a happy, peaceful home near the Franconia village.

"'The splendid eloquence and heroic enthusiasm of Victor Hugo never found more noble and sustained expression than in this volume, says Mr. Swinburne. In glow and color, it is a kaleidoscope of brilliant images, a dazzling procession of swiftly-moving and ever-varying thoughts. For it is not as a portrayal of Shakespeare's life and character that this work attains its chief significance. The salient facts in the great dramatist's career are rapidly sketched and the chief phases of his genius touched with a master-hand. But the work is vastly broader and deeper than its title, which, as the author himself says in his preface, should more properly have been 'Concerning Shakespeare'. Shakespeare's name is but the text on which he builds his grand discourse, wherein he touches the profoundest problems of life and art, the mission and responsibilities of genius and the part it must play in the advancement and elevation of the race."—CAicago Inter-Occan.

The story of a young American girl, who is left just as she is growing into womanhood to struggle alone with the world. As her youth has been an exceptional one in its education and influences, she has thoughts and theories different from the ordinary woman. She had gone through the slavery struggle, and aided her father in helping Southern slaves escape by the "underground railroad." She had ideas instilled into her regarding business and monopolies—the little town, Quincy, in which she had grown up, having been the centre of a manufacturing interest, owned entirely by a combination of capitalists. She tries various methods to earn her living—experimenting as a lecturer, reporter, editor, etc. perimenting as a lecturer, reporter, editor, etc.

Marriage and courtship play an important part in this story of fashionable life in Potsdam. The "matrimonial agent" is a society lady, who has a passion for pairing off her friends. The stories of the numerous victims—some functions of the pairing off the pairing off her friends. of whom are quite willingly led to the altar through their self-interest, are quite amusing.

THE TURN OF THE YEAR.

AFTER the hard work of the few days preceding Christmas, the too brief harvest of the book-trade, on which the profits of the year now so largely depend, the tired bookseller is glad enough that "Christmas is come," at last. This year, he will probably be able to eat his Christmas dinner with more comfort-with more sauce to his pudding, to put it metaphorically-than for three or four years past, if the results in New York and other cities give a fair index to the general condition of trade. The bookseller needed that comfort-he has not had a happy time for some years past.

All the same, though it has been the general condition of trade and the special condition of the book-trade which have discouraged him, there has been and is some reason to believe that the bookseller himself, the individual retailer, has permitted his discouragement to minimize his work and his trade. He has had a hard fight to fight, and sometimes he has been a little too much inclined to give up the fight—to let the drygoods counters and the bazars and the cheap Johns generally take away his trade without putting forth the extra efforts necessary to hold one's own in any business in these days of competition. This office is a sort of complaint-box into which the grievances of the trade are dropped-and we are glad always to have this kind of evidence as to the current of trade feel-But a considerable proportion of these complaints are based upon grievances within the remedy of the dealers themselves, or prove, on analysis, to be exceptions entered against the general drift of all trade, which are useless and not very satisfying.

There is reason to look forward with 1887 to a somewhat bettered condition of general trade, which is always reflected into the book-trade We wish to suggest, at the turn of the year, that the book-trade should stand ready, by a renewal of enterprise in the business of retailing, to make the best of this condition of things. There are many evils of the trade which can only be remedied from the top-by the publishers; there are others which can be remedied, profitably, by more vigorous effort of the retail trade throughout the country.

A LETTER printed elsewhere from a well-known member of the Boston trade adds another to the causes of complaint which the book-trade already have against the rulings of the Treasury Department. The Secretary of the Treasury has recently made it clear that the two terms used in the existing tariff, speaking of "actual cost" and of " market value," refer to quite different conditions of exportation. Actual cost is to be the criterion where an actual purchase has been made; market value is to be the criterion where goods are not actually sold for export, but are consigned or shipped to American owners or agents of foreign factories. Whatever difficulty there may be in the case of books imported in editions, it would seem that there can be no question in the case of single copies imported through the mail, where a specific price was paid by the importer, and especially where his statement to that effect can be verified by the quotation of a sales catalogue.

IT may be said that rectification of such small errors as these involves immense trouble on the part of the Government-but this is one of the difficulties of administration which any Government must face. There seems to be absolutely no ground for the Government to stand upon in this instance, and the enforcement or mis-enforcement of details of the law such as these, may work a very grievous wrong upon the individual citizen. We sincerely hope to see the administration of the Treasury department acting in a more liberal spirit, and we trust that the trade will not cease to protest when it is wronged in any such matters.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE DUTY ON BOOKS BY MAIL.

Boston, Dec. 17, 1886.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly:

A RECENT experience with Custom-House officials may interest those of your readers who have occasion to import books by mail.

I received from an old and reputable Canadian firm, a catalogue of second-hand law-books, a few of which I ordered by mail. They were duly sent, with the net value clearly and accurately marked on the outside of each package.

At the Buffalo Custom-House, where they crossed the frontier, these marked values were disregarded, and the books were appraised at more than twice their cost value, and forwarded to the Boston Post-Office to be delivered to me on payment of duty assessed under this excessive appraisal.

As the law directs the appraisal of imported goods at "the true and actual value and wholesale price," at the place of shipment, I supposed that any officer of the law would be not only willing, but anxious, to rectify such an error, upon presentation of proper proofs; and I therefore wrote at once to the Collector of the Port of Buffalo, stating the facts, and enclosing my invoice, and also a copy of the printed catalogue from which I had ordered the books. His reply ran as follows:

Buffalo, Oct. 14, 1886.

Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of the rath inst., I would state that the value of articles arriving in the United States by mail, on which duty is assessed, is fixed by appraisement. The officer who examined your books is of the opinion that the proper value was found in that instance. It is therefore thought best not to amend the value as previously stated to the postmaster in your city.

Very truly,

A. D. Bissell, Collector.

That is, when the appraiser, who is acting under a law directing him to ascertain "the true and actual value and wholesale price" of merchandise, has disregarded the plain evidence presented to him, and has guessed at the value, his guess becomes law, and overrides all proofs that may afterwards be produced!

Not feeling satisfied with this decision, I appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who at first evaded my appeal by stating that I had not complied with the necessary forms. On a showing that all the forms prescribed by law had been complied with, so far as lay in my power, a final reply was received, from which I quote:

"You are informed that, if it is impracticable for the importer, residing at a distance from the post-office where the appraisement was made, to avail himself of the provision of Section 990 R. S., which requires notice of dissatisfaction to be given 'forthwith' after appraisement, the importers, in such cases, must accept the original appraisement as food the section of th the importers, in such cases, must accept the original ap-praisement as final, there being no special remedy pro-vided by law or regulation to meet those cases. Nor is a special remedy deemed necessary, even if it were legally or practically possible, since those parties who are un-willing to take the risk of an erronous appraisement, are free to import their books through the usual channels of trade, which were alone in the contemplation of the law relating to reappraisement.

"Respectfully yours,

"C. S. FAIRCHILD, Assistant Secretary."

Not content with deciding that justice cannot be asked by an importer when the Custom-House officials have violated the law, the Secretary coolly states that no remedy is deemed necessary, and advises booksellers to use the "regular channels of trade" for importing books. Is not the mail the regular, and practically the only channel for the importation of single books, or books in small parcels? And are citizens to be subject, without remedy, to the imputation of undervaluation, and to the exaction of excessive and illegal duties, at the whim of any appraiser whose ignorance, misinformation, carelessness, or malice may lead him to appraise importations at twice or ten times or a hundred times their value? Is this either law, or justice, or common-sense?

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT IN FRANCE.

From the [London] Publishers' Circular.

AT the meeting of the Administrative Council of the Cercle de la Librairie at Paris, held ce November 19, it was reported that the Syndicate of Literary and Artistic Property had under its consideration the absence of a Literary and Artistic Convention between the United States and France, and at its sitting of the 4th ult. discussed the steps to be taken in order to remedy such as untoward situation.

M. Goblet, Minister of Education and Fine Arts, and M. de Freycinet, the Prime Minister, have laid before the French Senate a Copyright Bill, necessitated by the adhesion of France to the Berne Convention, relative to the formation of an International Union for the protection of literary and artistic works. The preamble of the bill contains some interesting details on the progress of copyright law in France.

It was the Emperor Napoleon III. who first granted to foreign authors equal rights of property in their productions as those which had hitherto been enjoyed by French authors only. The decree granting these rights was publish on March 28, 1852, but it was long before French authors were able to claim similar right abroad. It was only by a succession of coaves tions made from time to time with foreign posers that subsequent administrations have been able to obtain for French authors and artists that reciprocity to which they had so good a claim. From 1852 to 1884 treaties of this nature have been concluded with twelve different countries, and continue in full vigor, with one exceptionthis is the convention with Russia, which has been denounced by the Russia Government, and will terminate on July 14, 1887.

The object of the bill just introduced, which consists of only one clause, authorizing the President of the French Republic to ratify and execute the Berne Convention, unifies these twelve literary conventions, between which there are several divergencies of form and procedure. It is therefore to the Convention itself we must turn if we wish for information on the changes which will be brought about in the law of international copyright by its adoption.

The first article declares the formation of the Session of States which have signed the Conver-These States, including the English and French colonies, have a total population of about 450,000,000.

The second article grants to authors national rights, without, however, guaranteeing a protection of longer duration than that which is accorded in the author's own country or in that where his work is published. This protection will in future be obtained without any other formalities than those which must be complied with in the author's own country, or where the book has first been published.

The formalities of declaration, registration, of depositing a copy of the book within a fixed period in foreign countries in order to guard the author's rights, will no longer be enforced.

The author's right is recognized, unless the contrary be proved by the sole fact of his name appearing on the title-page of the book. Notwithstanding this, however, courts of justice may, in case of necessity, demand the production of a certificate proving that the formalities necessary in the country where the book was first published have been complied with.

s third article permits publishers to claim wantages of the Convention for the works thors whose nation shall not have joined the a. This seems a very liberal article, and ather of a nature to confirm those governs which have not yet assented to the principle of the Convention in their indifference to the rights of those of whom it may confidently serted that their brain-work contributes at as much to the well-being of any country set the work of other people's hands; for we it on the very higeest authority that "man not live by bread alone."

mace will not permit to dwell longer on this interesting subject, which has already been red to more than once in these pages. We restand that when the British Parliament ts, the Convention now before the French mbers will be brought before our legislators. 'e are indebted to the Journal de l'Imprimerie la Librairie for our information respecting attitude of the French Government with rest to this important question.

FECT OF THE USE OF WHITE PAPER UPON THE EYES.

From the Scientific American.

MANY believe the eyesight is impaired by the of white instead of colored, or at least tinted, ser, and at times the subject comes up for dission. So far as we have seen, no positive evice has yet been secured to prove the injurious set of white paper on the eyes, and some recent pairies lead us to doubt if such evidence is to had.

A company engaged in the sale of tinted paper ently urged us to say a word against the use white paper for "billing, letter-heads, records," ..., for that it does more to keep the oculist and tician busy than any other cause. Further mg they say: "There is no doubt that, in a vyears, tinted paper will be used for the purses above named [billing, letter-heads, records, ...], and the white paper now used will be an erbit on the rule. In the interests of the riks and bookkeepers, we appeal to you," etc. Dr. St. John Roosa, one of the best authorities the eye hereabout, said, when his attention is called to this: "I have never yet noticed y special ill effects upon the eye from the use white paper. I have treated many book-keeps and others who work with the pen, and do it remember to have heard any complaints ainst white paper, nor any commendations for ited paper. My investigations show me that a incipal injury to the eye comes from improper rangement of the light when writing."

He says he does not believe that people who is tinted paper for writing are freer from eye oubles than those who use white. As for him-lif, he has used both, first one and then the her, hoping to be able to note the different fects upon the eyes. None, however, were observed. Dr. Roosa might have gone a step farier and said that instances could be cited where lose accustomed to white paper having suddenly langed and adopted that with a decided tint, sund a mal-influence exerted on the eye, and ere compelled to go back to white paper.

It is well known that using the eyes too much r in bad lights will serve to hasten the development of myopia, presbyopia, strabismus, and antonism where there is hereditary inclination; but there is no record of a case, so say the authorities, where the use of white paper hastened or the use of tinted paper retarded such development. It is not likely, therefore, that tinted paper will replace white in the business transactions of the future.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLICATION Co., Phila., has made arrangements for the exclusive control of the American issue of The Scottish Review, which will, in its general tone and character, cover much of the ground lately occupied by the British Quarterly, which was discontinued with the number for April, 1886. The Scottish Review has been in existence four years, and has won for itself a recognized position as an independent organ for the expression for literary and public opinion. It is the only Scottish quarterly, and considerable space is therefore regularly devoted to peculiarly Scottish questions.

EDWARD ATKINSON, the eminent statistician and political economist, has begun in the Century a series of timely papers. One on the Food Question is published in the December number. In the January and February numbers he will publish two articles on "The Relative Strength and Weakness of Nations." They are said to contain the most valuable and suggestive study of the material growth of the country yet made by any single writer. Mr. Atkinson will treat in other papers of "Progress from Poverty," "The Margin of Profit," "Henry George's System of Land Taxation," etc.

L. K. STROUSE & Co., N. Y., will commence on the first of January next, the publication of The Railway and Corporation Law Journal. is proposed to publish, from week to week, all the railway and corporation cases decided by the courts of last resort both in this country and in England, printing in full all the decisions that involve questions of general interest or points of novelty, and giving full abstracts of those which merely reiterate settled principles, or turn upon questions of fact, or interpret local statutes. In this way it is calculated that the whole body of current case law concerning railway, banking, insurance, commercial, manufacturing, and municipal corporations can be furnished to the profession within the limits of two portly royal octavovolumes annually. The subscription price has been fixed at $10.

In January, 1887, will be published from the office of Science the first number of a new monthly magazine entitled The Swiss Cross. This periodical will be devoted to spreading among the meonle a love and knowledge of nature. The people a love and knowledge of nature. existence of a large class of persons deeply interested in the study of nature is proven by the Agassiz Association, which, made up of earnest workers of all ages united for the purpose of original investigation, has attained a membership of many thousands, and is rapidly growing. The connection between the Agassiz Association and the St. Nicholus Magazine having been dissolved by mutual and friendly agreement, The Swiss Cross will be hereafter the official organ of the Agassiz Association, and will be edited by its President, Mr. Harlan H. Ballard. Though of a scientific nature, The Swiss Cross will be popular in style, and will number among its contributors many of the best writers.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN B. ALDEN, N. Y., gives notice of his withdrawal from the wholesale book-trade, proposing hereafter to sell at retail only.

KARL KRON'S "Ten Thousand Miles on a Bicycle" will be ready for mailing in January. His address is University Building, New York, or Station D.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. announce that the sixth thousand each of Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton's "Poor Boys Who Became Famous," and "Girls Who Became Famous," is now on press.

C. E. HOPKINS, who has resigned his position with Liebenroth, Von Auw & Co., will on January I take charge of a department with George Borgfeldt & Co., 425 and 427 Broome Street.

THE POPE MANUFACTURING Co., of Boston, have issued another Columbia Bicycle Calendar, with a neat mount printed in several colors. The selections relate, of course, to such matters as are exclusively of interest to "wheelmen."

CHARLES G. COLLINS, for many years manager of the book department of the American News Co., we learn, has taken a position with Henry J. Johnson, who is the manager of the American branch of Charles Goodall & Son, the well-known manufacturing stationers of London, England.

R. Bentley & Son have in press the second volume of the late Prof. Max Duncker's "History of Greece," translated by Dr. Evelyn Abbott and Miss S. F. Alleyne. It carries the story from the death of Cimon to the death of Pericles, beyond which the author did not live to continue it.

G. GROTE, Berlin, has published an interesting volume on America, by Ernest O. Hopp, entitled "Bundesstaat und Bundeskrieg, mit einem Abriss der colonialgeschichte als Einleitung." The volume forms part of a series entitled Allgemeine Geschichte in Einzeldarstellungen, edited by the eminent historian, Prof. Wilhelm Oncken.

The descriptive portions of the sumptuous Book of the Tile Club" introduce mysterious figures, the "Puritan," the "Owl," the "Bishop," the "Griffin," the "Eagle," "Sirius," the "Pagan," etc., but these nicknames veil persons who are everywhere recognized as leading American artists, who are admirably represented in this work by phototypes of their own most characteristic pictures.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish next spring a valuable book for teachers, entitled "Suggestive Lessons in Language and Reading," by Anna B. Badlam, of the Rice Training-School, Boston, Mass. These lessons are plain and practical, being a transcript of work that has been successfully done in the school-room. They are intended for children from five to eight years of age, the plan being so elastic that it may be used in any of the primary grades.

THE CAXTON BOOK CONCERN, N. Y., have in press a work by Chief of Police George W. Walling, for 38 years connected with the police of New York, and who has filled every grade, from patrolman to chief. It is announced that the author "will give the inside workings of many of the great criminal cases of the last generation, and proposes to expose the corruption existing in the politico-judicial and police departments of New York City." The work will be profusely illustrated from the Rogues' Gallery, and will be sold by subscription.

THE following volumes will be added im diately to Bohn's Library: "Heine's Im Sketches," containing the Tour in the Hart from antic School, etc., translated by Mr. F. Suz. "Goethe's Correspondence with Zeher," has lated and edited by Mr. A. D. Coleridge: has lated and edited by Mr. A. D. Coleridge: has Smith's "Wealth of Nations," printed from the fort Bax, in two volumes; and Ranke's "His tory of the Latin and Teutonic Nations," man lated by Mr. P. A. Ashworth.

E. I. HORSMAN, N. Y., is sole agent for me teresting game recently copyrighted by McGL Delany, of Philadelphia. It is entitled "On National Ball Game," and conforms in every me ticular to the professional game, as played with League and Association rules. It is played with two dice and nine counters. Combination of the throw made, indicating the play, i.e., two me spots is a 2 Base Hit; three and four spots is at First Base, etc. Rules and Umpire List morphanying each game fully explain all the particulating Home Run, Strikes, Double Plan, and all other points. Two to eighteen persons all other points. Two to eighteen persons all play, forming two sides or clubs of equal number each side playing nine innings. The game is printed in six colors, on a tough cardboard first inches). It retails for fifty cents.

ELLIS & SCRUTTON, London, will publish # once, in two ample volumes, the collected citize of the works of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, with was announced some time ago. The man one tents of it are the two poetic volumes (mine " Poems" and "Ballads and Sonnets") which Resetti issued during his lifetime, along with its volume of translations named "Dante and is Circle," etc. The original poems are rearranged. so far as was practicable and convenient, in order of date. Eight minor poems, which appeared is print while Rossetti was alive, but which wer not included in his volumes, are added; also twenty-two others (besides some "versides and fragments"), of which the great majority have never yet seen the light. All the proce writing of Rossetti, moderate enough in bulk, are also printed. Mr. W. M. Rossetti supplies a preist (chiefly biographical), and a moderate number of notes at the end of the respective volumes."

SMITH, ELDER & Co. will publish early near year an important work, to be entitled "In Reign of Queen Victoria: a Survey of Fin Years of Progress," which will deal in a series of chapters with the various departments of Engist national life. The editor, who will write seven of the chapters, is Mr. Humphry Ward, who is secured the aid of a number of writers of the and authority on their different subjects. The principal chapters have been assigned as follows. The Army, Lord Wolseley; The Navy, Lord Brassey; The Administration of the Law, Lord Justice Bowen; The Civil Service. Sir R. Welby; The Development of the Constitution. Sir William Anson; National Finance, Mr. Leonard Courtney; India, Sir H. S. Maine; Ireland, Sir R.
